To Mr. J.C. Herbert, we express our appreciation for 26 years of immeasurable dedication to our school. This book and its story are a direct result of his ambitions and for this reason, we dedicate VOLT '68-'69 to him. Page sixteen stands as a small tribute to a highly honoured friendship.

The Volt

XXIII Edition

We moved down endless halls; weight of countless books or work-worn tools pulled sharply at the base of skulls. Paychecks and report cards said we carried well our tools and knew their functions well; had added to our minds.

Yet we were not just minds that drifted dutifully room to room. We were bodies that carried minds along and souls that steered them both through endless halls of education.

It was 1968 and 1969, and we were students and we were staff; body, mind, and soul of I.D.C.I.

"The saddest words that one can say
It always has been done this way."

In order to give you a better understanding of this book and its contents, we wish to take this opportunity to explain our aims and the reasoning behind those aims. Much to our dismay, you will find that the Volt is very much the same, although we feel we have at least approached our goal.

While examining other yearbooks, Volts included, we discovered one common characteristic. Words were being employed to create an image and describe details of school life which might never have been experienced by previous high school students. We found that many of these words could be multiplied, and still be neatly arranged into one small space. We recalled the old cliche, "one picture says a thousand words," and forged ahead. We wanted students to be able to view things as they would remember them. However, when getting down to the real "nitty-gritty" of constructing the book, we found that certain ideas were better expressed with words. Messages, acknowledgements, and even some activities demand verbal expression. Therefore, we attempted to combine these two modes of expression into one.

Instead of thrusting our story upon you, we wish to draw you into our story. We have attempted to dispense with formality and substitute familiarity. We have tried to elevate certain people to their proper positions, while at the same time allowing you to identify with them. Although our success is severely limited and our efforts have left us weary, we still sense a breath of progress.

Like all yearbook staffs, we met many insurmountable obstacles. Traditions, finances, and a lack of ample facilities and equipment are only a few. However, the greatest hazard of them all was APATHY. It seemed like a disease, infecting students and the teaching and administrative staffs. Many organizations in the school constantly searched for a cure, all the time wondering if such a thing existed. In a school the size of I. D. C. I., student involvement is a must.

At long last our task is completed. The small band of researchers, photographers, secretaries, and artists which constitute the Volt Staff show no signs of regret. These past months have left them exhausted and frustrated. But they are the ones who stand to gain from this book, for what they see in its pages, no man will ever express.

Throughout the past months, we have learned not to judge groups by their quantity, but rather by the quality of their members. We have watched our staff dwindle tc a handful of people, but their determination cannot be equalled by any number. It is only because of them that this book exists. We congratulate those INVOLVED in publishing VOLT '68-'69.

Co-Editors:

Doug Moulton
&
Heather Wilson.

Mr. R.A. Joyce

Although this yearbook will be enjoyed when you read it first and relive the events of this year, this edition of the Volt will become more cherished as the years pass by. The humour of funny incidents will be heightened by nostalgia, victories will become more heroic and the sad occasions will become more poignant.

The remembrance of people will be cherished even more as pictures join events and people again. My hope is that you will remember people from working them in activities or projects where you learned to co-operate to your mutual benefit. I hope that you will remember your years at I. D. C. I. as happy years when you were involved in a dynamic experience and that your satisfaction was derived primarily from your role as a participator rather than your role as a spectator. My wish too, is that you will have developed a new appreciation of freedom and that you will have learned that true freedom is based on order and responsibility.

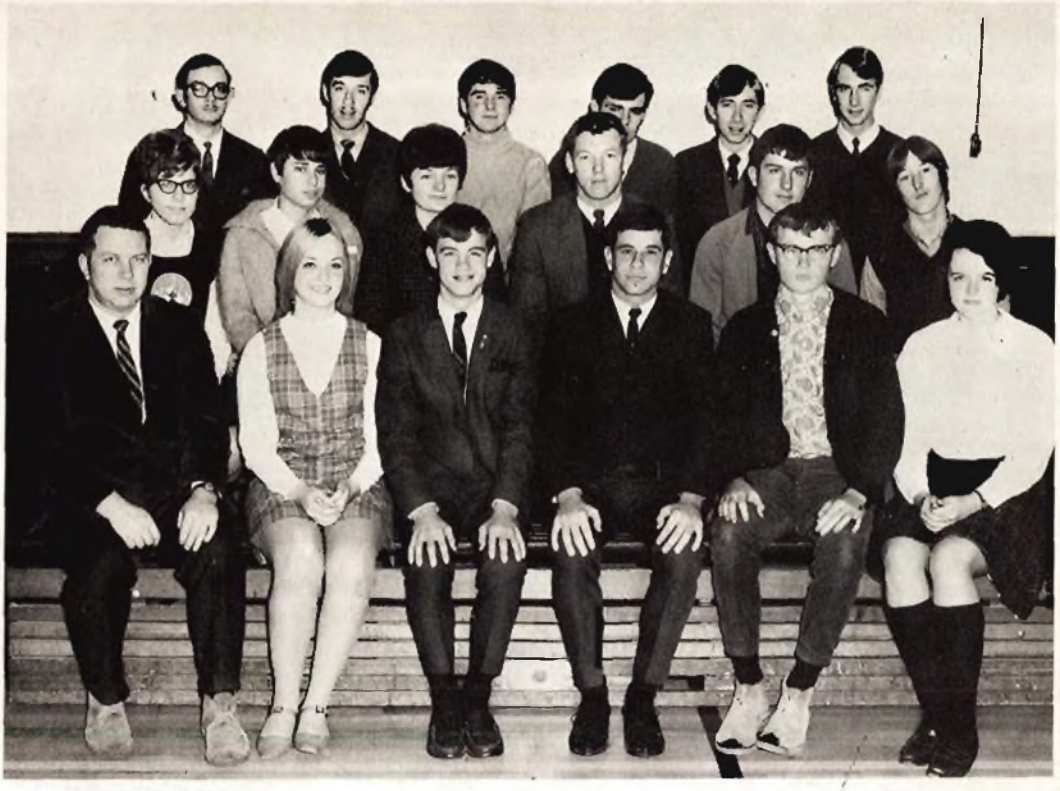

Finally, I congratulate the editors of the Volt for completeng a demanding task and thank them for their service ot the school.

R. A. Joyce,
Principal.

On behalf of the students of I. D. C. I., the Volt Staff wishes to welcome Mr. Joyce to our school as its new Principal. We would also like to extend our appreciation to him for his services to the school and community and offer our best wishes for the future.

Students' Council Executive

In the past few years, the world has been left in awe over the wonders and achievements it has seen.

New names and new ideas have risen and left their mark on society in such outstanding fields as medicine, music, literature and space travel.

Much has been learned, but much is left for the future. It is the students of today who will be the history of tomorrow. I. D. C. I. is laying the corner-stones for our individual goals. It will be up to us to decide how this structure is completed.

David Garratt,
President of Students' Council.

Compliments of
INGERSOLL DISTRICT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Mr. W.C. Wilson

The year 1968-69 is progressing as another successful one in the history of I. D. C. I.

In the fall at Commencement Exercises, fifty-nine students received Secondary School Honour Graduation Diplomas, while seven received Matriculation Certificates from the University of Guelph. This group included nine Ontario Scholars. One hundred and forty students obtained Secondary School Graduation Diplomas (Grade XII) while twenty-seven qualified for Certificates of Training (Two Year Course).

The athletic record for the fall season was an excellent one, with the Senior Football Team capturing the Tri-County Championship. The Winter program of basketball, wrestling, curling and gymnastics is also having a successful season. Social and drama activities have also contributed significantly to the school year.

This year has seen the Ingersoll District Collegiate Institute become a unit of a larger organization administered by the Oxford County Board of Education under the new educational plan for the Province of Ontario. This should provide greater educational opportunities in various fields.

I should like to commend the Staff Advisors, Editors and all members of the Volt Staff for their untiring efforts in producing the Volt.

W. C. WILSON,
Vice-Principal.

Compliments of
ASTRO ELECTRONICS

Mr. G.C. Ormston

To the graduating classes, I extend my heartiest congratulations and best wishes for your future endeavors.

Graduation is an end and a beginning. For some, it is an end of their formal education, and yet it is the beginning of a new life in the world outside of school. It should be borne in mind that education is, and must be, a continuing process for the rest of your life; however, after graduation, for many this must be a self-educating process. How well you apply yourselves to your own education will determine how much you will get out of life and leisure time.

To those fortunate students in the Collegiate I also offer my best wishes. You are indeed fortunate to be in school at this point in time, for great changes are in the making in the education system of our Province, and even greater changes are forecast for the not too distant future. You will, inevitably, benefit from these changes which are being, and will be incorporated. New courses and new freedom to experiment, such as the non-graded school, where all students can progress at their own rate, enabling a student to be involved for example with a first year Math Course, a second year History course and a third year English course in the same school year. Such a flexibility should bring more enjoyment and less frustration to the individual student in the future. Increased library facilities for research and a student oriented curriculum will surely help to make your continuing educational process a more enjoyable and complete experience.

To all graduates of Ingersoll District Collegiate, past, present and future, may you have all the success you desire.

G. C. Ormston,
Vice-Principal, Administration.

Mr. G.B. Henry

1969 promises to be a year of many challenges in education, as it will be in the majority of fields of endeavour.

1968 was an exciting year for I. D. C. I. in academics and athletics. School spirit, which is difficult to define, exploded beyond the boundaries of the school and permeated the whole community. The Ingersoll district was thrilled with the Girls' Basketball Championship and the Senior Boys' Football squad which followed with an outstanding victory. The involvement of students in the Cheese and Wine Festival assisted immeasurably in making this event such a successful one.

In September 1968 a new era commenced at the school with the appointment of Mr. Joyce as Principal to take up the responsibilities so ably handled by his predecessor, Mr. J. C. Herbert. We have been much impressed with Mr. Joyce and look forward to an even greater involvement of the school in community life under his jurisdiction.

1969 also saw the change in administration from a local board to the Oxford County Board of Education. This change of administration will be watched carefully by all interested in educational matters in Ingersoll and throughout Oxford County.

We are proud of the students, staff and our school building. Publication of the "Volt" is always eagerly awaited by not only students and staff, but also by all residents of the community and district who are interested in I. D. C. I.

THE KING OF CANDYLAND
Oh Henry!

On behalf of the Council and the Town of Ingersoll, I extend best wishes to each student as you proceed through the educational process and then to your chosen vocation.

Commencement

Friday, November 8, 1968

It's been a long time at I. D. C. I.
we've spent a good part of our lives here
we've learned a good part of ourselves we've found some kind of identity we've found people to help us and know us we've found a world that has given us something taught us to learn taught us to ask questions and to change the answers

if the words didn't fit quite right taught us square roots and sweatshirts and sonnets and bare feet taught us tomorrows taught us smiles and dreams and songs to make ourselves taught us football and sweat and handshakes and failures

It's been a long time at I. D. C. I.
a lot of awareness has begun here
a lot of education has happened here

we don't know everything we do know that we will never know everything but we've found a lot of words to begin with and we've found that a lot of things are worth knowing

SOME PEOPLE HAVE A DISTORTED VIEW OF SCHOOL.

This page has been set aside in order that our loyal and dependable Photography staff could experiment. Determination alone has produced the unusual effects seen here, for the staff has been hampered by a lack of experience, funds and facilities.

Sports

Our muscles taut and minds alert We played;
Played well at I.D.C.I.;
Brought pride to bodies' swelling soul.

Boys' Athletic Association

The Boys' Athletic Association meets every month to organize all House-League events including Basketball, Soccer, Volleyball, Track meets and Cross-Country meets.

B. A. A. sponsored the Student-Teacher hockey game and the Football dance featuring the "Village Guild".

Each House elects a captain for each group in the Physical Education classes from grades Nine through Twelve. From this, Senior and Junior Captains and Co-Captains are elected for each House. The main Executive is then formed from the Senior Captains.

A special thanks to the staff advisors W. Martin and D. Harris.

FRONT ROW: Don Riddolls, Chris Reade.
SECOND ROW: W. Martin, Dick Hawkins.

Girls' Athletic Association

The purpose of the G. A. A. is to organize a program in which the students of the fairer sex can participate. Through this participation we believe that we are encouraging school spirit and enthusiasm. We feel that this has been accomplished throughout the 1968-1969 school year.

The year started off with the selling of ribbons, pennants, buttons, and hot chocolate at football games. Interform sports have been organized along a form basis and went very well. A dance featuring the "Brass Union" from Burlington was sponsored jointly by the G. A. S. and the Students' Council. Teacher-Student games and Athletic Night are on the agenda.

Through a well balanced program of Athletics, Social and Academic activities, a school becomes a more interesting place to spend part of your life. In return, you, the participant, have fun and become a well-rounded and responsible student.

Curling Club

Under the direction of Mr. W. Martin, the Curling Club has completed another successful and enjoyable season.

The season took in three draws. One consisted of three girls' teams and six boys' teams, while another, proceding simultaneously, had eight mixed teams in competition. Upon completion of these draws, another draw made up of six mixed teams and three teams of boys with limited experience was organized.

This year the Girls failed to place in Tri- County and therefore were not eligible for W.O.S.S.A. play.

The Boys placed third in Tri- County, but due to a foul against the second place team, they were able to compete in W.O.S.S.A., held at our own Club. The team, consisting of Dave Garratt- skip, Brian Travis- vice, John Masters- second, and Doug Kragh- lead, registered victories of 18-3 and 13-2 before going down to a defeat of 7-3 at the hands of Parkside of St. Thomas in the finals.

Many thanks to Mr. Martin, Mr. Gardham and Mr. Rachich for excellent assistance and instruction throughout the season.

Stage Crew

The Stage Crew consists of 16 members and has high hopes of putting on at least one programme this year without a flaw. We have the job of lighting and sound for assemblies, the At-Home, the Blue and White as well as other special presentations. We are responsible for all behind-the-scenes technical aspects of staging such programmes. Many thanks go to Mr. Kelly for his great help to our organization.

D.C.R.A. Team

The D.C.R.A. team would like to extend appreciation to Mr. Wilson for organizing competition shoots in such places as Hamilton and Chatham. We would also like to thank Mr. Lord and Mr. Martin for supervising the members of the D.C.R.A. TEAM. Our appreciation is also shown for the other teachers who have supervised on the shooting range, enabling us to increase our skill.

Home Economics Club

Although only in its second year, this club has had a successful one. Committee Chairmen are elected to represent the ideas and opinions of girls from all grades.

Their meetings have included demonstrations in party foods, discussions on school dress, and a hairdressing demonstration. The Club has hopes of organizing another successful fashion show in June. Many thanks to those who have made the club a success, and to Mrs. Hiscocks and Miss Bodkin for their superior guidance and direction.

Red Cross Youth Organization

The Red Cross Society includes, in its membership, every student at I.D.C.I. Elected representatives from every class meet frequently to discuss plans for the year's program of the Red Cross.

We sponsor activities such as "The Sadie Hawkins Dance" in October.

The proceeds from our various activities are used in supporting numerous community Service Activities as well as sending delegates to seminars and the annual Study Centre at Belleville in June.

We would like to thank all our sponsors who help to make Red Cross possible and hope that we may count on your future support. Your Red Cross is what YOU make it!

We were very glad to see so many new students turn out and take part in processing, shelving, and cataloguing books. In addition, girls took turns working at the desk during lunch hours and activity periods. I'd like to take this opportunity to extend a sincere thanks to all those in the club for all their time and help.

"Day Seven"

In the course of the past few years, certain "elements" of I. D. C. I. have felt that the 1150 students attending these hallowed halls of learning, were not truly aware of what was happening in other parts of the school, let alone in the broad field of education.

Consequently, the fall of 1968 saw the birth of the Collegiate's first newspaper, DAY SEVEN. As a formal "newspaper", Day Seven only met three publication deadlines before the editors decided that the purpose of providing points of view had been lost in a mountain of trivia. A transformation to a magazine format was decided upon and lo and behold, it emerged as an infrequent creation called "CHEAP THRILLS".

The experience of organizing such literary efforts was invaluable as was the attempt to provide responsible ideas and comments about education from the student point of view.

Much credit is due to the hard-working, yet fun-crowd of people who burned midnight oil on several occasions to bring forth the first, but hopefully not the last, literary arena (in which) students and staff might joust.

Craft Club

This is the first year for this club. It is a club for girls who are interested in crafts and making older citizens of our community happy. The money is raised by the girls themselves. They sold popcorn at a football game, and took over the tuck shop for a week to raise money. Also Mrs. Wilson was there to help and guide the girls with their crafts and meetings. A special thanks to her.

Choirs

The choirs met in activities and at noon hours, preparing numbers to be presented at the Variety Night of Ingersoll's Cheese and Wine Festival, and at Commencement. Carol singing and three musical numbers headlined the Choirs' participation in the Christmas Literary Programme. After the holidays, preparation began for the annual Blue and White Revue. An Operetta was presented, as well as other arrangements.

The Drama Club this year is one of I. D. C. I. 's largest organizations, with nearly ninety members.

The first term was spent reading plays, with an active make-up group meeting weekly.

The second term began with the choosing of the cast for the play "An Overpraised Season" presented at the Blue and White and at the Drama Festival in Simcoe, where it placed Second and brought awards of best actress and best actor to Bonnie Garland and Doug Gill.

After the mid-term, it is hoped that a three-act play might be presented at a Drama Night, and a two-act play be presented during an assembly.

Prefects

This year's Prefect System was forced into a very difficult situation. With the increase in student numbers our duties were increased such that in one day this school has at least fifteen prefects on duty and on activity days this number is increased to twenty-one. We have approximately sixty-five students on our staff and I might add these students are very capable and willing to do their jobs if the student body will co-operate. We are planning a few changes for the operation of the Prefect System in future years, thus hoping to iron out previous difficulties.

May Walley Essay

Katherina the Shrew

Katherina, although affectionately described by other characters as "stark mad", "intolerable curst and shrewd and forward", and "a wild-cat"; and by her own father as a "hilding of a devilish spirit", in reality suffers from an inferiortiy complex. She propagates the impression that she is a shrew to disguise her true emotions. The "taming" process that she undergoes is a gradual gaining of self-confidence which enables her to appear meek without inwardly feeling inferior, and thus to better govern her actions.

When we first encounter Katherina, she has bound her younger sister's hands and is attempting to intimidate her. She wishes to know which of Bianca's many suitors is favoured, but Bianca refuses to disclose her secret. Their father intervenes, in Bianca's favour, as usual, and Katherina's words, while they superficially indicate jealousy, also show her unsatisfied search for her father's love:

"What! will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day,
And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.
Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep
Till I can find occasion of revenge."
(Act II Sc. I, The Taming of the Shrew)

A true shrew would not weep over such an incident.

In another instance, when she breaks her lute over Hortensio's head and labels him with "vile terms" (Act II, Sc. I, T. T. o. T. S.), Katherina could again be deemed a shrew. However, Hortensio had censured her attempts to play the lute and thereby added to her feelings of inferiority. To dissemble her disappointment, she reacts with violence and places the blame on Hortensio--perhaps endeavouring to convince herself that she is not an inferior musician.

On her first encounter with Petruchio, Katherina is apparently angered. In reality, Petruchio, to whom her father has betrothed her without her consent humiliates and mocks her, even to the extent of swearing that she possesses a "Princely gait" when it is a known fact that she limps. She must prove, even to herself, that she is worthy of praise instead of derision. An angry outburst serves to disguise her insecurity. Here also, she is uncertain of her father's affection and cries:

"Call you me daughter? now, I promise you,
You have showed a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatic;
A mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack,
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
(Act III Sc. II, T. T. o. T. S.)

Petruchio's tardiness on their designated wedding day further humiliates and embarrasses Katherina. This time she cannot veil her feelings of shame and just prior to her tearful exist says:

"Now must the world point at poor Katherina,
And say, 'Lo! there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him to come and marry her."
(Act III Sc. II, T. T. o. T. S.)

When he eventually arrives, Petruchio's uncouth behavior during the wedding ceremony, and his desire to leave with her before the wedding feast, produce in Katherina deep feelings of shame and inferiortiy which cause her attempt to dominate Petruchio. When he deliberately misinterprets her words and replies, "Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee, Kate. I'll buckler thee against a million" (Act III Sc. II, T. T. o. T. S.) a change begins to come over Katherina. She wonders if perhaps Petruchio really loves her and in this thought feels more self-confident. She then departs with him quite peacefully.

Throughout the period separating Katherina's wedding from Bianca's, Katherina changes considerably. Despite Petruchio's strange behaviour, Katherina says, "He does it under name of perfect love," (Act III Sc. III, T. T. o. T. S.). She feels more confident because Petruchio shows such concern for her and is able to express her true emotions rather than concealing them beneath a shrewish mask. When Petruchio strikes his servant, the formerly self-centered Katherina cries, "Patience, I pray you; 't was a fault unwilling!" (Act IV Sc. I T. T. o. T. S.) Actually she is extremely concerned about Petruchio's love for her, and is prompted by her feelings of inferiority to test it.

The ultimate change in Katherina's character occurs on the joureny to Bianca's wedding. Petruchio, in order to determine if she is "tamed", calls the sun the "moon". At first, Katherina's disagrees vehemently, but suddenly, as the full realization of Petruchio's love finally dawns on her, she states, "Be it moon, or sun, or what you please. And if you please to call it a rush-candle, henceforth I vow it shall be for me." (Act IV Sc. V, T. T. o. T. S.). She later proves this vow to Petruchio by agreeing to address an old man as a "young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet," (Act IV, Sc. V, T. T. o. T. S.)

The ultimate illustration of Katharina's "taming", is her speech directed at other wives attending Bianca's wedding:

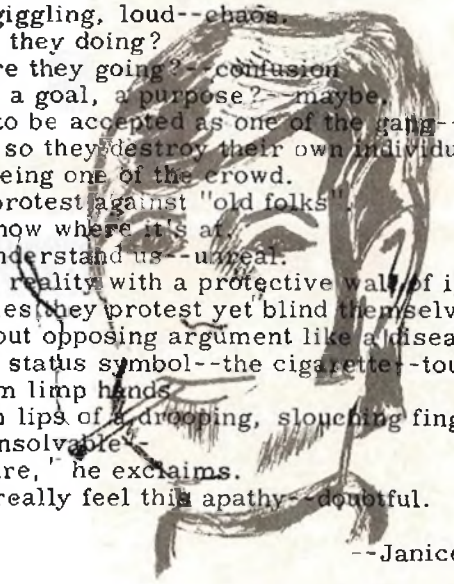

> Fie, fie! unknit that threatening unkind brow,
> And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
> Thy life, the keeper,
> Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,
> To painful labour both by sea and land...
> And for thy maintenance commits his body
> And when a woman is forward, peevish, sullen, sour,
> And not obedient to his honest will,
> What is she but a foul contending rebel,
> And gracelses traitor to her loving lord?..."
>
> (Act V, Sc. II, T. T. o. T. S.)

And so Katherina is no longer a shrew.

Katherina's actions at the outset of the play were governed by feelings of inferiority, for she was compelled to prove, both to herself and to others, that she was their equal. Later, Petruchio's love overcomes her complex, and Katherina is "tamed". Actually, however, she is tamed not by force as it appears, but by love. Love dispels the feelings of inferiority, and their departure is accompanied by the dispelling of the "shrew" in Katherina. Now, she is able to express her true emotions without a feeling of inferiority. Katherina has been tamed!

The "Difficult" Years

Havocking, giggling, loud--chaos.
What are they doing?
Where are they going?--confusion.
Do they have a goal, a purpose?--maybe.
They strive to be accepted as one of the gang--conformity.
But in doing so they destroy their own individuality and identity.
Security is being one of the crowd.
They fight, protest against "old folks".
They don't know where it's at.
They don't understand us--unreal.
They combat reality with a protective wall of ignorance--convenience.
With loud cries they protest yet blind themselves
Shutting out opposing argument like a disease.
The ultimate status symbol--the cigarette--tough
Dangling from limp hands
Hanging from lips of a drooping, slouching finger.
A Problem unsolvable--
I don't care," he exclaims.
Does he really feel this apathy--doubtful.

Love

And as we walked along the barren stretch of sand, we saw a lonely little girl. We stopped and asked her if she had seen our lost love, but she only looked at us questioningly, as if wondering at the complexities of the adult mind. I wanted to tell her that we were not adults; we were just playing at being mature. I wanted to join her game, but the stigmas attached to being old prevented me. Maybe, if I had stopped a while to play, I would have rediscovered the carefreeness of youth, and with it found our lost love. I had to keep going, searching for the love that I will never find again. I question the wind, Where did you take it, after I threw it to you? I ask the sea, where did you hide it, after I buried it in you? And beside me, you go on searching as well, asking the same questions, seeking the same answers. We know that we will never find it, but we will go on searching, because we wnat only to be left to ourselves, in our never-ending search for lost love.

Concerned

Wake up ye people,
Wake up and see.
Look around
  at what this world is coming to be
It's been handed down
  to me and to you.
Now that we've got it
  what are we going to do?

I can see the children
  playing in the sand.
And I can hear the laughter
  and music of a band.
But I also hear the crying
  of a poor lonesome boy
And I can see the people who have no love or joy.

I can see the colour of autumn on trees
And I can hear the whistle
  of winds across the seas
But I also hear the clanging
  of iron toys of war,
And I can see a tiny child with hands stretched out for more.

So wake up ye people
  Wake up and see.
Look around
  at what this world is coming to be.
It's been handed down
  to me and to you.
Now that we've got it
  what are we going to do?

- and for no other reason
I stand, within this shroud
The unit of a darkness-
A cloud: silent,
And perpetual-
Even more mystic than tomorrow.

The drone of my life
Is a melody of sorrow.
Yet,
In realization
I can turn back:
In this cloud
In its spectrum
I see,
In its tones,
And pitches, this symphony,
I can reach
And hold,
But never share
Its mortality.
It's all disjoint
Still in that dream,
And still dream,
In tomorrow's dream.
And all of it is focusing,
Focusing on a shielded point-
The edge of its mind.

And in this waxed world
Where faces are filled
And pumped-
I can not-
Yet I must.

Her Independence

I had left them for a moment, the crowd of cackling old women and sullen old gentlemen. They were on a tour of Scotland. This had been their life-long desire---to return to the Old Country, but now they were scarcely able to climb the steps of the tour bus.

Why was I there also? Because I am a fool, chained to a body which seeks no independence. I follow the path of thousands of women before me---the path that leads only to genteel spinsterhood.

For this hour I was free. I walked along the trodden path, past the well-tended flower gardens surrounded by whitewashed stone walls, past squatting whitened stone cottages with their tiny curtained-windows and low thatched roofs. Then I saw them---the great hills there ahead of me, beckoning me.

My steps quickened as I saw for the first time the clouds lifting from the summit of my hill. The ground was rough the higher I climbed. Water lay in the basins of the rocks, --cool, pure moisture. It nourished the lichen that grew about the edges of the stones, hiding their ugly coldness from my eyes.

The heather grew thick about the ground. Rough to my hands, it was not the beautiful plant of the poets but was cruel in its deception---as so many things have been to me.

The more steep the grade, the more quickly I strode; Stretching, sliding, grasping as I moved toward my goal; I reached a small level plot. I could see the summit so clearly now. My heart raced within me! "Run, run you fool," my mind scorned the hesitation within my limbs. "Race to it!" "No, No, ." a great flood of fear tore at my mind.

I sat down upon a rock and gazed below at the port and the little white cottages. How tiny they seemed now. The flowers were all but lost in the blurr of their stone walls. How like me those tiny flowers were. Society protects me, but am I really an individual or the shadow, however faint, of the direction of society?

Ah, there is the bus down by the hotel, they are leaving now. Go away!

I want to stay here on the hill forever.

"No you don't, you are a fool," my brain scorned me. "You could not climb to the summit of the hill. You are a sheep. Go now to the fold."

I ran down past the rocks, the tiny white houses, the sheltered flowers. I ran to the waiting bus.

The tears would not come to my eyes

I paused and gazed once more to my summit and a cloud descended upon it. It was to have been the beginning of my life as an individual.

By Youth

The sun shone dimly o'er the trees.
The birds flew sorrowfully crying in the rain.
Alone on the roof-top, away from the world,
She sat alone and cried of dreams untold.
Secluded from all timely pleasures
Earthly good and maidens treasures,
She sat alone and wiped her tears,
Singing now in spite of fears,
Away, away she darted fast,
Killing time with another lass
She ran and ran for days on end,
Always a pick-up for money to spend
Racing and tearing from town to town
'Til one day she was finally found,
Death was now close at hand,
Hell would be her final land
The sun shone dimly o'er the trees
The birds flew sorrowfully, crying in the rain.

Decay

Like a tiger in a cage,
Sit the students in the room,
With faces long and bleak
Waiting for their doom.

The tiger-trainer teacher
With yardstick for a whip
With superiority and defiance
Before the classroom sits

The students shake and tremble,
Behind the feeble excuse,
Without their homework done,
The teacher holds the noose.

And so the students sit
Learning nought but fear,
And so the students sit
And decay another year.

African Safari

The backs of Negro porters shone black with the sweat of their efforts to struggle through the dense underbrush. The white men had picked a bad route, as white men always did; but they struggled on fearing the despised crack of the whip. The sun rose high above them and flitted through the dense canopy of protective foliage. The jungle was their friend and the insects seemed to concentrate their efforts on the three men in khaki uniforms.

Struggling to blaze the trail through dense virgin underbrush was the preacher. He'd left his quiet parish under the evangelist influence of the British laymen, to save the ignorant Blacks and convert them to Christianity. They never heard him use the rude language that prevailed whenever his white counterparts were stung or turned an ankle. Yet he was leading them, down the wrong trail, deep into their sacred lands.

Directly behind him marched the captain, his gun carrier overladen with arms. To the slaves he was the meanest; they did not understand his discipline, his striving for greater distances, his stamina. But they feared his hand and his tongue, and plodded diligently on.

Trailing along behind them came the white businessman. He was the individual the natives mistrusted most. They couln't understand anything he did or why he chose their land as his future. He alone had shown interest in their beads and ceremonial trinkets. He had undertaken to arrange payment for their labour. He alone carried no personal luggage on the safari.

The sky was darkening now and the strange procession pushed on towards the welcoming fires. All the men knew was that the night came suddenly upon the jungle and then dangers lurked behind every fern and tree. The sounds of crickets and parrots faded into chants and drum beats as the safari entered the mud hut village and natives welcomed them.

Orders were dispatched curtly as the preacher made arrangements for a religious fireside meeting, the captian obtained a hut and businessman inspected the shining jewels of the idols' eyes. That evening the jungle surrounded a strangely quiet clearing; the natives were ordered to abandon their trivial customs of rejoicing the day's kills and thanking the good of the hunt. The animals are at your disposal, the white men had explained impatiently; it was nature's course to kill them.

Dawn found the party on their way again, the men rested and fortified by the villagers' hospitality, the businessman struggling with his mysterious load.

Towards noon the men were already grumbling of the unbearalbe heat and their hunger. then the accident happened. The preacher's feet disappeared into the miry pothole of quicksand. Shouting orders to the porters, he took expert command of the situation. But feeling rebellious of their treatment, they stood glumly about, slightly amused by the bewildered man's flounderings and the captain's apparent helplessness. In a rage he fired upon them to punish their insolence and in an instance found himself pinned beneath a mass of writhing black flesh, a keen edge at his throat. The businessman beat a hasty retreat into the jungle, carrying his precious satchel of jewels with him. He fell easy prey to the perils of the jungle and the natives were once more alone with their home.

A Chest of Silverware

That sticky July afternoon, I searched for an excuse to get away from the office early. I decided to go to the local freight shed in search of a couple of cartons, missing from a large shipment we had received.

I climbed the tread-worn steps of the old shed with the hope of finding them quickly. I shouldered my way through the swing-door and after a few steps into the building my eyes began to adjust to the dimness. Bare light bulbs hung from the ceiling rafters which ran the length of the barnlike structure. It was cooler in here though.

The scene before me was full of activity, a seemingly endless parade of sweat-soaked men, heads bent down pushing tow-wheeled trucks loaded with crates and cartons of different sizes. There was a loud clang and rumble as the wheels rolled over the metal bridge-plates spanning the distance from the box cras to the floor of the shed. Meanwhile the procession continued like a snake dance down the aisle with their burdens, deposit them, then reappear on the opposite side of the aisle with empty trucks to renew their dreary task. The air was dust filled and dry to breathe and the old floor timbers creaked and groaned under the loads.

Dodging trucks and men, I made my way down the shed. It was then that I saw a familiar face approaching behind a truck. As he neared me, I stepped into his path and said,

"Ken. . . ! How ya doing?"
His eyes darted around and he replied in a whisper,
"Don't talk to me here. . . . . I'll see you in the washroom up at the end of the shed."
I couldn't understand his actions. Did he think he'd get fired for just talking to an old buddy? It didn't make sense. Being very curious I headed for the washroom.
When had I last seen Ken? I thought. Gee it must be seven of eight years ago, just before he went overseas in the army. We sure had shared some good times together before the war. I had heard he had married since he came home. But to meet under these circumstances had me very uneasy.
Finally I could see him coming. He was looking behind as if he was being followed. Once inside the door he began to laugh, like the Ken I'd known.
"The damn cops are watching me," he said.
"What for?"
"Yesterday my gang was unloading a car full of silverware and it was hotter than hell, so I sneaked off early to grab a few cold beers. Then when I came in this morning, these cops took me into an office and bugged me with all kinds of questions."
"Just for leaving early?" I asked.
"Hell no, there was a chest of silverware missing."
"So what."
"They think I took it, cause I left early."
"Your kidding."
"That's why I couldn't talk to you out there. They've been watching me all day."
His protest of his innocence earned my sympathy and I suggested:
"Maybe it's in the shed in a different block number than the rest."
"More than likely," he said.
"Hell Ken, they're great at losing stuff here; in fact I'm here now looking for some missing cartons."
"I better not stay too long," he said as he moved towards the door.
"I wouldn't worry about it too much, Ken, It'll turn up somewhere.
He made a hurried exit out the door with the usual, "I'll see you around."
After I found my missing cartons I left the shed without seeing him again. I couldn't help but think he was being treated quite badly. Once out of the building, I soon forgot the whole incident.
Several months later I caught a glimpse of him running to catch a bus. He slowed down at the lineup of people and we exchanged greetings and as he neared the door to enter, I said,
"Did they ever find that silverware?"
He turned and said quite loudly,
"Hell no, I've still got it at home."

Remembrance Day

On November 8, 1968, the staff and students gathered to remember those who died in World War I and II and the Korean War.

This year's service took a new form and became more meaningful. Under the guidance of Mr. Cramp, 13B's History Class prepared a presentation called "The Sacrifice." A centre screen depicted war while two side screens presented our life at I. D. C. I. and in Canada.

The names of those who made the supreme sacrifice were read. The traditional two minutes silence was held, followed by Taps, the Last Post and Reveille. The placing of the wreath at the Memorial Plaque completed the programme.

Many thanks and congratulations go to the History Class for making this service more meaningful for staff and students alike.

Second Annual

Cheese & Wine Festival 1968

The '68 festivities were set in motion on Saturday, Sept. 28, with the big Cheese and Wine Parade to which the Collegiate again sent a float. This was followed by the gala Grape-Stomping Contest where the students enthusiastically supported Mayor Henry in his bid for championship.

Sunday evening I. D. C. I. 's auditorium was packed for a modern Church Service featuring the "Prophets". Monday night, Cheesetown's '68 Revue took over, featuring a variety of musical numbers both vocal and instrumental. The Senior Glee Club, the Stage Crew as well as many individuals of I. D. C. I. supported the event.

The merriment continued through the week with a display of the 1969 cars, a Cheese and Wine Tasting Party and a Champagne Ball. The whole extravaganza was topped off by Olympic Day on Saturday with games and sports ranging from soccer to checkers, for young and old alike. BANDORAMA was the finishing touch for a Festival promising to be bigger and better than ever next year.

Christmas Literary Programme

On December 20, 1968, a variety programme was presented which successfully conveyed the Christmas feeling.

Our Choir opened the assembly with several Christmas selections followed by remarks from the Principal. We were then entertained by 13C's take-off on Laugh In - "Chuckle Out." The newspaper staff displayed their vocal talents in their number called "Cheap Thrills."

"What I want for Christmas" was the topic of 10E's humorous skit. As an effective "promotion stunt", Grinkle Parque Extension Junk Band held our attention with their rendition of "I'm getting nothing for Christmas." Jackie Halter then sang "A Holly Jolly Christmas."

Seriousness was evident in the meaningful "A Charlie Brown Christmas" presented by 11B. The Folk Singing Society set a different pace from the traditional Christmas programme with their singing of "Sounds of Silence" and "A New World Somewhere."

The male members of the Teaching Staff, in their surprise skit- "Sherwood Forest," showed us what could be achieved with a little initiative and a LOT of imagination.

The grande finale was, as usual, Santa's arrival with gifts of appreciation for the school's staff and with best wishes for a Happy Holiday for everyone.

1969

Ingersoll Collegiate's annual "At Home" was held on Friday, January 31, 1969.

Welcoming the guests were Mr. & Mrs. R. A. Joyce, Dr. & Mrs. B. Hunt, Mr. David Garratt, and Miss Marie Nielsen.

Following the theme of "the Old South", the gym was decorated with a gazebo and a riverboat. Silhouettes of southern belles and gentlemen accented the walls.

The highlight of the evening came with the crowning of Miss Andrea Little by last year's Queen, Miss Maureen Emery. Dave Garratt presented gifts to the Queen and her attendants, Miss Joanne Phillips, Miss Linda Daniel, and Miss Barbara Chatterton.

Dancing resumed until one o'clock with music provided by Lionel Thornton and his orchestra. This brought to a close a most successful evening, much enjoyed by all.
