P R E F A C E .

IN compiling this, the first Gazetteer of Canada West, I was induced to undertake the task by the great ignorance which I found to exist respecting the Province, not only amongst persons in Great Britain, or newly-arrived emigrants, but even amongst many of those who had been for years resident in the country; and from ascertaining that the various, contradictory, and occasionally false accounts given to emigrants on their arrival, respecting distant localities, frequently led them to alter their original intentions respecting their destination; and often induced them to leave the Province altogether, and settle in the United States. This I found to be the case myself, on my arrival in Canada, when I was told that I should find the western borders of the Province a complete wilderness—that on the River St. Clair, for instance, there was a marked difference between the appearance of the country on the American and on the British side—that on the former all was bustle and activity, fine farms and flourishing orchards; while on the Canadian side nothing was to be seen but uncleared forest—and that the Western District was very sickly. In travelling by stage, during the winter of 1844, from London to Chatham, one of my fellow passengers, who had been for some years in the Province, told me that he was going to Chatham, from whence he intended to cross over the river to Detroit; and he was astonished when informed, that to reach Detroit, he would have to travel fifty miles farther! Again, during the last year, I remember seeing amongst the articles in the newspapers respecting the western railroads, Windsor and Sandwich spoken of as being on the River St. Clair!

Respecting the natural productions and capabilities of the Province, I have found also quite as much misinformation. Many persons, for instance, have been quite surprised to hear that marble was plentiful in the Province; and one individual told me, as a very great secret, that he had made what he considered a most valuable discovery, that in the course of his explorations about Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay, he had discovered a quarry of white marble, but he thought the secret so valuable that he would not tell the situation in which he had found it.

To collect materials for the first Gazetteer of any country, (which in itself implies that it is a Gazetteer of a new country,) may truly be called “the pursuit of knowledge under difficulties;” which may be supposed to be the reason, that although it is now three hundred years since the first settlement was made in Canada, no one has hitherto had sufficient resolution to undertake and carry through the task. These difficulties arise principally from the obstructions and inconveniences of travelling in remote places, and from the difficulty in many localities of collecting authentic information. The latter difficulty is caused not so much by the unwillingness of parties to give what information they possess as from apathy on the subject; and I have found the most trouble in gaining information from those places that were lagging in the back ground—the inhabitants appearing to view me as one who had come “to spy the nakedness of the land;” and being unwilling to have themselves and their neighbourhoods dragged before the public. And in all such instances there appeared to be a great want of spirit and enterprise amongst them. In all those places, on the contrary, where the inhabitants were industrious, enterprising, and desirous of seeing their particular locality prosper, I have had no difficulty in arriving at any information I required. From those government and district officers, to whom I have found it necessary, in the course of my inquiries, to apply for information, I have invariably received all the assistance in their power, (with two or three exceptions only; one of these refused me the information I required, on the ground that “he was not obliged to give information to every one who asked for it.” On mentioning his conduct to some of his townsmen, the reply I received was, “you should have shown him a shilling, and he would have given you the information fast enough.” Another had the conscience to refuse me a list of the qualified magistrates in his district, unless I paid him a quarter of a dollar for each name! (153 in number); and I was consequently obliged to procure the list from the Secretary’s Office, at Montreal,) and I take this opportunity of returning to them my best thanks for their kindness and courtesy.

In collecting together such a mass of information, extending over so great a surface of country, (and which information it was also necessary to condense as much as possible), it is not unlikely that some few inaccuracies may have crept in; but I believe the work will be generally allowed to be as correct as it was possible for a work of the kind to be made. Some two or three places of small consequence have been necessarily omitted, as Merrickville, on the Rideau Canal, which I passed through in the night; and Bath, on the St. Lawrence, which, on account of the badness of the weather, I was unable to visit. I wrote to the postmaster of the latter place, (as the most public man in a village), requesting him to favour me with the statistics of the village; but he had not the politeness to answer my letter.

In the prosecution of my object, I have spared neither trouble, expense, nor personal fatigue; and, in the course of my travels, I have walked over more than three thousand miles of ground, through both the heats of summer and the snows of winter; and having completed my labours, like a mariner starting on a voyage of discovery, I launch my bark upon the waters, trusting to the winds and waves of public opinion to waft it safely into port,—(put the profits into his pocket, he means.—PRINCE DE V.)—with the confident expectation that my exertions to make the Province better known and appreciated, will be supported as they should be, by all who must necessarily, directly or indirectly, benefit by my researches.

ALNWICK.

A Township in the Newcastle District ; is bounded on the east by the township of Percy ; on the north-west by Rice Lake ; and on the south by Haldimand.

This is a triangular-shaped township, which as yet contains only an Indian settlement, called Aldersville.

Near Rice Lake, and about fifteen miles north-east from Cobourg, is a settlement of Mississagæ Indians, who, previous to the year 1826, were Pagans, wandering in the neighbourhood of Belleville, Kingston and Guananoque; and were known under the name of the Mississagas of the Bay of Quintè. In 1826 & 27, between two and three hundred were settled on Grape Island, in the Bay of Quintè, six miles from Belleville, where they commenced planting, and where schools were established by a Wesleyan Methodist Missionary for their instruction. On this island they resided eleven years, subsisting by agriculture and hunting. Their houses were erected partly by their own labour, and partly at the expense of the Methodist Missionary Society; the number, at length, amounted to twenty-three; besides which, they had a commodious building for religious service and schools, another room for an infant school, a hospital, a smithy, a shoemaker's shop, and a building for joiners' and cabinet work. These however were relinquished, to be sold for their benefit in 1830, when they removed to their present location, which was granted to them by Sir John Colborne. It contains 2,000 acres, which is divided into lots of twenty-five acres each. The village, or street, which is called Aldersville, is about a mile and a half in length; it contains thirty-six houses, six barns, a saw-mill, and a large school-house, in which divine worship is performed; all erected under the direction of the Indian Department, out of the annuity of £642. 10s. to which this band is entitled for the surrender of a vast tract in the rear of the Johnstown and Midland Districts. Of the thirty-six dwelling houses, twenty-two are framed, and the remainder are of square logs, all of commodious size: the barns are framed, of forty by thirty feet in dimensions. These Indians are 233 in number; each family has at least half its lots of 25 acres cleared; and several have nearly the whole under cultivation. The total quantity cleared is between 360 and 400 acres. Their stock consists of eight yoke of Oxen, two horses, eleven cows, twenty-one heifers and calves, and a number of pigs and poultry. They possess eight ploughs, six harrows, three carts and waggons, and twelve ox-sleighs.

When on Grape Island, a cabinet maker, blacksmith, shoe maker, and occasionally a tailor, were employed by the Methodist society, to instruct these Indians in their several trades. Although it was found difficult to keep the scholars at their work, and considerable losses were sustained in the undertaking, yet the Indians shewed unusual ingenuity, and gained considerable knowledge in those branches, which has been of much use to them since their settlement at Alwick, where no shops have yet been erected.

For four years past, a school, on the manual labour plan, has been in operation. This system combines elementary instruction with domestic economy. The girls are taught reading, writing, arithmetic, and geography, together with house-keeping, spinning, knitting, needle-work, and the management of a dairy: in the latter department are seven cows. The boys are taught in the same branches as the girls, and in English grammar, and in the business of farming. For this purpose, a model farm of fifty acres in extent is provided. The scholars, twelve in number, are boarded and lodged in the mission family, and clothed at the expense of the Missionary Society. They are all clad in cloth spun by the Indian girls. During four years past, thirty-one girls and fourteen boys have received instruction in this school.

Two hundred and fifty acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the township, at 8s. c'y per acre.

Ameliasburgh contains 40,466 acres, 15,217 of which are under cultivation. Two portions of the bay, which are bordered by marsh, extend for some distance into this township. AMHERSTBURG.

A garrison Town, in the township of Malden, in the county of Essex : sixteen miles from Sandwich, on the Detroit River. It was commenced in the year 1798, soon after the evacuation of Detroit. The situation is good, but most of the streets are rather narrow. The banks of the river, both above and below the town, but particularly the latter, where the river emerges into Lake Erie, are very beautiful; the sweet-briar bushes, with which the banks are studded, are here remarkably fine. Several handsome houses are built on the banks below the town. About a mile below the town, near the entrance of Lake Erie, is a chalybeate spring; which is said to resemble the waters of Cheltenham, in England. A fort called Malden, capable of accommodating a regiment, is situated about half a mile above the town, on the river; it was rebuilt in 1839, and is at present occupied by three companies of rifles. Sir Chas. Metcalfe in the year 1845 granted a charter to the town of Amherstburg to hold a fair twice a year.

A plot of land containing about 100 acres, (being the military reserve,) outside the town, is perfectly cleared of timber, and forms a fine large common, which is very convenient for the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, for grazing. The steamboats: London, from Buffalo to Detroit; Gore, from Windsor to Goderich and Penetanguishine; and Brothers, from Chatham; touch here regularly. The latter leaves Amherstburg every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday mornings, at half past seven o'clock, for Detroit and Chatham. Fare to Detroit \$ $\frac{1}{2}$, to Chatham \$2 $\frac{1}{2}$. And many of the American steamers stop here to take in wood. Amherstburg contains 985 inhabitants; of this number 174 are people of colour. There are five churches and chapels, viz. Episcopal, Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist; the latter for coloured people; and a news and reading room; a market place, and court house have recently been erected.

Post office, post every day.

Part of the village was destroyed by fire during 1845. It is intended to erect a cloth factory during the present year.

They have been formed out of the township of Madawaska; and are bounded on the north-east by McNab; on the north-west by Adamston; on the west by unsurveyed lands; and on the south-east by Levant and Darling. In Bagot and Blithefield 9,172 acres are taken up, 1,020 of which are under cultivation. In Bagot 65,900 acres, and in Blithefield 30,150 acres of crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre. There is one saw-mill in the township. There is no return of population for these townships.

Ratable property in the township, £4,047.

BALDOON.

A Settlement in the township of Dover, which was originally made under the auspices of the Earl of Selkirk, who caused a road to be cut out from the settlement to the river Thames. The situation, however, was not well chosen, being too low, and liable to ague, consequently it has not increased very fast, or made much progress in improvement.

BALSAM LAKE.

A Lake in the north-west of the Colborne District. The most northerly of a chain of lakes running through the Colborne and Newcastle Districts.

BARTON.

In Barton, 15,392 acres are taken up, 8993 of which are under cultivation. This township is small, but it is well settled, and a large portion of it is under cultivation. The land is generally good, although the soil on the banks of the lake and bay is light. Timber,—maple, black walnut, beech, oak, &c., with a small quantity of pine. The town of Hamilton is situated in the township, on Burlington Bay. There are one grist and five saw mills in the township.

BARRIE.

So called after Commodore Barrie, the District town of the Simcoe District : is beautifully situated at the head of Kempenfeldt Bay, in the township of Vespra, thirty-two miles from Holland Landing, and forty miles from Penetanguishine. Barrie was first settled in the year 1832; in 1837 it contained about twenty-eight families. In 1843 the county of Simcoe, until then part of the Home District, was declared a separate district, with Barrie for its district town. Since then it has increased rapidly. The situation was well chosen and is healthy. Should the contemplated canal from the bay to Lake Huron, through Willow Creek and the Nottawasaga River, ever be formed, Barrie, which is now truly in the woods, will have uninterrupted water communication with the St. Lawrence. At present, the road from Barrie to the Holland Landing, is, in the spring and fall, almost impassable for waggons. The road to Penetanguishine is much better, running for the most part along a stony ridge of land. The mail, during the spring and autumn, is carried on horse-back; and through the summer, partly on horseback, and partly by water. A new steamboat, the "Beaver," was launched during the summer of 1844: she is an excellent boat, and has good accommodation. The banks of the bay have a rather sombre appearance, being almost totally devoid of clearing: most of the timber on the banks is pine. Town lots, of a quarter of an acre, in the old survey (or original town-plot) are in the hands of private individuals, and sell at from £20 to £50, some higher. An addition has lately been made to the town-plot, and the lots in the new survey sell at from £5 to £12 10s. each; they are mostly in the hands of the Crown. The public buildings are the jail and court-house. The jail is a handsome stone building; the court-house is of brick, and has no beauty to boast of; the two cost the district nearly £9,000. There are three churches and chapels: viz. one Episcopal and two Methodist. There is an excellent district school (where private pupils are taken); a mechanics' institute, and a cricket club.

The inhabitants are principally English, Irish and Scotch, and number about 500.

The following government and district offices are kept in Barrie: Judge of District Court, Sheriff, Clerk of Peace, Registrar, Inspector of Licenses, Crown Lands Agent, District Clerk, Clerk of District Court, Deputy Clerk of Crown.

In Bastard, 900 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. per acre. There are two grist and five saw mills in the township.

The south branch, and a smaller stream, called the middle branch, of the Mississippi, run through the north-west of the township from south-west to north east ; they unite in the north corner of the township. The south branch, soon after its entrance into the township, expands into a small lake. The river Tay, a branch of the Mississippi, stretches across the south-east border of the township, at the eastern corner of which it is joined by Grant's Creek. The base of the north of the township is principally marble, varying in colour from pure white to dark grey. The south of the township is granite. In the south of the township is an iron mine, the ore of which is said to be very rich. There are some good farms in the township. Three thousand five hundred acres of Crown Lands are open for sale in Bathurst, at 8s. currency, per acre. There are five grist and nine saw mills in the township.

Population in 1842, 2307.

Ratable property in the township, 26,858.

BATHURST DISTRICT.

Consists of the counties of Lanark and Renfrew, which are united so far as relates to representation in the Legislative Assembly, and return one member. The Bathurst District is bounded on the north by the Ottawa river, and is also watered by the Mississippi river and lakes, the Madawaska river, and the river Bonne-Chaur ; besides numerous small streams scattered over it ; and it is thickly studded with lakes, varying in size. Beds of marble, of various shades of colour, from pure white to dark grey, extend through the townships of Lanark, Dalhousie and North Sherbrooke, and from thence into the Midland District. Fine white freestone and limestone are abundant in the district ; and also granite, which however, has not yet been brought into use ; and rich iron ore has been discovered within a few miles of Perth. Much of the land in the district is of good quality. Timber—a mixture of hardwood and pine. The settlers are generally industrious and thriving ; many of them are Scotch. Perth, the district town, is a flourishing place, with many good buildings. Four hundred and eighty thousand two hundred acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the Bathurst district, at 8s. currency, per acre ; to purchase any of which, application must be made to the Crown lands' agent at Perth.

BEAMSVILLE.

A Village in the township of Clinton, situated on the St. Catharine's road, twenty-two miles from Hamilton. Much has been written respecting a spring in the neighbourhood, which is said to freeze over during the hottest part of the summer, and to thaw in the winter. When in the neighbourhood during the last winter, I was unable to visit the spot, but I was informed by a gentleman living at Beamsville (and who I believe to be good authority), that he had visited the place frequently, and that there was in reality no spring whatever there. He stated, that the supposed spring was situated in a cave, in the side of the mountain, the bottom of which is about four feet below the level of the ground; that the only water in the cave is that deposited by continual drippings from the roof above; that he has frequently visited the cave in summer, and has on such occasions dug lumps of ice out of the crevices in the rocks which form the floor of the cave. That he has on all such visits found the bottom of the cave thickly covered with dead leaves (which must have been blown in), and which he has had to remove before getting at the ice; and he supposes the ice to be formed during the winter, and preserved through the summer, as in an ice-house. But he has never visited the place during the winter, to ascertain the fact, nor does he know any one who has. This, however, seems a rational explanation of a circumstance that at first view would appear rather a singular phenomenon. The cave is about two miles east from the village, and about three-quarters of a mile from the road. There are three churches and chapels in the village, viz. Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist. Population about 250. Post office, post every day.

Professions and Trades.—One physician and surgeon, four general stores, two hardware ditto, two taverns, two foundries, one of which has a steam engine, one bookseller and druggist, one tannery, one chair maker, one baker, one saddler, two blacksmiths, one cabinet maker, two tailors, two shoemakers, three waggon makers.

BEAR CREEK,

Or River Sydenham: is divided into two branches. The east, or principal branch, takes its rise in the township of Lobo or London, runs through the south east of Adelaide, the north-west of Mosa, enters Zone near its north-east corner, and leaves it near the south-west corner; after which it runs nearly due west, through the townships of Dawn and Sombra, till it reaches the Chenail Ecarté, or "Sny Carte," as it is commonly called, a branch of the River St. Clair. The north branch takes its rise in the township of Warwick, and runs south-west across the township of Enniskillen, and to about the centre of the township of Sombra, where it makes a bend, and runs due south till it reaches the east branch, the two forming what is called the "Forks" of Bear Creek, which is about nine miles from the River St. Clair. Some of the best land in Canada is situated in the townships bordering on the river. After getting a few miles above the forks, the land becomes rolling, and heavily timbered, and the banks higher; but below the forks there is a considerable extent of marsh and prairie, which although useful enough for grazing cattle, is too liable to produce ague to make it a fit neighbourhood to settle in, particularly for European emigrants. Both branches are navigable for large vessels: the east branch about nine miles, and the north about five miles above the forks, the water ranging in depth from ten to twenty five feet. At the forks is a hole about forty feet in depth.

BEAVERTON.

In the south-west of the township are fine white freestone quarries. In Beckwith, 6100 acres of Crown lands are for sale. There are one grist mill, one saw do., and two distilleries in the township.

In consequence of the short-sighted policy of some of the merchants in Belleville, who refused to allow any account of the produce shipped from the place to be published, on the plea, that the exports were so large, that the publication of their amount would immediately cause the town to be inundated with fresh stores, to the loss of the merchants already established there, I am unable to give any list of exports from Belleville, with the exception of potash, the returns of which I obtained from the inspector.

Quantity of Potash shipped from Belleville, during the year 1844.....2711 brls.

The river Aux Sables divides the township from Williams and McGillivray on the east, and Stephen on the east and north. At the northern extremity of the township it makes a sudden bend, and then runs parallel with Lake Huron, at an average distance of half a mile, for ten miles, when it enters the lake. Mud Creek enters the river at about a mile from its mouth; and Lake Burwell, which is in fact two lakes connected together by a narrow gut, is situated about three miles from Lake Huron, in the triangle formed by the bend of the river; its northern extremity is about three miles from the north boundary of the township; it is about four miles long, by about two broad, and is surrounded by a considerable extent of marsh; it has never been surveyed. A ridge of sand hills, about three miles wide, extends from the mouth of the Sable river to the extremity of the township. There is a great deal of low, swampy land on the borders of the river, for about two miles from its mouth. A point of the coast, called "Kettle Point," about five miles below the mouth of the Sable river, has excited considerable curiosity, from its being constantly on fire.

The land in the south of the township is of fine quality. For the first four miles above Plympton, the banks of the lake are high; afterwards they become low and rocky, up to Kettle Point; and then they become low and sandy.

After leaving Kettle Point, the timber is principally pine. A saw mill was established at the north bend of the river, soon after the first settlement of the district. There is an Indian reserve near Kettle Point, and another about three miles above.

No separate census has yet been taken of this township.

Ratable property in the township, £1418.

It was laid out in 1802, and is now incorporated. This is a handsome town, most of the houses and other buildings being constructed of stone, many of which have cut fronts. Being situated on a bed of lime stone, this material is found the cheapest that can be used for building, and its general adoption gives the town a very substantial appearance. Granite is also to be obtained in the immediate neighbourhood of the town, but being harder to work is not at present used. The court house and jail is a handsome stone building. There are six churches and chapels, viz., Episcopal, Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational, all of which are of stone. During the season, the steamboats call here regularly, on their passages to and from Montreal and Kingston. There is a considerable marsh at its western extremity, through which the Desjardins Canal has been constructed. The old works being out of repair, and inefficient, great improvements have been made in the canal: it has been enlarged by dredging, and the piers have also been much improved. BURWELL LAKE.

A Lake in the township of Bosanquet, or rather two lakes connected together by a narrow gut ; situated about three miles from Lake Huron, in the triangle formed by the bend of the River Sable ; its northern extremity is about three miles from the north boundary of the township. It is about four miles long by about two in breadth ; and is surrounded by a considerable extent of marsh. It has never been surveyed.

BYTOWN.

The District Town of the Dalhousie District ; situated in the north-east corner of the township of Nepean, on the Ottawa River. It is divided into two portions, called Upper and Lower Bytown ; the former is the most aristocratic, the latter the most business portion of the town. The lower town has been long settled : the upper town has been more recently erected, and is situated about half a mile higher up the river, and on considerably higher ground. The land on which the upper town is erected, together with a portion of that comprising the lower town, was purchased some years since for the sum of £80, and is now computed to be worth some £50,000 or £60,000. The Rideau Canal enters the Ottawa River just above the lower town, where eight handsome locks have been constructed to overcome the fall in the river.

The scenery about Bytown is, next to that at the Falls of Niagara, the most picturesque of the inhabited portion of Canada. The Chaudiere Falls, a short distance above the upper town, are very beautiful. Just below the falls, a handsome Suspension Bridge has been constructed over the Ottawa, which connects Upper with Lower Canada.

Bytown is principally supported by the lumber trade. On the Lower Canadian side of the river, slides have been constructed to facilitate the passage of the rafts. Here all timber brought down the river, which has been cut on Crown lands, is measured, and the owner enters into a bond for the payment of the duties at Quebec. The town is fast improving in appearance, and several handsome stone buildings are already erected. The Barracks are in a commanding situation, on the highest part of the bank of the river, between the upper and lower town, and are garrisoned by a company of Rifles.

The inhabitants of the lower town are about one-third French Canadians, the remainder are principally Irish.

Churches and chapels in the lower town, five ; viz., Catholic, Free Church, two Methodist, and Baptist : in Upper Bytown, three ; viz., Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Methodist. The Jail and Court House are of stone. Two Fire Engines are kept ; one in the upper, and one in the lower town. There is a "Commercial Reading-room," supported by subscription ; and a "Mercantile Library Association."

A Fair is held at Bytown on the second Tuesday in April, and the third Wednesday in September. Three newspapers are published here weekly—the "Ottawa Advocate," "Bytown Gazette," and "Packet."

During the season, a steamboat plies daily between Bytown and Grenville, in Lower Canada, leaving Bytown in the morning, and returning from Grenville in the evening. And comfortable boats of a good size, ply on the Rideau Canal, between Bytown and Kingston ; but, as they are generally engaged in towing barges, there is little dependance to be placed on their regularity.

Population of Bytown, about 7000.

Post Office, post daily. The mail is conveyed to Kingston on horseback.

CALEDONIA.

A Village in the township of Caledonia, in the Ottawa District, five miles south from the Ottawa River, and nine miles from L'Original. This is the situation of the "Caledonia Springs" which are now generally well known in Canada, by reputation at least. The village owes its existence altogether to the situation of the springs, the discovery of which has been the sole cause of the formation of the settlement. There were but two or three houses in the place, which were kept for the reception of visitors to the springs, till the property came into the possession of the present proprietor in 1836, who immediately commenced improving the situation, by clearing and building. The springs were secured from the drainings of the land, cleaned out, and encased. A large hotel has been built for the reception of visitors, capable of accommodating 150 persons, and a bath house; and a circular railroad has been laid down round the grounds for the amusement of invalids. There are also in the village two churches, stores, saw-mill, post-office, a resident physician, three taverns, and other boarding houses, and a small paper called "Life at the Springs," is published weekly. The principal tavern, the "Canada House," is kept by the proprietor of the springs. There are four springs in the place, called the Saline, Sulphur, Gas, and one more lately discovered, called the Intermittent. The Caledonia water is bottled and exported.

This town was originally laid out by Governor Simcoe, who, while examining the valley of the Thames, on arriving at the spot on which Chatham now stands, was so much struck with its great natural advantages, that he immediately reserved 600 acres for a town plot. The town, however, may be said to have commenced only about fifteen years ago; since which time it has progressed rapidly, and now contains about 1500 inhabitants; and property has greatly increased in value, so much so, that a small town lot, which at the first settlement could have been worth but a mere trifle, was sold a short time since to a merchant at the enormous advance of 750 dollars.

This place was a garrison town during the rebellion, and contains barracks, but they are at present unoccupied.

The new road from London to Amherstburgh passes through the town. Four-horsed stages, going eastward and westward, leave Chatham every day.

The steamboat "Brothers," Captain Eberts, is owned here, and, during the season, leaves Chatham for Detroit and Amherstburgh every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, returning on the alternate days. The "London," Captain Van Allen (the fastest boat on the upper lakes) meets the "Brothers" at Detroit, and continues the route to Buffalo, touching at the intermediate ports on the Canadian side. The "London" is a beautiful boat; and, during the winter of 1844-5, the "Brothers" was overhauled, enlarged and refitted.

Chatham contains four churches and chapels; viz., Episcopal, Presbyterian, Secession, and Methodist; also, a Theatre, which is well attended, the performers being amateurs; and a cricket club.

A newspaper, the "Chatham Gleaner," is published here every Tuesday. Town lots of a quarter of an acre, and park lots varying from three to ten acres, are still to be purchased, the price varying according to situation. The table of exports for the past year will give some idea of the trade of the town, as well as of the prosperity and industry of the surrounding neighbourhood.

But, from the great number of mills which have been erected on the river during the last four years, the fishing is destroyed, the salmon being unable to make their way over the dams. DALHOUSIE DISTRICT.

Consists of the County of Carleton, which returns a member to the House of Assembly; and comprises the townships of Fitzroy, Goulbourn, North Gower, Gloucester, Huntley, March, Marlborough, Nepean, Osgoode, and Torbolton. This district, which is bounded on the north by the Ottawa River, is also watered by the Mississippi, the Rideau, and the Petite Nation Rivers. The Dalhousie District, being more dependant upon the lumber trade, than upon agricultural pursuits, advances but slowly. Much of the land in this district is of rather poor quality, being stoney and rocky. There is, however, a sufficient quantity that is fit for agricultural purposes. The larger portion of the inhabitants being engaged in preparing timber for the Quebec market, agriculture is neglected, and the consequence is, that provisions are dearer in Bytown than in any other town in Canada West. The Rideau Canal passes through the district.

(For the quantity of lumber brought down the Ottawa, see BYTOWN.)

Sixty thousand six hundred and eighty-four acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the Dalhousie District; to purchase any of which, application must be made to the Crown Lands' Agent, at New Edinburgh, near Bytown.

Population of the district in 1842, 19,612; since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

DESJARDINS CANAL.—(See DUNDAS.)

DETROIT RIVER.

Forms the western boundary of the County of Essex, in the Western District, dividing that portion of Canada from the United States. It receives the waters of the upper lakes from Lake St. Clair, and discharges them into Lake Erie. It is about twenty-three miles in length, and from one to two miles wide. There are several islands in the river, varying in size, the principal of which are Bois Blanc, Fighting Island and Peach Island; and the scenery on its banks is very beautiful. Large quantities of fish are taken in the river (about 1200 barrels of Whitefish alone are generally taken annually), and the sportsman usually finds abundance of wild ducks, which breed in great numbers in the marshes bordering some of the islands, and portions of the coast. The towns of Sandwich and Amherstburgh, and the village of Windsor are situated on its banks.

On the bank of the river, a short distance above Amherstburg, is an Indian reserve, occupied by Chippewas, Hurons, Munsees, and Shawnees. In the year 1790, when the council of the four nations, (Chippewas, Ottawas, Hurons and Pottawatamies), surrendered to the government the extensive tract of land in Western Canada, now known as the Huron District, they stipulated for a reservation of the hunting grounds then occupied by the Hurons and Wyandotts, which comprised 22,390 acres, extending about six miles along the shore of the Detroit River, and having a depth of seven miles. In the year 1836, in consequence of the encroachments of the whites upon these lands, and the desire which existed in that part of the country to be allowed to settle upon them, the government induced the Indians to surrender a large portion of their reserve, in trust, to be sold for their exclusive benefit. By a subsequent agreement, made in the next year by Sir F. Head, they resigned two-thirds of the reserve: the proceeds of one-third to be applied to their exclusive benefit, and those of the second and third for the general purposes of the Indians in Upper Canada. The portion of the reserve still remaining in their possession is about 8,000 acres in extent. Upon this are settled each on a separate farm, the Chippewas, and other Indians. The Munsees and Shawnees are chiefly migratory, but the few families which have become in some measure stationary, live on the reserve, but have not had separate farms assigned to them, nor erected any dwellings. The Hurons have thirty-four dwelling-houses, of which thirty-three are made of logs, and one is a very comfortable frame dwelling of two stories, for the erection of which they paid £250. They have also ten barns, of which four are framed, and twenty-three log stables. None of the Hurons live in wigwams, but the Chippewas, except their chief, who resides at Point Pelé, have no other habitations.

The land occupied by the Hurons is laid out in regular blocks of 200 acres each, which are selected for the several families by the chiefs. Among this tribe a man's children inherit his property, but if he leaves no children, his farm becomes at the disposal of the chief. He has not the power of conveying his interest to other members of his tribe, or to strangers. These Hurons have for a long time been engaged, more or less, in cultivating the land, but until a few years ago, they made little or no progress in husbandry; more recently however they have greatly and regularly extended their farms by clearing, and have improved in their mode of agriculture. Many of them are good farmers, and they are annually becoming more prosperous and happy. About twelve years ago, they had scarcely any agricultural implements but the hoe; they now possess nineteen ploughs, ten harrows and six fanning-mills; they have also twelve waggons and carts, fourteen sleighs, one caleche, and three carioles. They have cleared 259 acres; each male adult has a farm of 200 acres allotted to him, on which many have from fifteen to thirty acres under cultivation; the average is between seven and eight acres. Their stock consists of seven yoke of oxen, nine bulls, eight steers, twenty-seven cows, fifteen heifers, ninety-three horses, two hundred and ninety swine, and seventy-three geese. They have given up the chase in a great measure, and only hunt occasionally, when their absence does not interfere with their farming operations, usually in the autumn. They all profess christianity; the majority are Wesleyan Methodists, and the others Roman Catholics. They have no place of worship of their own. The Methodist minister, however, who is stationed in the town of Amherstburg, visits those of his persuasion every Sunday, and the Roman Catholics attend chapel at Amherstburg, which is about three miles from their settlement. There is at present no school among them, but they have expressed their desire to establish one.

The Chippewas are in very different and inferior condition. They chiefly depend upon hunting and fishing. About ten families commenced to till the ground within the last twelve years. They have only about three or four acres each under cultivation; they raise only Indian corn, and use no implement but the hoe. The women perform almost all the field work. They are all heathens, and it does not appear that any efforts have been made for their conversion. Their number is on the decrease, occasioned by exposure, intemperance, and insufficiency of food.

In 1842, the number belonging to each tribe was as follows:

Chippewas.....	258
Hurons.....	88
Munsees.....	22
Shawnees.....	6

374

Formerly Amherstburg was the chief post for the distribution of presents to the Indians residing west of Toronto, and to those of the United States. Since the formation of the establishment at Manitoulin Island, the distributions at Amherstburg and Drummond Island have been discontinued, except to the Indians in the immediate neighbourhood of the former place, and have since been made at Manitoulin.

and its tributaries: it is pretty well settled; and Cornwall, the district town, is pleasantly situated; but much of the land is poor and cold. The district advances but slowly. On the 13th August, having completed his batteries, he commenced a brisk cannonade on the position of the enemy, which, with a few intermissions, was continued for two days, after which it was determined to carry the fort and outworks of the enemy by a nocturnal assault; about two o'clock on the morning of the 15th the attack commenced; and after a desperate conflict, the fort was carried, the enemy driven from the ramparts at the point of the bayonet, and the guns of the fort turned upon the garrison; but at the very moment of victory, a large quantity of ammunition accidentally took fire and exploded, by which the greater portion of the British forces, who had entered the fort, were blown into the air; the few British troops who survived the explosion, were insufficient to maintain their position, and they were consequently obliged to retire under shelter of their own works. On the 17th September following, a large American force attacked the British batteries, and succeeded in destroying the works; but before they could make good their retreat, a reinforcement of British troops arrived, and they were soon obliged to make a precipitate flight before the British bayonets, after losing nearly 600 men. The American general soon after evacuated Fort Erie, and retreated across the river to the United States, which ended the campaign.

GODERICH.

The District Town of the Huron District, situated on Lake Huron, at the entrance of the Maitland River. It was laid out in 1827 by Mr. Galt, then secretary of the Canada Company. The town is handsomely situated, the greater part being built on a rising ground, more than 100 feet above the level of the lake, and it is consequently dry and healthy. The scenery in the neighbourhood is beautiful, but the town is rather exposed to north and north west winds from the lake, in consequence of which the weather is occasionally wintry, even in the middle of summer, on the whole however, it is a very pleasant summer residence. Owing to its remote situation, and partly from its being inaccessible by land from any part of the Province west of London, Goderich has not increased as fast as many other places of the same age. A harbour has been constructed at an expense of £16,000; but the piers are now getting out of repair. This is the only harbour between Port Sarنيا and the Saugene Islands. A light house is just about being erected by the government. In 1827 a road was opened to the township of Wilmot, at a cost of £1900; a road has also been made to the town of London. A steamboat and several schooners have been built here. Stages run twice a week from Goderich to London and Galt, and during the last season the steamboat "Goderich" (late "Gore") called here on her weekly trips from Windsor to Owen's Sound. A fishing company was established here, some years since, but from some mismanagement did not succeed very well, and is now broken up. A fine pelican was shot here during the spring of 1845, while feeding in the harbour.

Goderich contains five churches and chapels, viz; Episcopal, Presbyterian, Catholic, Secession and Methodist; there is also a stone jail and court house, and the Canada Company's offices are kept here.

Post Office, post four times a week.

Goderich is fifty-nine miles from London, and eighty-two from Galt; for stage fares, see London, Galt, and Hamilton. The exports for 1844 were small, but during the spring of 1845, about 12,000 bushels of wheat were shipped.

GORE DISTRICT.

Consists of the Counties of Wentworth and Halton, and contains some of the richest, best settled, and most highly cultivated townships in Canada West. The rapid growth of Hamilton, the district town, seems to have given an impetus to the rest of the district, and it has increased in wealth faster, during the last few years, than any other portion of the province. Between January 1842, and January 1844, 44,000 acres of land have been brought into cultivation, a very great increase. There are many large farms in the district, one of which in particular deserves mention; that of Mr. Colman, near Paris, in the township of Dumfries, who last year had 375 acres of land in wheat. There are many scientific English and Scotch farmers in the District, who possess stock that would be a credit to any country. Large numbers of the farms have flourishing orchards attached to them. The Grand River runs through the district, on which, and its tributaries, are numerous grist and saw mills. Hamilton, the district town, being the key to the west, is becoming the great depot for merchandize intended for the west, and western produce; and the villages of Dundas and Galt are fast becoming manufacturing towns, through the agency of their extensive water power. A profitable trade is carried on in freestone and limestone, much of which is exported. A large portion of the inhabitants of the district are English, Scotch and Irish, and the remainder, Canadians, Americans and their descendants, and a few Germans. 2,400 acres, only, of crown lands are open for sale in the Gore District, to purchase any of which, application must be made to the Crown lands' agent at Hamilton.

The population of the Gore District in 1841, amounted to 31,507, since when the number has probably increased one third; the town of Hamilton alone, has doubled its population in the period.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district.

GRAND RIVER, or OUSE.

Takes its rise in the township of Amaranth, about thirty miles above Fergus, runs south and a little west through Garafraxa, south west through Nichol, south through Woolwich, at the south-east border of which it is joined by the Canastoga, a branch from the west; it then runs south through Waterloo; in the south-east of which it is joined by the River Speed, a branch from the townships of Guelph and Dumfries; when it enters Brantford, and runs south-east to Lake Erie, forming the dividing line between the townships of Onondaga and Tuscarora, Seneca and Oneida, passes through Cayuga, and forms the boundary of Canboro', Moulton, and Sherbrooke, on the north and east, and Dunn on the south and west. In its course it is very tortuous, sometimes making sudden bends to the east or west, and as suddenly curving back again in the opposite direction.

The Grand River is navigable for large vessels as far as Dunnville, where the feeder of the Welland Canal enters it; and for smaller boats to within a short distance of the town of Brantford (sixty miles above Dunnville), where a canal, three miles in length, and with three locks, to overcome an ascent in the river of thirty-three feet, has been constructed to enable vessels to reach the town. In order to render the river navigable above Dunnville, five locks have been built, to overcome an ascent of forty-three feet. There are several grist and saw mills, and other machinery on the river, both above and below Brantford. The damming of the river in order to supply the Welland Canal, has caused it to overflow much of the low land near its mouth.

At the termination of the war of Independence, the Six Nations Indians of the Mohawk valley, who had taken part with the British against the Americans, became apprehensive that consequences injurious to themselves might result from their hunting grounds being within the territory belonging to the United States. They accordingly deputed their chief, Joseph Brant, (Tyendenaga) to represent their fears to General, afterwards Sir F. Haldimand, who was then Governor of the Province of Quebec; and who, in the following year, by a proclamation, dated October 25, 1784, granted to the Six Nations and their heirs for ever, a tract of land on the Ouse, or Grand River, six miles in depth on each side of the river, beginning at Lake Erie, and extending to the head of the river. This grant was confirmed, and its conditions defined, by a patent under the Great Seal, issued by Lieutenant Governor Simcoe, and bearing date January 14, 1793.

The original extent of the tract was 694,910 acres, but the greater part of this has been since surrendered to the Crown, in trust, to be sold for the benefit of these tribes. And some smaller portions have been either granted in fee simple to purchasers, with the assent of the Indians, or have been alienated by the chiefs upon leases; which, although legally invalid, the government did not at the time consider it equitable or expedient to cancel. The following is a list of the principal surrenders:

January 15, and February 6, 1798.—The lands now forming the townships of Dumfries, Waterloo, Woolwich, and Nichol, extending downwards on both sides of the river from the northern extremity of the reserve; and the greater part of the townships of Canboro' and Moulton, on the eastern side of the entrance of the Grand River—352,707 acres.

April 19, 1830.—The site of the town of Brantford, on the Grand River—807 acres.

April 19, 1831.—The northern part of the present township of Cayuga, on the lower part of the river—20,670 acres.

February 8, 1834.—The residue of Cayuga, the present township of Dunn, (which adjoins that of Cayuga), and part of Canboro' and Moulton—50,212 acres.

March 26, 1835.—A confirmation of all the preceding surrenders.

January 18, 1841.—The residue of the land, with the exception of a reserve of 20,000 acres, and the lands actually in the occupation of Indians, amounting to upwards of 220,000 acres.

Of the earlier surrenders, the greater portion has been already sold, and the proceeds have been invested either in consols in England, or in the Grand River navigation stock. The survey of the portion last surrendered is not complete, but a considerable part is already occupied by settlers or squatters, and the whole will probably be soon settled.

The Six Nations consist properly of the Mohawks, Oneidas, Senecas, Onondagas, and Cayugas, which formed the original confederacy of the "Five Nations," called Iroquois, by the French, with the Tuscaroras, who were adopted into the confederacy. But the community on the Grand River includes also a few Delawares, Tutulies, Muntures, Nanticokes, and some other Indians, together with a few families of Negroes, adopted into the nation. The number of the whole, according to a census taken in 1843, is 2223. They are settled in small bands, divided according to their tribes, or collected under separate chiefs, on both sides of the river, from the Cayuga township line to the south side of the Hamilton Road; but are at present about to retire altogether to the south side. The greater part live in log houses, scattered over this tract; very few comparatively live in villages. Of these there are properly but three; the Mohawk, Tuscarora, and Cayuga. The first, which is between one and two miles from Brantford, was established in 1785, the year after the emigration of the Six Nations. It contains about twenty-four houses, and extends in a very irregular form, for above a quarter of a mile. Its church, which is said to be the oldest in Canada West, is a very neat building, in excellent repair, and contains the family vault of the celebrated Chief of the Mohawks, Joseph Brant. All the Indian inhabitants of this village, with the exception of four or five families, have sold their improvements to white settlers, and have removed to other parts of the reserve, chiefly for the convenience of procuring fuel, which they had great difficulty in obtaining at the village. The Tuscarora village is a mile and a half from the site of the Six Nations' Council House, which is eleven miles from Brantford. It was established ten or fifteen years later than the Mohawk village, and is of nearly the same extent; but the houses, of which there are about thirty, are less scattered. It contains few or no white settlers; and there is a neat little church at one end of the village. The Upper Cayuga village is now deserted by the Indians; the houses are all of logs, and in each settlement there are several barns. None of the Six Nations Indians reside in wigwams.

According to an account taken in 1843, it appears that the 2223 individuals, forming about 500 families, occupy 397 houses, having 55 barns attached to them. They possess 85 waggons, 127 sleighs, 153 ploughs, and 97 harrows. Their stock consists of 350 horses, 561 oxen, 790 cows, 2070 swine, and 83 sheep. The extent of improved land among them is, 6908 acres, or on an average, about fourteen acres to a family. Some, however, hold extensive farms, as will be seen by the following abstract:—

No. of Indians holding no improved land	50
do. do. under 5 acres	96
do. do. from 5 to 10 acres	85
do. do. do. 10 to 20 "	67
do. do. do. 20 to 50 "	68
do. do. do. 50 to 100 "	28
do. do. do. 100 to 150 "	9
do. do. do. 150 to 200 "	1

In those cases in which the family has no improved land, the men generally work out in the winter. In the spring and summer, and in the early part of the autumn, they engage as labourers, for which they receive high wages. The females remain with their relations, and are supported by the earnings of the men. Many of the Indians work on the farms of the white settlers during harvest time.

The land is not subdivided into regular plots, but each Indian selects his own locality, and takes as much land as he can cultivate, or wishes to reserve to himself, without the interference of the chiefs. They are generally secure from the intrusions of other Indians; and they can transmit their land to their heirs, or convey their interest in it to any other Indian. If any disputes arise, they are submitted to the chiefs in council, who decide upon the matter. They depend almost entirely upon agriculture for subsistence, and seldom resort to hunting and fishing for a supply of food; although many of them indulge in these sports for various periods, extending from a fortnight to three months, towards the close of the year. Their chief hunting-grounds are in the townships of Norwich, Zorra, Dereham, Windham, and Blenheim, and at the Chippawa Creek; but when unsuccessful at these places, they resort to more distant localities. At least one-third do not hunt at all; and it is probable, that by the time the game becomes exhausted in the surrounding townships, the inclination of the remainder for the chase will have altogether ceased. They are much improved in their habits of industry and mode of agriculture, and they raise a greater variety of grain and vegetables than formerly.

As regards religion, the Mohawks had been Christians for many years before the American revolution. The church at the Mohawk village was built by the government for their use, the year after the settlement. For many years, however, they had no resident missionary among them; the nearest clergyman lived at Niagara, seventy miles distant. About 16 years ago, a clergyman was first settled here for the benefit of the Indians, by the "Company for the Propagation of the gospel in New England, and the parts adjacent in America," commonly called the "New England Company." Some attention had been previously paid to the inhabitants of this neighbourhood, by one of the missionaries of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; but by an arrangement with the New England Company, the care of this station was entirely resigned to that company, who have ever since maintained a missionary at the Mohawk village, kept the church in repair, and have established several schools, and a mechanics' institute, for the Indians in and about the station. More recently they have established an assistant missionary in the Tuscarora village, where they have built a church and a parsonage house. There is also a Methodist church at the Salt Springs.

A large majority of the Indians on the Grand River are Christians, and belong mostly to the Church of England. A few years ago, some of the Lower Mohawks left that church and attached themselves to the Episcopalian Methodists; but lately, part of these have returned to the Church. During the last year, about forty of the Tuscarora tribe joined the Baptists: there are also some Wesleyan Methodists. A considerable number, however, of the Upper and Lower Cayugas, the Onondagas, Senecas, and some of the Delawares are still heathens.

A boarding School has been established by the New England Company in the Mohawk village. The instruction is carried on altogether in English. Fifteen boys are being instructed in the several trades of waggon making, blacksmith, carpentering, and shoemaking. The girls, twelve in number, are taught house-keeping, needlework, spinning and knitting. The total number of children under instruction in the settlement is 160. These tribes have increased by about 100, during the last ten years. The number of half-breeds among them is small, not above three in a hundred.

The Six Nations Indians are under the superintendence of an officer of the Indian Department, who resides at Brantford; and they receive medical attendance from practitioners in the same town, who are remunerated out of the funds of the tribe.

A large portion of the land on the banks of the Grand River is well settled and cultivated. The township of Dumfries, which has been settled about forty years, is the best settled township in the Province; and the townships of Waterloo, Guelph and Brantford, are also in a high state of cultivation. Most of the land on the Grand River is rolling, the timber varying according to locality, but being generally a mixture of hardwood and pine. Splendid white oak is found in great quantities, within a convenient distance from the river; and a considerable business is carried on in square timber, sawed lumber and staves. Gypsum of excellent quality has been found in large beds in the neighbourhood of Paris, in the township of Oneida, and in Cayuga: it is much used in agriculture, many of the farmers coming several miles to procure it. The flourishing towns and villages of Dunnville, Cayuga, Indiana, York, Seneca, Caledonia, Brantford, Paris, Galt, Preston, Elora (where is a beautiful fall), and Fergus, are situated on the Grand River.

The following produce passed through the Grand River during the season of 1844:—

The situation was well chosen, being in the midst of a finely undulating country, and is high, dry and healthy. The neighbourhood of the town is well settled by respectable families from the old country, principally English, many of whom came from Suffolk and Norfolk, and who have some very fine farms. The River Speed, a branch of the Grand River, runs past the town. The gaol and court house are built of stone, and are handsome structures; but are placed in a bad situation, being almost out of sight. The land having been taken up generally by respectable English families, most of whom brought some capital with them. The land is mostly rolling, and, when the country is well cleared up, will present as fine and picturesque an appearance as any township in the province. Excellent wheat is raised in this and the adjoining townships. The River Speed, a branch of the Grand River, runs nearly through the centre of the township, from north to south. There are in Guelph, three grist mills, two of which are in the town of Guelph, and two saw mills.

There are many very excellent farms in the township. The quality of the soil varies, some part being lilly and poor; but a large portion of the township consists of rolling land, with good timber. An extensive swamp runs through the north of the township. The villages of Sharon and Queensville, and part of Holland Landing, are in the township. An extensive marsh, varying in breadth from a quarter of a mile to a mile, and bordered by a tamarac swamp, extends from the bay to the south-west corner of the township. The west branch of the Holland River runs through the centre of this marsh. The east branch enters the township at the Holland Landing, and runs nearly a north course till it joins the east branch about three miles from the lake. Like the west branch, it is bordered by a broad marsh on the greatest part of its course. Above the "Forks" the navigation of the east branch is difficult, from the numerous bends and shallowness of the water. The steamboat "Beaver," however, manages to ascend within four miles of Holland Landing. The west branch is said to be navigable for seven or eight miles above Bradford. At the Bradford Bridge it is about ten feet deep. The soil of the township varies in quality: some of it is very good; other parts again are poor. HAMILTON.

The District Town of the Gore District, in the township of Barton and county of Wentworth; is situated in an extensive valley on the south side of Burlington Bay, at its western extremity. The town was laid out in the year 1813, by a Mr. Hamilton, from whom it derived its name. On account of the swamp in the vicinity of the bay, the principal part of the town has been placed about a mile back from the bay, on a gently rising ground. Immediately behind the town rises the mountain (to the height of at least 150 feet), or more correctly speaking, the high table land, which stretches away to the Niagara River. Previous to the completion of the Burlington Canal, vessels could not approach nearer than Burlington Beach, about ten miles from the town, where a custom-house and warehouses were established. Since the opening of the canal, the trade of the town has increased rapidly, and it is now the principal market for the western merchants. An immense amount of goods is annually imported.

Excellent freestone and limestone are procured from the mountain, which are of great advantage to the town, as the merchants are beginning to build almost exclusively of stone; and the town promises in a few years to become one of the handsomest on the continent of America. Many buildings are already erected with cut stone fronts: among the handsomest of these, are the Gore Bank and the Bank of British North America. The streets are well laid out. Some years since, a person offered to supply the town with water, conveyed from a spring on the mountain above the town; the height of which would have allowed of the water being carried to the very top of every house; provided the monopoly was secured to him for a certain number of years. His offer, however, was declined; had it been acceded to, it would have been of immense benefit to the town.

The first district court was held in Hamilton in the year 1822. The town was incorporated in 1833, and in the same year sent a representative to the House of Assembly. The population of Hamilton, according to a census taken in the summer of 1845, is 6475.

Excellent roads now stretch away in every direction, and stages leave Hamilton every day for London, Port Stanley, Chatham, Detroit, Port Dover, Galt and Guelph, Niagara and St. Catharines, and Toronto, and three times a-week for Goderich. The British steamboats "Eclipse" and "Queen," leave daily, during the season, for Toronto; and the American steamboat "Express," for Queenston and Niagara. Eleven schooners, whose collective tonnage amounts to 970 tons, and one barque of 230 tons, are owned here.

The public buildings and institutions consist of a stone jail and court-house, two market-houses (one of which is of brick, over which is the town hall, containing a room ninety by fifty feet, and fifteen feet high), custom house, post office, police office, engine house (with two engines), and theatre. There are eleven churches and chapels, viz., Episcopal, Presbyterian, Catholic, Free Church, Secession, Congregational, Wesleyan Methodist, Ryerson Methodist, Canadian Wesleyan, and two for coloured people, Baptist and Methodist.

There are two societies established for charitable purposes, "St George's" and "St. Andrew's." HOME DISTRICT.

Consists of the County of York and the City of Toronto. The county of York is divided into four ridings, each returning one member to the Legislative Assembly. The north riding comprises the townships of Brock, North Gwillimbury, East Gwillimbury, Georgina, Mara, Reach, Rama, Scott, Thorah, Uxbridge and Whitechurch. The south riding comprises the townships of Etobicoke, King, Vaughan, and York, and for the purposes of registration of titles only, the city of Toronto. The east riding comprises the townships of Markham, Pickering, Scarborough, and Whitby; and the west riding comprises the townships of Albion, Caledon, Chinguacousy, Toronto Gore, and Toronto township. The Home District is situated nearly in the centre of the Province, and is bounded on the east by the Newcastle and Colborne Districts; on the north by the Simcoe District, Lake Simcoe, and Lake Couchiching; on the west by the Simcoe, Wellington, and Gore Districts; and on the south by Lake Ontario. The Home District has been settled about fifty years, and in 1799 it contained only 224 inhabitants.

This district comprises a great variety of soil, and also a considerable difference in point of climate; the townships bordering on Lake Simcoe being about 530 feet above Lake Ontario. The land for from two to three miles back from the margin of Lake Ontario, is generally rather poor and sandy, with the exception of the cedar swamps, the soil of which is very rich. As you recede from the lake, the land improves in quality; and at from four to five miles from the lake you frequently come upon splendid wheat land. A succession of pine ridges traverses the district; running through the north of Whitby, and south of Reach, the centre of Uxbridge and Whitechurch, the centre of King and Albion, and the north of Caledon; and from thence into the Simcoe and Wellington Districts. The district is watered by the Credit, Humber, Don, Rouge, and the Holland Rivers, and the Etobicoke and Duffin's Creek; besides numerous other small streams, many of which are excellent mill streams, and are well studded with both grist and saw mills. The Nottawasaga River also takes its rise in this district. The northern townships in the district, although enjoying a fine climate, and containing excellent land, have hitherto been kept very much in the back-ground for want of good roads; some parts being altogether impassable for vehicles, except during the time when the (so called) roads were covered with snow, and others almost so during a large portion of the year. Even the principal road in the district, the great northern thoroughfare, with the exception of the sixteen miles (to Richmond Hill) which is macadamised, has generally been for some time during every spring, in such a state that no farmer having any regard for his horses would allow them to travel on it. It is now, however, under contract, and there is a prospect that in the course of two or three years, when the newly made road shall have settled down, the farmers in the townships about Lake Simcoe may be able to bring their produce to Toronto market. Good roads into the interior of the northern back townships are still however very much wanted.

Next to the Gore District, the Home is the best settled district in the Province. The road for eighteen miles along the Kingston road from Toronto is planked; and the Yonge Street road is macadamised to Richmond Hill (sixteen miles), and the Dundas Street to Cooksville (sixteen miles). The former is now to be macadamised as far as the Holland Landing, and the latter for some distance farther westward.

The principal town in the district is Toronto, the district town, and formerly the capital of the Upper Province; and there are besides in the district the villages of Oshawa and Windsor in Whitby; Markham, Richmond Hill, and Thornhill, in Markham; Newmarket, in Whitechurch; Holland Landing, partly in East and partly in West Gwillimbury; Lloydtown, in King; Mimico and Weston, in Etobicoke; Cooksville, Springfield, Port Credit, Streetsville, and Churchville, in Toronto; besides numerous others of less note. In the Home District 24,410 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre; to purchase any of which, application must be made to the Crown Lands Agent, at Toronto. These lands are situated principally in the townships of Mara, Georgina, East and North Gwillimbury, Brock, Thorah, and Rama. Nearly 30,000 acres of land have been brought into cultivation between January, 1842, and January, 1844.

Population of the district in 1842, 58,853; since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the Assessment Rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district:—

There is but little pine in the district. The district is watered by the Maitland and Bayfield Rivers, and also by the River Aux Sables and the Thames; the former of which is an excellent mill stream, and the mouth of it forms the Goderich Harbour. The Great Swamp, as it is called, which is situated to the north of the Huron Tract, encroaches on the townships of McKillop, Logan and Ellice. In this swamp the rivers Maitland, Saugeen, Bayfield, Thames, and it is believed also the Grand River, take their rise. The Canada Company were allowed by the government 100,000 acres of land as compensation for any loss that might arise to them from the swamp forming any part of their purchase. The Huron District is settled almost exclusively by emigrants from England, Ireland, and Scotland, and a few Germans. Goderich, the district town, is handsomely and healthily situated on Lake Huron. There are no Crown lands for sale in the district, except in the townships of Ashfield and Wawanosh; in which 86,500 acres are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre (a town has been laid out by the Crown in the township of Ashfield, on the lake shore, in which town lots are sold at £5 currency each); to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown lands agent at Goderich.

Population in 1845, 13,500.

HURON LAKE.

The second lake in point of size in Canada. It is 218 miles in length, and 180 broad at its widest part, and 594 feet above the level of the sea. On the east it is bordered by Indian reserves, the Huron District, and the northern portion of the Western District; on the north, altogether by wild and unoccupied lands; and on the west by the United States. It receives the waters of Lake Superior and Lake Michigan, and discharges itself into the River St. Clair. A large wing of the lake, called the "Georgian Bay," extends itself in a south-easterly direction for about a hundred miles, including within its bounds the harbours of Owen Sound, Nottawasaga Bay, Penetanguishene Bay, and Gloster Bay; and it is connected by means of the Severn River (which, however, is not navigable) with Lake Simcoe.

The Georgian Bay is studded with islands, several thousands in number, and varying in size, from a few square feet to many acres. The scenery of the bay is very beautiful.

A large island, called the Great Manitoulin, about 100 miles in length, and from four to twenty-five miles wide, is situated in the north of Lake Huron; and several smaller islands are scattered around it. The Great Manitoulin, however, is the only one inhabited. The waters of the lake are remarkably pure and clear: they have been gradually rising during the last few years; and many parts along the south-east shore, where three or four years ago there were several yards of sandy and gravelly beach, between the base of the cliffs and the water's edge, are now under water. The banks of the lake vary in height, in some parts being low and sandy, and in others high clay banks, at least 120 feet in height. Lake Huron is rather subject to sudden storms, and the south of the lake is deficient in good harbours, the principal of which are Goderich and Saugeen. Vessels, however, if caught in a storm on the lake, if not too far to the north, generally run down for shelter to the bay in the River St. Clair, above Port Sarnia, formed by the projection of Point Edward; and sometimes in bad weather, a dozen vessels may be seen at anchor here at one time.

There are as yet but few British steamboats on Lake Huron; but, as the country bordering on the lake and the Georgian Bay becomes settled up, these will gradually increase in number.

This is rather a rough township; that portion of it bordering on Lake Simcoe and its bays, is mostly wild land; the cause of which is said to be its being in the hands of absentees. In the centre of the township are some pretty good farms. A large swamp extends for some distance along the town line between Innisfil and Essa, and reaches into Tecumseth and West Gwillimbury. The surveyor who originally surveyed the township states, that although there are a large number of cedar swamps in it, still that every lot possesses sufficient good land to make a farm. 2200 acres of Crown Lands are open for sale in Innisfil at 8s. currency

The Rideau Canal runs through the north and west of the district. There is a considerable quantity of good land in the district, although a large portion of that bordering on the canal and lakes is poor and rocky. Altogether the District is well settled, and contains some good farms. The inhabitants are principally Scotch and Irish. Brockville, the district town, is handsomely situated, and contains some good stone buildings. Thirteen thousand three hundred and fifty-five acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the Johnstown District, at 8s. e'y, per acre, to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown Lands Agent at Prescott.

KINGSTON.

The District Town of the Midland District, in the township of Kingston, situated on Lake Ontario, 199 miles from Montreal and 177 from Toronto. It was incorporated in the year 1838. It is a fine healthy situation, but having a barren back country, its principal dependence for support was upon the carrying trade, until the removal of the Seat of Government from Toronto, by Lord Sydenham in June, 1841, when the town began rapidly to improve. Handsome stone buildings were erected, and the inhabitants, supposing that Kingston would continue to be the capital of the Province, went to considerable expense in improving, not merely the public buildings, but also their places of business and private dwellings. However, the Seat of Government being again removed (to Montreal) they have been thrown back upon their old resources, burdened with the expenses of their improvements. This, for a time, was a great shock to the town; but it is beginning gradually to recover its prosperity. What effect the opening of the St. Lawrence Canals, and the enlarging the locks of the Welland Canal, will have upon it, remains to be seen. Hitherto, all the up and down freight has been transhipped at Kingston, to either larger or smaller vessels, according as it has been going up or down; in carrying which a fleet of about 200 barges and schooners, of from 60 to 250 tons burthen, has been employed. As soon as the improvements in the canals are completed, large vessels will be enabled to run direct up from Montreal to Toronto and Hamilton, thus avoiding Kingston altogether. There are ten daily steamboats running to and from Kingston.

The principal public building in Kingston, is the market house, as it is called, although the market occupies but a small portion of it. This is the finest and most substantial building in Canada, being built entirely of hewn stone, and cost about $90,000. In the front portion of the building are the Post Office, Offices of the Corporation Officers, News and Reading Room; above is the Town Hall a large and handsome room, used occasionally as a ball and assembly room, and arranged for six quadrille parties. Another room opposite, on the same floor, and the same size, but more handsomely finished, is let to the Free Church congregation for religious services: it will comfortably accommodate 500 persons. The dome at the top of the building is surrounded in the interior by a gallery, from whence a fine view may be obtained of the town of Kingston and the surrounding country, including Lake Ontario, with the islands in the vicinity.

The Presbyterians have a collegiate institution, called "Queen's College and University of Kingston." The court house is a square stone building. There are ten churches and chapels, viz., three Episcopal, two Catholic, one Presbyterian, two Methodist (British Wesleyan and Canadian Wesleyan), Baptist, and Irvingite. The hospital is supported partly by government and partly by voluntary contributions. The "Hotel Dieu," is attended by sisters of charity. There is a news and reading room, and a Mechanics' Institute.

Five newspapers are published weekly—the "Chronicle & Gazette," "Herald," "British Whig," "News," and "Argus."

A marine railway was established here in 1827, for the purpose of hauling out and repairing vessels. The railway is 572 feet in length, worked by four horses, with machinery giving a multiplying power of 215 times, thus producing 860 horse power, and a capacity for hauling out a vessel of 300 tons. The also a small railway for hauling out river boats and barges. A shipyard is connected with the railway.

There is a mineral spring, "Boyle's," at the corner of King and Arthur streets, the water of which was obtained by boring 75 feet. The following analysis of the water was by Professor Croft, of King's College, Toronto:—

A bridge a third of a mile in length has been constructed across the Cata-raqui Bay, on the opposite side of which, on an eminence commanding the entrance to the bay and the town of Kingston, is situated Fort Henry; and below the hill, on the bay, are the marine barracks. A large portion of the town, called "Lot Twenty-four," and the village of Portland, are not included within the limits of the corporation.

At Portsmouth Harbour, about two miles west from the market house, is the Penitentiary, a large stone building, surrounded by a substantial stone wall, having towers at the outer corners; at present containing about 400 convicts. (This is the only Penitentiary in the Province, consequently this number includes the convicts of both the Upper and Lower Provinces.) Here are workshops for carpenters, blacksmiths, shoemakers, tailors, and a rope walk. The cells are so arranged that the keepers, without being perceived, can at all times ascertain what is going on within. The establishment appears to be well regulated.

A short distance from the Penitentiary, are baths and mineral springs, which have been much frequented by health and pleasure seekers. There are two wells; the first was discovered in the year 1843, in boring for water for the use of the neighbouring distillery; it is near the edge of the lake, and the water was obtained by boring through the rock, to the depth of 145 feet. The other well is higher up the bank, and the water was found at about eighty-five feet from the surface. The following is an analysis of the water of the two wells, by Professor Williamson, of Queen's College:—

A saloon and bath house have been erected.

There is also in the neighbourhood a marine railway and shipyard, and an extensive establishment consisting of brewery, distillery, and saleratus factory. The brewery and saleratus factory are connected together, and the saleratus is very ingeniously and economically made, by exposing pearlash to the action of the carbonic acid gas, which is generated during the fermentation of the beer, and which is conveyed to the room containing the pearlash. The proprietor offers to supply 2000 lbs. per day.

The population of the town of Kingston, within the limits of the corporation, is 6123 (being 1700 less than before the removal of the Seat of Government); including "Lot Twenty-four" and the village of Portland, it amounts to between 11,000 and 12,000.

Ratable property in the town, £146,766.

Post Office, post every day.

LAKE ONTARIO.

Is about 181 miles in length; and, in its widest part, about 60 in breadth. It receives the waters of the upper lakes from the Niagara River, and discharges them into the St. Lawrence. It is the safest of the three lakes to navigate, having several excellent harbours; the principal of which are 'Toronto, Presqu' Isle (opposite the village of Brighton), Kingston and Port Hope; besides almost innumerable bays about the Prince Edward District, the Bay of Quintè, and the Islands. By cutting a canal of about a mile in length, between the lake and the Bay of Quintè, the Prince Edward District would become an island in Lake Ontario. There are several considerable islands scattered over the eastern extremity of the lake; the principal of which are Wolfe Island, Amherst Island, Garden Island, Gage Island, &c. At the western extremity of the lake is a large bay, called "Burlington Bay," on which is situated the town of Hamilton. The Niagara River enters the lake about forty-five miles from its western extremity. Lake Ontario is 234 feet above the level of the sea: it is never frozen over; and steamboats frequently run across from Toronto to Niagara throughout the winter, when the weather is fine. The principal towns situated on the lake are Toronto, Kingston, Hamilton (on Burlington Bay), Port Hope, and Belleville (on the Bay of Quintè).

LONDON DISTRICT.

Consists of the County of Middlesex, which comprises the townships of Adelaide, Aldborough, Bayham, Carradoc, Delaware, Dorechester, Dunwich, Ekfrid, Lobo, London, Metcalfe, Mosa, Malahide, Southwold, Westminster, Williams, Yarmouth, and, except for the purpose of representation in the Legislative Assembly, the town of London. The London District, which formerly included the present district of Huron, is bounded on the east by the Talbot and Brock Districts; on the north by the Huron District; on the west by the Western District; and on the south by Lake Erie.

The district is watered by the River Thames, the north or principal branch of which enters the district in the east of the township of London; in the south of the township it receives the east branch; it then flows south, and afterwards south-west, forming the dividing boundary between the townships of Lobo, Caradoc, Ekfrid, and Mosa, on the north; and Westminster, Delaware, Southwold, Dunwich, and Aldborough, on the south. The district is also watered by Otter Creek, Kettle Creek, Bear Creek, Catfish Creek, and the River Aux Sables.

This is a district containing a large portion of very excellent land; there is some poor land in it, but the quantity is comparatively small. The land in the district is mostly rolling, and on the banks of all the rivers and creeks there are many beautiful situations for farms. Some parts of the district have been settled about forty years, and are now in a high state of cultivation. The oldest settled town in the district is St. Thomas, which was laid out about thirty years since. The town of London, the present district town, was laid out in the year 1826, at which time the "London" was declared a separate district. Previous to the building of London the village of Vittoria, in the township of Charlotteville, now in the Talbot District, was the district town. The best settled townships in the district, are Yarmouth, London, Westminster, Southwold, and Malahide. Yarmouth, London, Delaware, Malahide, Carradoc, Adelaide, Dunwich, Aldborough, and Lobo, are settled principally by emigrants from Great Britain and Ireland. Westminster is settled principally by Americans and Pennsylvanian Dutch. Most of the settlers in the London District are in comfortable circumstances, and many of them have become independent. Many of the farms have large clearings, and are in a good state of cultivation, with flourishing orchards. Excellent roads are made through the district, leading from the town of London to Brantford and Hamilton, Galt and Guelph, and Goderich, Chatham, Port Sarnia, and Stanley; the latter of which is planked, and passes through the flourishing village of St. Thomas.

Large quantities of fine wheat and other grain are grown in this district and exported; and a considerable business is carried on, on the different mill streams, in sawed lumber, much of which is exported. Eighteen thousand acres of land were brought into cultivation between January, 1842, and January, 1844.

The principal towns and villages in the district are London, in the township of London; St. Thomas and Port Stanley, in Yarmouth; Delaware in Delaware; and Richmond and Vienna, in Bayham.

In the London District 600 acres only of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre, to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown lands agent at London.

Population in 1842, 31,350, since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district.

LONDON.

The District Town of the London District, situated in the township of London, on the River Thames, eighty-five miles from Hamilton, twenty-six from Port Stanley, and seventeen from St. Thomas. The town was laid out in 1826 by the Crown, on land reserved by Governor Simcoe; it returned a member in 1836, and was incorporated in 1840. It is finely situated, being in the midst of a beautiful country, and at the point of junction of the two branches of the River Thames.

London possesses a handsome jail and court house, built of brick in the form of a castle; the building of the two cost above £10,000. Large barracks, capable of accommodating a regiment, and Artillery barracks in addition, both of which are occupied. A fire company with one engine, a theatre, and two market buildings. Within the last two years London has been twice nearly destroyed by fire. The Episcopal Church was burnt down in February, 1844; a large subscription was raised to rebuild it, and London can now boast of possessing the handsomest gothic church in Canada West. It was designed by Mr. Thomas, Architect, of Toronto (late of Leamington, England). Its erection cost nearly £5000. A fire took place on the 8th October, 1844, when a large portion of the town was burnt; a second fire occurred on the 12th April, 1845, when about 150 buildings were consumed. Building, however, has been proceeded with rapidly; and in place of the old frame buildings, handsome streets have been erected, composed of brick buildings three and four stories high.

Excellent roads stretch away in every direction. A plank road has been formed to Port Stanley, and a plank and macadamized road to Brantford. New roads have also been completed to Chatham and Port Sarnia. Stages leave London daily for Hamilton, Chatham, and Detroit, and all intermediate places; three times a-week for Port Sarnia and Port Stanley; and twice a-week for Goderich.

A weekly newspaper, the "Times," is published here.

Churches and chapels, 10; viz., Episcopal, two Presbyterian, Catholic, British Wesleyan, Canadian Wesleyan, Episcopal Methodist, Congregational, Baptist (for coloured people), and Universalist.

In its course it flows through, and receives accessions from, several lakes, some of them of considerable size. Large quantities of lumber are cut on its banks, and slides and dams have been constructed in the river, in order to facilitate the passage of lumber down it. It was estimated that of

Red Pine.....	1,099,000 feet, and of
White Pine.....	354,000 feet,

The principal island in Lake Huron; it is about one hundred miles in length, and in breadth varies from four to twenty-five miles; it is indented by an almost innumerable number of bays, and the scenery is in many parts magnificent. In summer, the sun is very hot on these islands, and vegetation exceedingly rapid. The Great Manitoulin is settled exclusively by Indians; the only whites on the island being those attached to the government station at Manitowawning, (Hudson's Sound) and two or three at the Roman Catholic village at Wequemakong, (Smith's Bay). The island is frequently visited by Indian traders. Manitowawning is about 190 miles from Penetanguishine, and 176 from Goderich.

Previously to the year 1829, the distribution of presents to a large portion of the Indians, included under the term "western tribes," consisting of the visiting Indians, north of Penetanguishine; of those at Sault St. Marie, and on the shores of Lake Superior; of those from the south-west, and Lake Michigan, Green Bay, the Fox River, Wisconsin, even from the distant Mississippi, was made at Drummond's island, the old military post on Lake Huron.

In that year the island having been finally ceded to the Americans, and the government being desirous of ascertaining the disposition of the Indians to embrace civilization, the distribution was made at the island of St. Joseph's, about nine miles north-west from Drummond's island.

The proposition of settling at Manitou appears to have been founded on a report from Major Winnett, in the early part of the same year, in which, in reference to the civilization of the Indians he stated that the Great Manitoulin island offered greater advantages for the formation of a settlement for the Indians than St. Joseph's could present, with respect to soil, climate, and lake fishing; the last a great object in the estimation of old Indians. It is distant one hundred miles and upwards from any American military post, and between sixty and seventy from any part of the American territory.

In 1830, and the following five years, the distribution of presents was made at Penetanguishine, and thus, the western tribes were brought within the influence of the efforts of the government to civilize them. Their visits to the prosperous settlements at Coldwater and the Narrows were frequent; they witnessed the advantages enjoyed by their brethren who were settled there and applications were consequently numerous for a participation in the same benefits. In 1835, after Mr. Superintendent Anderson had visited the island, a scheme was matured and authorised by Sir John Colborne, for forming an extensive establishment upon it, and for making it the future place of distribution, instead of Penetanguishine, and Amherstburg, where the remainder of the western tribes had previously been supplied.

In the spring of that year, Mr. Anderson found, on his visit, five or six families of the Ottawa tribe, Roman Catholics, from Lake Michigan, settled in Wequamekong Bay (Smith's sound), where they had cultivated two or three acres of land, and were living in temporary bark huts; these, and a few wandering Chippewas, were all the Indians he met with on the island, amounting to perhaps seventy or eighty persons.

In 1836 the present settlement at Manitowawning, (Hudson's Sound), about eight miles distant from Wequamekong, was commenced, some land was cleared and houses built. It does not appear how many Indians were settled on the island this year. The first issue of presents at this post was made in the autumn, and was attended by 2697 individuals. On this occasion the Lieut. Governor, Sir F. B. Head, was present, and formed the view of collecting at Manitoulin, not the wild Indians from the north of Lake Huron, as had been at first proposed, but all those who had settled, or were wandering among the white population, in various parts of Upper Canada. With this intention he induced the chiefs of the Ottawa and Chippewa nations then present, to resign their exclusive rights to the occupancy of the Great Manitoulin, and all the other islands, estimated at above 23,000, on the north shore of Lake Huron.

He also obtained from the Saugeen Indians the surrender of the greater proportion of their territory, and proposed their removal to Manitoulin. To other Indians whom he visited in the western parts of Canada, he likewise made the same proposals; offering them the assistance and encouragement of the government at this island. These offers, however, do not appear to have been generally acceptable to the settled Indians, as few or none availed themselves of them. The settlers at the island have, for the most part, come from the United States, or from the shores of Lake Huron and Lake Superior.

In 1837, further progress was made in clearing land and building houses; the number of settlers on the island was reckoned at 268.

In the autumn of 1838, the officers appointed to form the future establishment of this settlement, including the superintendent, Mr. Anderson, a clergyman of the church of England, and a surgeon, with several artisans and labourers, arrived at Manitowawning, and took up their residence there, being the first white men who had wintered in the island. This year the number of Indian settlers was 307.

In the following year the clearings were extended; a saw mill was built; and the number of settlers increased to 655. A school was commenced at Manitowawning, but it was ill attended; the Roman Catholics at the other settlement would not allow their children to frequent it.

In 1840, 732 Indians reported themselves as settlers, of whom only 437 were Christians.

In 1841, many Pottawatamies from the River St. Clair, who had promised to settle, and some Ottawas and Chippewas from Lake Michigan, returned to their homes; but the actual number thus reduced was not recorded. Some Indian houses, a carpenter's shop, and a smith's, were erected. The school was better attended, and eight Indian boys were in the course of instruction in different branches of handicraft. A School was also opened by a Roman Catholic schoolmaster in the other settlement.

In 1842, twenty-five Indian houses were built by contract, and a large store, cooper's shop, and barn, were erected by the mechanics attached to the establishment. A saw mill was also nearly finished at Wequemakong Bay. The attendance at the Roman Catholic school had fluctuated greatly; at one time as many as seventy pupils were present, but more frequently from five to twenty, and at some seasons not one. The number at the Manitowawning school had not exceeded forty-five, but it had never fallen below twelve.

On the 15th November, there were resident at Wequemakong, ninety-four families, and at Manitowawning forty-four families, making together 138 families, which on an average of four members to a family, would form a population of 552. The number settled, or wandering in other parts of the island, and living in wigwams, or temporary bark huts, was estimated at 150 at least, making a total population of 702.

The following is the present size and extent of the two settlements; each occupies about 200 acres of land. The several houses are surrounded with gardens, and the farms are for the most part at a distance. This arrangement was resorted to, with a view of preserving their crops from the cattle, without the trouble of making enclosures; but it has not answered the intention, as the cattle roam much farther than was expected, and it has been found necessary to commence fencing.

The Wequemakong village, which has been longest established, contains in all seventy-eight buildings, viz., seventy-three Indian houses, one for the missionary, and another for the schoolmaster, a church, a school-house, and a saw-mill.

The Manitowawning village contains fifty-five buildings, viz., thirty-seven Indian houses, six of the same description occupied by the mechanics and labourers, four larger houses, occupied by the superintendent, missionary, surgeon, and schoolmaster, three shops (blacksmiths', carpenters', and coopers'), an excellent frame store, of sixty by thirty feet, and two stories in height, one log barn, a school-house, a saw-mill (built by contract in 1839), and a sawyer's house, and a church has since been erected. Besides these there are, in both villages, a number of outhouses for cattle, small storehouses, &c.

All the buildings are of wood; those of the latter village have been erected either by the resident artisans in the employment of the government, or by contract. Those at Wequemakong having been chiefly built by the Indians themselves, with the assistance of nails and glass, axes, &c. afforded by the government, are neither so neat nor substantial as the others.

Soon after the commencement of the settlement of the Manitoulin, doubts were entertained as to the climate and fertility of the island, and its fitness for the residence of the Indians, which increased the reluctance of the Indians settled in the more southern portions of the province, to resort to the island, and has continued to prove an obstacle to the increase of the settlement. These objections having been represented to the Secretary of State, his Lordship suggested that an enquiry should be made on the spot by Major Bonnycastle, of the Royal Engineers. The result has not come under the notice of the commissioners, but the reports of the resident Agent leave no reason to doubt that the island is in every way suited for habitation. The climate is very healthy; the temperature is moderate; the winter sets in about the beginning of November; the cold is not unusually severe; the snow seldom lies more than two feet deep, and the spring opens about the middle of April. The formation of the islands is limestone. The soil is generally a mixture of clay and sand, with limestone pebbles. Some parts of the island are stony, but there is abundance of land favourable for cultivation. The cedar swamps on the high land, of which perhaps one-third of the island consists, though at present wet in the fall and spring, appear to be land of the finest quality, being of a deep black loam, and free from stone. When these are opened and exposed to the sun, they will become dry, and fit for any kind of cultivation. The timber of the uplands is of the usual kinds of hard wood met with in other parts of the province, viz., maple, basswood, elm, red and white oak, pine, &c. &c. Both the soil and climate are favourable to cultivation, abundant crops of all kinds of grain raised by the Indians in other parts of the province, have been annually produced. Cattle thrive well; during the winter they are allowed to roam about and find their own food in the bush. In 1842, a few sheep were added to the stock. There is not much game on the island, but fish is in abundance on its shores.

The Indians collected here, belong chiefly to the Ottawa and Chippewa tribes; the former, who immigrated from the United States, have all their lives been Indian farmers: some of them brought horses and stock to the island. On their arrival they sought no other means of subsistence than the produce of the soil, and the fish they caught in the immediate neighbourhood of their own village; and in the autumn, each family cured a sufficiency to supply them through the winter; consequently it was not necessary for them to leave their homes in search of food, nor to trust, like the Chippewas, to the precarious resource of spearing fish through the ice.

The Chippewas, on the other hand, who had never, until collected at Manitoulin, cultivated the soil, were slow in adopting a new mode of life. For some time they were reluctant to settle in a fixed place of residence; they frequently shifted their camps, and although many of them lived within a day's journey from the new settlement, and admitted the benefits arising from a change of life, still it required much persuasion and perseverance to induce them to make a commencement.

The Ottawas, moreover, had long been converted from heathenism, and were members of the Roman Catholic church. In 1838, they were joined by a priest of that persuasion, who has since resided with them at Wequemakong. The Chippewas, on the contrary, were all heathens, and the work of conversion only commenced among them in the same year, when a missionary of the Church of England, attached to the establishment, arrived at the island.

These differences will account for the greater increase of the settlement at Wequemakong, and its more rapid progress in the cultivation of the land, and the acquisition of stock, which are exhibited in the following table:—

Extent of Land cleared, and of Stock owned at the two Settlements in Feb. 1843:

	WEQUEMAKONG.	MANITOWAWNING.
Acres of Land cleared	200	140
Horses	19	2
Horned Cattle	58	24
Pigs	161	17
Sheep.....	8	11
Barn-door Fowls.....	157	62
Geese.....	—	8

Some families have perhaps ten acres or more cleared, whilst others have only a patch under cultivation. Their principal support at both villages is now derived from farming and fishing; they sometimes kill hares, partridges, and even deer and bears. They also manufacture considerable quantities of maple sugar of very excellent quality; for which they find a ready market at Penetanguishene, Goderich, and sometimes in the towns on the American frontier.

The land in the village is laid out in half acre lots, and a few farms of fifty acres were in the commencement surveyed and staked out; but the labour and expense were found too great, and each Indian now selects such place as he pleases, and takes possession of it, in most cases, without consulting the superintendent or chiefs. As long as he continues to cultivate his piece of land, he enjoys quiet possession of it; but if he happens to leave it for a season, some other Indian will most likely enter upon it; and in such cases, there is frequently a difficulty in arranging the matter amicably.

With regard to their mode of agriculture, they are improving but slowly. They are now beginning to plough their old fields, to make more substantial fences, to cultivate garden vegetables, &c. Each individual cultivates his farm separately.

Formerly the Ottawas were pretty well supplied with hoes, and an inferior kind of small axe. The Chippewas had a smaller quantity of the same implements. Both tribes, in planting, supplied the deficiency with a crooked stick conveniently shaped for the purpose. At present the government has supplied them with a sufficiency of these articles, and with a few spades, shovels, ploughs, harrows, pick-axes, &c.

The men, of all ages, do most of the chopping, but after that, men, women, and children take share in the labour, from the burning of the timber to the reaping of the crop.

The fondness of the converted Indians for hunting and fishing is decidedly diminished. They seldom leave the island for either purpose. They occasionally go out spearing fish at night, or set their nets in the evening, and take them up early in the morning; they also spend from six to fifteen days in the autumn to lay in a stock of fish for the winter. A large proportion of the Chippewas are still heathens; there were received into the Church of England in

1836-7	5, all adults
1839	38 "
1840	84 "

Making a total of 172, together with 30 converts from the Roman Catholic Church.

Since August, 1841, the superintendent reports, that he is not aware that even one adult heathen has been brought into the church since that time. The principal obstacles to the conversion of the heathens are stated to be their superstition—their fear that the "great spirit" they worship should visit them with his vengeance, were they to become Christians—their fear of not being allowed to drink whiskey—the bad advice of traders, who erroneously suppose it will destroy their trade—and among those who have a plurality of wives, an objection to turn them away.

The Ottawa tribes, who subsist by agriculture, are supposed to be rapidly on the increase; and the Chippewas, who live chiefly on fish, to be on the decrease. Among the former, it is not unusual to meet with families having six or seven, and sometimes even ten or twelve children all living; although in many instances, they do not rear one-half of the number born. The Chippewas are neither so prolific, nor so successful in rearing their children. In both tribes, the adults seldom reach an advanced age. The proportion of half-breeds among them is not above one in twenty.

The establishment at Manatowanning is under the local superintendent. There is a resident surgeon, a clergyman of the Church of England, a schoolmaster, a master carpenter, a blacksmith, a millwright, a mason, a cooper, a shoemaker, a sawyer, and six labourers, supported by the Parliamentary grant. The schoolmaster at Wequemakong is paid out of the same fund, but the priest is maintained by the church to which he belongs.

Owing to the infrequency and difficulty of communication with the main land, it has hitherto been deemed necessary to engage a certain number of mechanics and labourers by the year. Part of the buildings, however, have been erected by contract, during the summer months; and in this manner, as many as twenty-five were built in 1842. The Roman Catholic village appears to be entirely under the charge of the priest.

The remaining bands, which are widely scattered over the island, have no local superintendents, but are under the general care of the chief superintendent. The settlements are altogether twelve in number. Four schooner loads of maple sugar were shipped from Wequemakong, during the spring of 1845; much of which was equal in appearance to any Brazil or West India sugar.

In Mara 9,514 acres are taken up, 799 of which are under cultivation. This is a new township not long settled; but it contains some very good land; and on the lake shore there are some good clearings. A village, called "Atherly," was laid out here (close to the Narrows) in 1843, by Captain Creighton, a gentleman who possesses a considerable quantity of land in the township, bordering on Lake Simcoe.

A road is in course of formation from the Narrows (where an excellent bridge has been constructed) to Scugog; whence a plank road is formed to Windsor Bay on Lake Ontario, which, when completed, will be a great benefit to the neighbouring townships, admitting of easy transportation for all farm produce to the lake.

The steamboat "Beaver" stops at Atherly to take in wood.

This is the second township in the province, in point of cultivation and amount of ratable property (Dumfries being the first). It is well settled, and contains many excellent and well cultivated farms. The land is generally rolling, and the timber a mixture of hardwood and pine. The village of Markham is situated in the south-east of the township; and the villages of Richmond Hill and Thornhill are partly in the township, being situated on the Yonge Street Road. Marmora has been long noted for the excellence and richness of its iron ore, which is said to yield seventy-five per cent. of iron of the best quality. There is no doubt that this township alone, under proper management, would be capable of furnishing sufficient iron for the consumption of the whole of British North America. Some years since a large sum was expended in erecting works for the purpose of smelting; but the speculation unfortunately fell through, for want of sufficient capital. There is one grist and one saw mill in the township. Marmora is but little settled, much of the land being unfit for cultivation. Sixteen thousand three hundred and forty-three acres of Crown lands are open for sale in this township, at 8s. currency per acre.

In the north-west of the township is a small lake, called the "Lake of the Mountain," situated on the summit of a hill, at a considerable height above the level of Lake Ontario. A range of hills runs nearly across the north-east portion of the township. A large proportion of the land in the north-east of Marysburgh is good; but in the south-east it is generally poor, and is covered with cedar, a considerable quantity of which is exported. The village of Milford is situated in the west corner of the township; and there are three grist and ten saw mills in the township.

present village was only commenced in 1844: it contains fourteen houses and a barn. The number of the band is 232: they have about 100 acres under cultivation. The majority of these Indians are Roman Catholics; they have not as yet any place of worship or school. In the former settlement they were occasionally visited by the Roman Catholic priest resident at Penetanguishene.

The townships in the south-west and south of the district, comprising Kingston, Ernestown, Fredericksburgh, Camden, and Richmond, contain excellent land. The northern townships are some of them but little settled, and Kennebec and Kalador, Olden and Oso, are altogether vacant. Much of the land in the north and east is poor and rocky and unfit for cultivation, but land of excellent quality is said to have been lately discovered to the north of Kingston.

The principal towns and villages in the district are Kingston, the district town, and lately the seat of government for the province, in the township of Kingston; Napanee, in Richmond; and Bath, in Ernestown. NEWCASTLE DISTRICT.

Consists of the counties of Northumberland and Durham. This district formerly comprised the townships to the north, which have since been separated from it, and formed into the Colborne district, which bounds it on the north; on the east it is bounded by the Victoria District; on the west by the Home District; and on the south by Lake Ontario. Rice Lake commences in the north-west of the township of Hamilton, and, with its continuation, the River Trent, separates the district from that of Colborne, as far as the township of Seymour, through which it runs from north to south; it then follows a west course through the north of Murray, into the township of Sidney, makes a bend and runs south and a little west till it re-enters Murray; in which township it emerges into the Bay of Quinté. The Skugog Lake is situated in the north and centre of the township of Cartwright; and the district is watered besides by numerous excellent mill streams; one of the best of which is, that which enters Lake Ontario at Port Hope.

The land in this district varies in quality, most of it, however, is sufficiently good for agricultural purposes. A range of Oak Plains, called "Rice Lake Plains," extends through the township of Murray, the north of Cramahe, and Haldimand, the centre of Hamilton and Hope, and a small portion of Clarke. These plains were formerly difficult of sale, and would not command more than 4s. currency per acre, till they were discovered by some settlers from the neighbourhood of Brantford, who had been accustomed to farming the oak plains, and knew their value, and who made some purchases of part of them. These soon astonished their neighbours by the facility with which they cleared the land, and the excellence of their wheat crops; the latter having supposed, from the light and sandy nature of the soil, that it was valueless. The consequence was, that the oak plains became in demand; and instead of four shillings per acre, they now fetch four dollars! The land in the Newcastle District is generally rolling.

The townships in front of the district are all very well settled, the farms are well cleared and in a good state of cultivation, and most of the houses have orchards attached to them. The district is peopled principally by emigrants from Great Britain and Ireland, most of whom are in good circumstances. Large quantities of wheat and other grain, all of excellent quality, are raised in the district. A new gravelled road has lately been made from Port Hope to Rice Lake.

Cobourg, the district town, is well laid out, and is a place of considerable business. Port Hope, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Colborne, Grafton, Brighton, and Trent, are also thriving villages.

Four thousand five hundred and fifty acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the district, at 8s. currency per acre, to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown lands agent at Port Hope.

Population in 1842, 32,033; since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the Assessment Rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district:—

The district is bounded on the north by Lake Ontario; on the east by the Niagara River; on the south by Lake Erie; and on the west by the Gore and Talbot districts. The principal part of the district consists of a high table land, about 150 feet above the level of the lake, which approaches at Stony Creek to within about a mile and a half of the lake; it then gradually recedes till it crosses the Niagara River above Queenston, seven miles from Lake Ontario. This is a very old settled district, a large part of it having been peopled soon after the American war of independence. The foundation of the table land consists of limestone and freestone, which are worked at different places; water-lime and gypsum are also found in considerable quantities in the townships of Oneida, Cayuga, and Thorold. The land of the district is mostly rolling, it is generally of very good quality, consisting for the most part of a mixture of clay and loam, in those portions timbered with hardwood, and light sandy soil where the timber consists of pine. In some parts of the district, as in the neighbourhood of the town of Niagara, are extensive oak plains; the most easily cleared, and cultivated of any kind of land, and under proper cultivation producing wheat of excellent quality.

A large portion of the district is settled by Americans and their descendants, and native Canadians, and there are also a considerable number of Pennsylvanian Dutch, neither of whom make first-rate farmers; so that, although the farms in the district are as well situated, and cleared, as any one could desire, they are generally badly cultivated, and many of them are becoming what the proprietors call worn-out, which means in reality, that they have been taking too much wheat off the ground, and putting too little manure on it. I was informed that many of the farmers had been in the habit of growing latterly not more than ten or twelve bushels of wheat to the acre. Some of them, however, are beginning to improve, and to follow the example of the English and Scotch farmers settled amongst them, and are beginning to alter their mode of farming; most of them have fine orchards.

The best settled townships in the district, are those of Bertie, Pelham, Stamford, Thorold, Grantham, Niagara and Clinton. Grimsby and Gainsborough are also well settled.

The district is watered by the Grand River, which enters Lake Erie between the townships of Dunn and Sherbrooke; the Welland river, which flows through nearly the centre of the district, and enters the Niagara River between the townships of Stamford and Willoughby, and numerous small streams, which are scattered over it. The Welland Canal enters the district at the north-west corner of the township of Grantham, and strikes the Welland River in the township of Thorold; after leaving the Welland River, it divides into two branches in the township of Crowland, one of which runs straight on to Lake Erie, and the other passes through the township of Wainfleet, and enters the Grand River in Moulton. The land in the district has greatly increased in value since the formation of the Welland Canal. In the neighbourhood of Port Colborne is a high hill or mound, of a conical form, called "Sugar-loaf Hill;" from the top of which an extensive view may be obtained of Lake Erie and the surrounding country.

Near the same neighbourhood one of the early settlers, about fifty years since, in excavating the ground for a cellar, discovered an immense quantity of human bones, which were supposed by the Indians to be part of the remains of the extinct tribe of the Erie Indians, deposited there after one of their last battles. On the spot under which the bones were discovered stood a tree, the trunk of which was about eighteen inches through, which had grown there since the bodies were interred; thus bearing evidence of the antiquity of the remains. Although they had been so long underground, the bones when discovered were in a very perfect state of preservation, and many of them remain so to the present day.

The principal towns and villages in the district are Niagara, the district town, St. Catharines, the principal place on the canal; Queenston, Dunnville, Grimsby; Stony Creek, Jordan, and Beamsville. There are no Crown lands for sale in the Niagara District.

Population in 1841, 31,549; since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district:

NIAGARA RIVER AND FALLS.

The Niagara River receives the waters of Lake Erie, and conveys them to Lake Ontario: it is thirty-four miles in length. At its entrance stand the remains of Fort Erie, which was destroyed during the American war; and about a mile below is the village of "Waterloo," opposite which is the American village "Black Rock." The river is here about one mile in width; and a steam ferry-boat plies constantly between the two places. About three miles and a half below Waterloo, Grand Island commences, which is about nine miles in length, and about seven broad at its widest part. This island belongs to the Americans. A little to the north-west of Grand Island is situated Navy Island, noted for having been taken possession of during the late rebellion by a party of rebels and American vagabonds (who styled themselves "sympathizers"); and opposite whence the American steamboat "Caroline" (which was used to assist them by carrying ammunition and stores from the American side to the island), was cut out, set on fire, and sent over the Falls.

The rapids commence about the lower portion of Navy Island; and from thence to the verge of the Horse-shoe Fall there is a descent of fifty-seven feet—to the verge of the American Fall the descent is fifty-two feet. The Horse-shoe, which is the principal Fall, is on the Canadian side; from a portion of the rock in the centre of the Fall having been carried away a few years since, it has no longer the form of a horse-shoe, but more resembles two sides of a triangle: it is about 1900 feet across, and the fall is 158 feet. The American Fall is about 920 feet across, and the fall is 164 feet. The whole width of the river at the Falls is about three-quarters of a mile. A large island, called Goat, or Iris Island, divides the American from the Horse-shoe Fall. On the Canadian side, almost on the verge of the Horse-shoe Fall, and just below it, is the "Table Rock," a large flat ledge of rock which projects over the torrent: portions of this rock have fallen from time to time; and there is a large fissure in the rock, which should warn visitors to be careful how they venture upon it. It may stand for many years; but no doubt the time will come when the whole rock will give way, and it is more than probable that some curious personage will go with it. As there is nothing to be gained by venturing upon it, it is better to remain on the safe side. A little above the Horse-shoe Fall are two small islands, called "Long Island," which is near the shore; and "Gull Island," situated opposite the centre of the Horse-shoe Fall, and which is supposed never to have been trodden by the foot of human being: both these islands are covered with cedar. On the American side there are also several islands; three of which, situated opposite the south-east of Goat Island, are called "The Sisters."

On the American side a small portion of the stream has been diverted from its course to turn the machinery of a paper mill; and, what is truly characteristic of the people, the Americans have converted every portion of their side of the Falls into a source of money making. Goat Island is laid out as a pleasure ground (to enter which you pay a quarter of a dollar), and a building is erected on it, where you are informed by a painted notice that you may obtain soda water, ices, strawberries and cream, &c. On the rocks, a little to the west of Goat Island, a tower has been erected, from whence a view may be obtained over the Horse-shoe Fall, and a bridge has been formed to it from the island. There is some pretty scenery about the Falls on the American side; but by far the finest view of the whole is to be obtained from the Canadian side. The best view of the Falls, taking in the Horse-shoe Fall, the American Fall, and the surrounding scenery, is to be obtained from the Clifton House, a large hotel, which is situated a little below the American Fall, on the Canadian side, and close to the ferry landing.

Those who feel any curiosity on the subject, may obtain oil-skin dresses and a guide from Mr. Barnett of the Museum, to enable them to proceed behind the sheet of water composing the Horse-shoe Fall; an undertaking which, to those who attend to the instructions of the guide, is said to be neither difficult nor dangerous. All persons visiting the Falls, should also pay a visit to the museum of Mr. Barnett, which is really worth seeing; comprising a great variety of native and foreign birds and animals, both living and stuffed—amongst others, a very fine pair of Buffaloes. Here also may be purchased a variety of Indian curiosities.

A pamphlet is offered for sale here, called "Every Man his own Guide to the Falls of Niagara;" which, with a little information, contains a great deal of trash. It is the production of an American on the opposite side; and, while professing to point out all objects of interest about the Falls, it is evident the only object of the author, who keeps a shop on the American side, is to draw all travellers to that side, by painting everything to be seen there in the brightest colours, and throwing all points of interest on the Canadian side into the shade. One-and-twenty pages of this precious production are taken up with what the compiler calls a "chronological table, containing the principal events of the late war between the United States and Great Britain;" the whole of which might be summed up in four words—"we licked the British." To sell this pamphlet on the other side, in order to gratify the inordinate vanity of his countrymen, might answer the purpose of the author very well, and prove a profitable adjunct to his trade in walking sticks; but to send it over to Canada to be sold, is a piece of impudence almost unparalleled, even among the free and independent citizens.

The principal hotels on the Canadian side are the Clifton House and the Pavilion Hotel; both of which are at present under the same management. There are several other houses in the immediate neighbourhood; and parties wishing to stay for a few weeks, for the purpose of enjoying the scenery of the Falls and the surrounding neighbourhood (probably the most magnificent in the world), will have no difficulty in procuring accommodation in private boarding houses. The "Cataract House," on the American side, is a large building, kept by an American general; therefore, those who have any ambition to visit a house kept by an American general, may have an opportunity of doing so.

The Falls are two miles from Chippewa, and seven from Queenston; between which places a railroad has been constructed, and during the summer cars run daily, conveying passengers to the Falls. The Falls, however are very magnificent in the winter, and equally well worth seeing, the rocks at the sides being encrusted with icicles, some of them measuring perhaps fifty or sixty feet in length. During the winter stages run daily from St. Catharines to Chippewa, whence private conveyances may be obtained to the Falls. Occasionally, from the immense quantity of ice carried over the Falls, the channel becomes completely choked and blocked up a short distance below the Falls, so as to become passable for foot passengers. This was the case during the winter of 1845-6, when a path was marked out across the ice opposite the Clifton House; and some enterprising Yankee, intent on money-making, erected a shanty on the ice in the centre of the river for the sale of refreshments.

Three miles below the Falls is a whirlpool, which is caused by a sudden bend in the river, and which is also well worth visiting; and four miles below the whirlpool is the village of Queenston. Here the river becomes navigable for steamboats: the current is still rapid, but not sufficiently so to impose any obstacles in the way of steamboats; and seven miles lower down, at the mouth of the river, where it discharges itself into Lake Ontario, is the town of Niagara. From Lake Erie to the rapids, a distance of sixteen miles, the fall of the river is not more than twenty feet; in the rapids, in a quarter of a mile, the fall is forty feet; at the Falls, one hundred and sixty-four feet; and between the Falls and Queenston, a distance of seven miles, one hundred and one feet. The Falls of Niagara are supposed at one time to have been situated at the Queenston Heights, and to have gradually receded, from the wearing away of the rocks.

NIAGARA. (Formerly called NEWARK.)

The District Town of the Niagara District, in the township of Niagara, situated at the entrance of the Niagara River, forty-eight miles by land from Hamilton, and thirty-six by water from Toronto. Niagara is a very old town, and was for five or six years the capital of the country. It was settled by Colonel Simcoe, when Lieutenant Governor of the province, and was incorporated in the year 1845. It has been a place of considerable trade, before the opening of the Welland Canal. On the east side of the town is a large military reserve. About half a mile up the river are the ruins of Fort George, where the remains of General Brock were originally interred; they were removed in 1824 to Queenston heights, and a monument erected over them. At Fort Mississaga, which is a little below the entrance of the river, a company of rifles, and a few artillerymen are stationed. The jail and court-house are situated about one mile south-west from the town, and the barracks are about midway between the town and jail. A new town-hall and court-house are intended to be erected by the Corporation during the present season. There are in the town a fire company, with two engines, and a hook and ladder company. Churches and chapels five, viz., Episcopal (stone), Presbyterian (brick), Catholic, Methodist, and Baptist. Two newspapers are published weekly, the "Niagara Chronicle," and "Argus."

Steamboats run daily, as long as the weather will allow of it, from Toronto to Niagara and Queenston; and during the summer, boats run also from Hamilton to Niagara. The Niagara River, from the swiftness of its current, being generally free from ice up to Queenston, except at the breaking up of the frost in the spring, when it occasionally becomes blocked up with ice carried down the stream from above.

The Niagara Harbour and Dock Company were incorporated in the year 1830, and have ship-yards at Niagara and Chippewa. The machinery belonging to the establishment is of a very perfect description, worked by a steam-engine, and adapted for work of a superior kind, as the vessels turned out by the Company sufficiently prove; one of which, the steamboat "London," which commenced running in the spring of 1845, is the fastest boat on the upper lakes, and a very beautiful model. The Company usually employ about 150 hands; and, when particularly busy, have employed as many as 350. There is also on the premises a marine railway, large enough for hauling up vessels of the first class. The following vessels and engines were built by the Niagara Harbour and Dock Company between the years 1832 and 1839.—Steamboats: Traveller, 400 tons, Experiment, 200 tons and 25 horse power engine, Queen, 250 tons and 25 horse power, and Gore, 200 tons and 45 horse power; Schooners: Jesse Woods, Princess, Fanny, Toronto, Sovereign, 150 tons each; Land engines: one of 12, one of 14, and one of 20 horse power. Vessels and engines built by the Niagara Harbour and Dock Company, between the years 1839 and 1845.—Steamboats: Sovereign, 400 tons and 75 horse power, City of Toronto, 400 tons and two engines of 45 horse power each, Princess Royal, 444 tons and 80 horse power, America, 320 tons and 60 horse power, Chief Justice Robinson, 400 tons and 75 horse power, Admiral, 400 tons and 68 horse power, Eclipse, 350 tons and 55 horse power, Minos, 450 tons, Emerald, 250 tons and 50 horse power, London, 450 tons and 75 horse power, Dart, 75 tons and 25 horse power, Oak, 75 tons and 16 horse power, Gem, 75 tons and 32 horse power, Shamrock, 75 tons and 32 horse power, Ann, 75 tons and 32 horse power; Propellers: Adventure, Beagle, and Traveller, each 90 tons and 25 horse power; Schooners: William Cayley, Shannon, Clyde, and Shamrock, 150 tons each; Barges: eighteen, of 40 tons each; Engines: two of 50 horse power for steamboat Ontario, one of 45 horse power for the Porcupine, one of 25 horse power for the Burlington, one of 15 horse power for the propeller Precursor, and one of 15 horse power for the propeller St. Thomas; Land engines: one of 5, one of 8, four of 12, and one of 20 horse power. Now building,—one steamboat of 800 tons and 150 horse power.

Large quantities of staves are annually exported from the township, the principal part of which is included in the exports from Howard. Formerly tobacco was much grown in the township; but the diminution of the duty on tobacco imported from the United States has caused the farmers to discontinue its cultivation, it being a very uncertain crop, and not worth cultivating unless with the certainty of its commanding a good price. In the north of the township, near the Thames, is an Indian settlement, called "Moravian Town," for a description of which see "River Thames." Five hundred and fifty acres of Crown lands are open for sale in Orford, at 8s. currency per acre.

ORILLIA.

A Village in the township of Orillia, situated on Lake Gongiechin, nineteen miles from Sturgeon Bay, and twenty-eight from Barrie. This was originally an Indian village, and stores were erected by merchants in the immediate vicinity for the convenience of trading with the Indians. About six years back the lands were purchased by the government, and the village of Orillia was laid out. A road has been cut out by the government from the village to Sturgeon Bay, on Lake Huron, which passes through the village of Coldwater; and during the season of 1845 a regular line of communication was kept up between Toronto and Buffalo, through Lakes Simcoe, Huron, St. Clair and Erie. The steamboat "Goderich," leaving Windsor and Detroit immediately on the arrival of the "London" from Buffalo, conveyed the passengers to Sturgeon Bay, touching at various places on the River St. Clair, Goderich, Owen Sound, and Pentanguishene; from thence they took the stage to Orillia, where the steamboat "Beaver" awaited them, and conveyed them to the Holland Landing; whence they took stage to Toronto. The "Beaver" remains at Orillia three nights in the week, during her circuit round the lake. There is some fine scenery in the neighbourhood, the lake being studded with islands, most of them of small size, and some of them mere rocks; and its shores are much indented with beautiful bays. The neighbourhood of the village is settled principally by emigrants from the old country. There is an Episcopal church in the village, and a comfortable tavern.

In Orillia 8,081 acres are taken up, 994 of which are under cultivation. These townships are but newly settled, and have hitherto, in common with other townships in the neighbourhood, been kept back for want of good roads. The opening of the government road from Seugog (by the Narrows) to Sturgeon Bay—which road passes through these townships—will have the effect of making them known, and promoting their settlement. The village of Orillia is situated on the lake shore in South Orillia. In North Orillia 26,400 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre. In South Orillia there are none. There are one grist and three saw mills and a tannery in South Orillia.

The village of Keene is situated in the south-east of the township, near Rice Lake; and there is a settlement of Indians in the township, called "Rice Lake Settlement," situated on Rice Lake, about twelve miles from Peterboro'. It is composed of Mississagas, or Chippawas, who in the year 1818, surrendered the greater part of the tract now forming the Newcastle District, for an annuity of £740. They have all been reclaimed from their primitive wandering life, and settled in their present location within the last ten or twelve years. The Indians in the settlement, number 114. They possess about 1550 acres of land, which is subdivided into 50 acre lots; of this, 1120 acres were granted in April, 1834, to trustees, "in trust, to hold the same for the benefit of the Indian tribes in the Province, and with a view to their conversion and civilization;" and the remaining 430 have been since purchased with their own funds. They have about 400 acres cleared and under cultivation. The village contains thirty houses, three barns, a school-house, and a chapel with a bell. The head chief of the tribe resides here. OTTAWA DISTRICT.

Consists of the Counties of Prescott and Russell. It is the most north-easterly district in the Province, and is bounded on the north by the Ottawa River; on the south by the Eastern District; on the east by a portion of Lower Canada; and on the west by the Dalhousie District. The Petite Nation River runs through the west and centre of the district, and enters the Ottawa in the north-west of the township of Plantagenet; and there are besides several good mill streams in the district.

Much of the land in the front of the Ottawa District is cold and wet; in the rear it is better; but the people of the district are much more extensively engaged in getting out lumber for the Quebec market, than in improving the soil; consequently agricultural operations go on very slowly.

The district is settled by a mixed population, consisting of French Canadians, English Canadians, Scotch, Irish, English, and Americans.

There is no large town in the district, and the principal villages are Hawkesbury and Vankleek Hill, in the township of Hawkesbury; Caledonia, in Caledonia; L'Orignal, the district town, in Longueuil; and Hattfield, in Plantagenet.

In Hawkesbury West is an establishment for sawing lumber, which is the most extensive in Canada West, giving employment to above two hundred hands.

In the Ottawa District, 121,355 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre; to purchase any of which, application must be made to the Crown lands agent, at Vankleek Hill.

Population of the district in 1842, 7944; since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls, will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district :

OTTAWA RIVER.

The second River in point of size and importance in Canada. It takes its rise in the unsettled regions to the north, flows to the south and south-east, dividing Upper from Lower Canada, and forming the northern boundary of the Bathurst, Dalhousie and Ottawa Districts; and enters the St. Lawrence just above the island of Montreal. There are two large islands in the river, the one being called "Back River Island," or "Petit Allumet Island," and the other "Grand Allumet Island;" both of which are situated in the north of the Bathurst District. Two expansions of the river are called "Lac des Chats," and "Lake Chaudier." The Ottawa has several rapids in it, the descent of which is too great to allow of steamboats or other vessels ascending them. Passengers ascending the river from Montreal are therefore obliged to take stage from Montreal to Lachine; from thence the steamer runs to Point Fortune, where the stage again conveys the passengers to L'Original; whence the steamboat takes them to Bytown. The steamboats on the Ottawa are of an inferior class to those on the St. Lawrence and the lakes; their accommodation is neither equal, nor are they so well found. Much of the scenery on the Ottawa is magnificent, particularly that in the neighbourhood of Bytown. The country on the banks of the Ottawa is not generally well adapted for farming; much of the land being of poor quality, and the winter of rather too great length. The principal importance of the Ottawa arises from the immense quantity of fine timber cut on its banks, and the banks of its tributaries. The principal portion of the timber carried to Great Britain from Canada is conveyed down the Ottawa—the preparing of which gives employment to a great number of hands.

Great improvements have been made in the Ottawa within the last year or two; slides and dams have been constructed at various places to facilitate the passage of lumber down the river; and many obstructions in the course of the stream, such as rocks, &c., have been removed.

Previous to making the improvements, goods and supplies for the use of the lumberers, &c., were landed from the steamboat at Portage du Fort (nearly five miles below the foot of the Calumet), and stored there until the canoes, with orders for them, arrived from above. The articles were then carted over the Portage du Fort one mile, at a cost of 6d. per cwt., and were canoed thence to Miller's Bay; from Miller's Bay they were carted to the Dargee Bay, three miles, at 6d. per cwt; they were again canoed to the foot of the Calumet, less than a mile; and from thence were partly carted, and partly carried by men, to the head of the Calumet, at the rate of $7\frac{1}{2}d.$ per cwt. Canoes are manned at an average in the proportion of one man to every four hundred weight of lading; and a canoe coming down for a load, almost invariably took three days from the time of landing at the head of the Calumet, until it was again loaded and ready to leave on its way upward. Each canoe-man, with finding, costs his employer at least 5s. per diem; therefore canoe-men forwarding made a cost of 3s. 9d. per cwt; and, allowing the damage to the bark canoe, which is always subject to much injury from loading and unloading, not to exceed 3a. per cwt., the whole cost of cartage, &c., is $5s. 7\frac{1}{2}d.$ per cwt.; whereas, in consequence of the improvement effected last year, supplies, &c., were forwarded over the same portion of the Ottawa at 1s. 6d. per cwt., being a saving of $4s. 1\frac{1}{2}d.$ per cwt.; and in this charge of 1s. 6d. per cwt. is included an allowance for a month's storage at the Calumet, when required. The difference in transport is therefore $4s. 1\frac{1}{2}d.$ per cwt.; and, as the quantity of pork, flour, goods, &c., forwarded during the past season amounted to nearly 364 tons, the saving to the lumber trade at this point, in the matter of forwarding alone, amounts to £1,501 10s.

There is no town of any importance on the Ottawa, with the exception of Bytown, which is the head quarters of the lumberers: and just above which are the beautiful Chaudiere Falls.

OWEN SOUND.

A long narrow Bay jutting into the land from the south-west extremity of the Georgian Bay. The land bordering on it has only lately been laid out and surveyed, but it is settling up fast. On the shores of the Big Bay, a bay of the Sound, is a settlement of Chippewa Indians.

These Indians were formerly either wanderers in the Saugeen tract, surrendered to Sir F. B. Head, or lived in scattered wigwams, on the shores of Big Bay. According to the agreement then made with them, it was proposed that they should either repair to Manitoulin, or to that part of their former territory which lies to the north of Owen's Sound; upon which it was promised that houses should be built for them, and proper assistance given, to enable them to become civilized, and to cultivate land.

In 1842, their present settlement was permanently formed by the erection of fourteen log houses, and a barn, out of the proceeds of their annuity, under the direction of the Indian Department. Their number is 130; and they have about 120 acres of land under cultivation; but from the short time they have settled, and the little experience which they can have yet acquired, it is not probable that they have made much progress in agriculture. In 1842, they were supplied with two yoke of oxen, paid for out of their annuity, and are anticipating an extension of their present plantations. They are Christians, and a Wesleyan Methodist missionary, resident at St. Vincent, twenty-five miles distant, has visited them regularly since October, 1841. A resident missionary was appointed to this settlement last year, by the Canadian Wesleyan Methodist Conference. They have also had a school, conducted by an Indian, and maintained by the same body, since the close of 1842. They share the same annuity as the Chippewas of Saugeen.

Before the formation of the plank road, Paris was on the high road from London to Hamilton, but it is now left a little to the north, and most of the travel passes it. It was laid out in 1830, and was called Paris from the large quantities of gypsum or plaster of Paris found in the immediate neighbourhood. It is divided into the upper town and the lower town; the lower town being within the forks of the river, and the upper town a little to the south, on the opposite side of Smith's Creek, in the township of Brantford. The village is beautifully situated, in the midst of a rolling country, most of which was what is called "Oak Plains," and is surrounded by fine, flourishing, well cultivated farms. It is a thriving settlement, and promises to become a place of considerable manufacturing importance, having the advantage of very extensive water power. There were exported from the mills at the village, last year, about 1200 tons of plaster (at the price of $4½ per ton), about 1,500,000 feet of lumber; and 120,000 bushels of wheat have been purchased from the crop of 1845. PEMBROKE.

A Township in the Bathurst District; is bounded on the north and north-west by the Ottawa River; on the west by unsurveyed lands; and on the south by Westmeath and Stafford. This township and Stafford, being as yet but little settled, are assessed together. In the two townships 11,205 acres are taken up, 1,658 of which are under cultivation. Farming produce in these northern townships usually commands a high price, in consequence of the expense of carriage so far up the Ottawa; there being a great demand for produce of all kinds, particularly for hay and oats, for the use of the lumberers on the river. On the whole, however, where the winter is so long, and stock of all kinds must necessarily require so much feeding, farming cannot be very profitable, even with the high prices the produce brings. In Pembroke 1,900 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre. There are one grist and two saw mills in the township.

Population in 1842, 195.

Ratable property in the township, £5,992.

PEMBROKE.

Pembroke contains about 250 inhabitants, one Methodist church, one physician and surgeon, one grist and saw mill, one wagon maker, five stores, six taverns, and two blacksmiths.

Post Office, post once a week.

PENETANGUISHENE.

A Village in the township of Tiny, beautifully situated on Penetanguishene Bay, forty miles from Barrie. Penetanguishene was commenced in the year 1818, in consequence of the government having formed a naval and military establishment on the bay, in the township of Tay, two and a half miles off; at which station the war steamer Midas is laid up in ordinary. There are also large barracks, but a very small military establishment is kept up. There is a collector of customs at Penetanguishene; but it is eleven years since he had an entry, so I was informed on good authority. The inhabitants of the surrounding neighbourhood are nearly all half-French, half-Indian. The principal trade of the place is derived from the government establishment, and the fur trade with the Indians. There is a Catholic church in the village, and an Episcopalian one, half-way between the village and the establishment.

Penetanguishene contains about 120 inhabitants.

There are four stores, one grist and two saw mills, one tavern, one blacksmith, one tinsmith, two tailors, two shoemakers. There is also a tavern at the establishment.

PERCH, THE—(See RIVIERE AUX PERCHES.)

(There is at present no road to Kingston fit to be travelled by vehicles.) Perth is built on a rising ground, on a sandy soil, with a granite foundation, and is consequently dry and healthy. The town occupies a space of 400 acres. It was laid out by the government in the year 1816; the streets are wide, and are built at right angles. The River Tay runs through the town, and is made navigable from Perth to the Rideau Canal, by means of five locks, each ninety-five feet by twenty. The canal is eleven miles in length, and enters the Rideau Canal two miles below Oliver's Ferry. Barges carrying eighty tons can pass through it. This work was formed by a private company, who received a grant from the government of a portion of the centre of the town of Perth, (an island formed by two branches of the River Tay), towards the expenses of the work. This was undertaken about thirteen years since, and cost about £7000.

Churches and chapels, seven; viz., Episcopal, two Presbyterian, one Free Church, Catholic, Methodist, and Baptist.

The town was laid out by government in the year 1826; and property has greatly increased in value within the last few years; so much so, that the few town lots now remaining in the hands of the Crown are valued at from £12 10s. to £300; and £350 was lately paid for a portion of a lot, containing not more than about a tenth of an acre. The town is well laid out, and has a handsome appearance, and is at present very flourishing. A portion of the town, on the east side of the river, is called Peterborough East. There is some fine scenery in the neighbourhood of the town; the land being a succession of hill and dale. During the season, the steamboat "Forester" leaves the town every day for Rice Lake, where it is met by the stage for Port Hope and Cobourg; and during the winter, a stage runs every day from Peterborough to the same places. A gravelled road is in course of construction from Rice Lake to Port Hope.

The jail and court-house is a handsome stone building, erected on a rising ground in the rear of the town. Churches and chapels, seven; viz., Episcopal (stone), Presbyterian (stone), Catholic (stone), Baptist (brick), British Wesleyan, Canadian Wesleyan, and Christian.

in the south of Cambridge it receives a branch which takes its rise in the north of Osgoode, and flows through the centre of Russell. After receiving this branch, the Petite Nation River passes through the centre of Cambridge, running nearly north; at the north corner of the township it receives a branch from Gloucester, Cumberland, and Clarence, and flows north-east to near the south-east corner of Plantagenet, where it makes a bend, and runs north-west to the Ottawa River, which it enters near the north-west corner of Plantagenet. At the entrance of Duffin's Creek, which runs through the township, is a bay called Big Bay (also called Frenchman's Bay, from a battle said to have been fought on its banks between the old French settlers and the Indians), about three miles in circumference, with a depth of from two to three fathoms: it is separated from the lake by a narrow sand bar, through which a channel is sometimes formed having a depth of six feet of water. In Pickering are four grist and twenty-one saw mills, from which latter were exported last year about 3,000,000 feet of lumber.

Population in 1842, 3752.

Ratable property in the township, £62,894.

PICTON.

The District Town of the Prince Edward District, in the township of Hallowell, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Bay of Quintè. The principal part of the town is built about half a mile back from the bay, on gently rising ground. A narrow arm of the bay divides the town into two portions; and, being marshy, makes that part of the town bordering on it rather unhealthy at seasons, which might easily be remedied by dredging and deepening the channel. Picton is an old-settled town, and is a place of considerable business: it possesses many excellent houses, several of which are built of stone. The jail and court-house is a handsome cut-stone building, enclosed with a stone wall, surmounted by iron railings, with iron gate, the appearance of which is light and elegant. Large quantities of potash have been made in Plympton in the last two years, which is generally found to more than pay the expense of clearing the land. During 1845 a very large quantity will have been made. A water grist mill has recently been erected at the north-eastern extremity of the township, on the lake shore. It was laid out in 1834 by government, and is the shipping port for the surrounding country. It possesses a good harbour, which might be improved so as to be capable of affording refuge to almost any number of vessels. The harbour was made by a joint-stock company, at an expense of £2,500. Of the stock, the Indians at the adjacent village possess £1,350. They have also a warehouse at the port. This port would be of far more advantage to the surrounding neighbourhood, if the road from the village to Dundas Street was macadamised or planked, and the expense would be trifling. The quantity of farming produce and lumber shipped at the port is very great, and would be much greater if the road was in better condition. Several vessels have been built here; and five schooners of a good class are owned in the place. The steamers Eclipse and Queen call here on their passages to and from Hamilton and Toronto. The land in the neighbourhood of the village, extending for one mile on each side of the river, comprising 4,600 acres, is Indian reserve, belonging to the Nassisagua Indians. They have a village about two miles from Port Credit, which was built for them in 1825 by the Government. They have a Methodist chapel and a school attached. About £9,000 have been expended in improving the harbour, erecting a light-house, and building a bridge across the river. Six or seven hundred pounds more are required to complete the works. A road has been formed from Port Dover to Hamilton (distance thirty-six and a half miles, four and a half of which are macadamized, and the remainder planked. A fine, rapid mill-stream runs through the town to the lake, at the mouth of which is a large basin, forming a natural harbour of considerable size, and well sheltered on the west and north. At present the greater portion of it is a mere marsh, having a branch of the stream passing on each side of it; but it might with ease be cleared out, when it would form a harbour capable of admitting and protecting any vessel on the lake. The town is incorporated, and is improving rapidly, and some very handsome buildings are in course of erection. The Toronto and Kingston stages pass through the town, and during the season of navigation, steamboats call daily on their passages to and from Toronto, Kingston and Rochester. It is very irregularly shaped, and its shores are indented by numerous bays. The land in the district is generally rolling, and much of it is of very good quality. The timber is for the most part hardwood, with occasionally a little pine; and here and there, on the shore of the lake, some very fine cedar is to be found.

The Prince Edward District was originally settled by U. E. Loyalists, or persons who fought on the side of Great Britain during the American war, and is now held by them and their descendants. There is also a number of Pennsylvanian Dutch, and a few English, Irish, and Scotch. They are generally in comfortable circumstances, and many of them are wealthy. The greater part of the district is under cultivation, and many of the farms are very handsomely situated. There is no river of any magnitude in the district; but there are several good mill streams, which take their rise in the high land in the centre of the district. Lime stone of excellent quality is abundant. The land on the northern border of the district generally ascends with a gentle slope from the bay.

Picton, the district town, is very handsomely situated on the Bay of Quintè, in the township of Hallowell. It is the only town of any size in the district; but there are also the villages of Wellington and Coneseon, in Hillier; Milford, in Marysburgh; Bloomfield, in Athol; and Demorestville, in Sophiasburgh. Besides which, there are numerous small shipping-places on the bay and lake.

There are no Crown lands for sale in the Prince Edward District; all the land in the district being in the hands of private individuals.

The population of the district probably amounts to about 16,000; but the census was so badly taken in some of the townships, that no dependence was to be placed on it.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district.

PRINCETON.

A Village on the road from Woodstock to Paris, situated on Homer's Creek, a branch of the Grand River, being partly in the township of Blenheim, and partly in Burford. It contains about 150 inhabitants, and an Episcopal church, a saw mill, one store, two taverns, one blacksmith, one tailor, two shoemakers.

Post Office, post three times a week.

PROTON.

A Township in the Wellington District; is bounded on the east by the township of Melancthon; on the north by Artemisia; on the west by Egremont; and on the south by Luther. This township has only lately been surveyed and laid out, and no return has yet been made from it.

PUCES, RIVIERE AUX.

Takes its rise in the south-west of Maidstone, and enters Lake St. Clair, about four miles west of Belle River.

PUSLINCH.

A Township in the Wellington District; is bounded on the north-east by Nassagaweya; on the north-west by the township of Guelph; on the west by Waterloo; and on the south and south-east by Beverly and Flamborough. In Puslinch 50,653 acres are taken up, of which 13,140 are under cultivation. There are two lakes in the township, about nine miles from Guelph—one of which contains between 4 and 500 acres—the other at a distance of a quarter of a mile, contains about 50 acres. The land between the lakes is marshy. There are two small islands in the larger lake. There are five saw mills in the township.

Population in 1841, 1500; who are principally Highland Scotch.
 Ratable property in the township, £59,806.

QUEENSTON.

A Village in the township of Niagara, seven miles from the town of Niagara, seven miles from the Falls, and forty-seven miles from Hamilton. It is pleasantly situated on the Niagara River, below the Heights, and opposite the American village "Lewiston." Before the opening of the Welland Canal, Queenston was a place of considerable business, being one of the principal depots for merchandise intended for the west, and also for storing grain; as much as forty or fifty thousand bushels of wheat have been shipped here in a season, which now finds its way by the Welland Canal. A rail-road from Queenston to Chippewa, nine miles in length, which cost about £19,000, was commenced in 1835 by a company of proprietors, and completed in 1841. A single line of rails was laid down, which passes close to, and above the Falls of Niagara; and during the summer the cars run daily, (fare to Chippewa, 2s. 6d. currency), and steamboats from Buffalo meet the cars at Chippewa. A telegraphic communication is about being established with Lewiston; and a macadamized road is being formed to St. Catharines. A horse ferry-boat plies across the river from Queenston to Lewiston. A handsome monument was erected on the Heights above the village, to the memory of the late General Brock, who was killed here on the 13th October, 1812, while repelling an invading army of Americans. This monument was blown up by some scoundrel during a night in the beginning of April, 1841. A subscription has since been raised for the purpose of rebuilding it; but the work is not yet commenced. The Niagara River at Queenston is only about 600 feet in width. The banks above the town are 230 feet in height; and, below the Heights, they are only about 70 feet. From the Heights above the town a very fine view may be obtained of the surrounding country. The Niagara River is supposed at one time to have been precipitated over these Heights, instead of where the Falls now are. During the season, boats ply here regularly from Toronto, and stages run from Hamilton to meet the boats. A party of Rifles are stationed at Queenston. Churches and chapels—Episcopal (gone to decay), Baptist, and Presbyterian (not completed); Methodists use the school room.

Post Office, post every day.

Population about 300.

Professions and Trades.—One lawyer, one tannery, three stores, eight taverns, one waggon maker, two blacksmiths, one baker, four shoemakers, one tailor.

Principal Tavern—"Queenston Hotel."

QUEENSVILLE.

A small Village two miles above Sharon, in the township of East Gwillimbury; contains about fifty inhabitants, two stores, one ashery, one blacksmith, one shoemaker, one pump maker.

QUINTE, BAY OF.

Is, properly speaking, an expansion of the River Trent; at the mouth of which River it commences. It is very irregularly shaped, and forms the northern boundary of the Prince Edward District; and enters Lake Ontario a little west of Amherst Island. In its course it receives the Moira, Salmon and Napanee

Rivers, and several smaller streams. There is a great deal of fine land on its banks, but some parts of its borders are rather marshy. The towns of Belleville and Picton are situated on the bay; the former in the Victoria, and the latter in the Prince Edward, District. There is also on the bay, in the township of Tyendenaga, a settlement of Mohawk Indians.

These Indians separated from the Mohawk nation and settled in their present locality about the year 1784. In 1793 they received from the Crown a grant of land, containing about 92,700 acres; but of this, in 1820, they surrendered 33,280 acres, in exchange for an annuity of £450. Their estate was then reduced to 59,400 acres. From this the surveyor general deducts 14,773 acres for crown and clergy reserves; viz., 6,858 for the former, and 7,915 for the latter. In December 1835 they made a further surrender of 27,857 acres, in trust, to be disposed of for their benefit; so that their present possessions do not exceed 16,800 acres.

The Indians live for the most part in detached farms, scattered over the reserve. Their present number is 383. They have 1,368 acres of land cleared, and about 500 acres under tillage. Some of them cultivate considerable quantities of land, so much as fifty acres; but in general the quantity is much less. There have been some instances of successful industry and thriftiness in this community. One of their chiefs, named Hill, who died a few years ago, was remarkable for his industrious habits, and for a desire to accumulate property. Besides his own homestead, to the cultivation and improvement of which he paid more than ordinary attention, he became possessed, by purchase, of some of the farms and improvements of other Indians; and at his death, left them, by will, to particular members of his family, who are at this day in full enjoyment of them.

One of his sons, who is catechist to the missionary at the settlement, recently applied for a loan to enable him to build a wharf and commence business as a general trader among his brethren, in partnership with a white man. They possess stock and agricultural implements corresponding to their progress in husbandry. Some of them grow a considerable surplus of grain for sale.

These Indians have long been Christians, probably before their arrival in Canada. A missionary was first appointed to the settlement in 1810, by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts: their present missionary has been among them eleven years, and reports that, during that period, they have made a gradual advance in morals, piety, and industry.

Their church having become too small for the congregation, they are now engaged in the erection of a new and commodious stone edifice, the expense of which will be defrayed out of their own funds.

Some of the young men are employed in quarrying and carrying the materials for this building.

They support a schoolmaster out of the produce of certain small rents, which they receive and manage themselves.

RAINHAM.

A Township in the Talbot District; is bounded on the north-east by the township of Cayuga; on the west by Walpole; and on the south by Lake Erie. In Rainham 16,724 acres are taken up, 5,354 of which are under cultivation. This is a small township, containing good land and some well-cleared farms. Timber—mostly hardwood. It is well watered by numerous small streams running across it.

A Township in the County of Kent; is bounded on the north by the River Thames; on the west by Tilbury East; on the south by Lake Erie; and on the north-east by the township of Harwich. In Raleigh 33,151 acres are taken up, of which 5,569 are under cultivation. This township is improving fast. The portion of it lying along the bank of the Thames, as also the neighbourhood through which the Talbot Road passes, are well settled and cultivated. An extensive prairie, running parallel with the Thames, at a distance of from half a mile to a mile, and of an average width of from three to four miles, runs through nearly the whole length of this township, commencing about three miles below the town of Chatham; it requires considerable draining, and is at present used by the farmers in the neighbourhood principally for grazing cattle. Near Eriens, on Talbot Road, is a steam mill. Soil and timber generally about the same as Harwich. In Raleigh 4,400 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre; and the Canada Company have about 6,500 acres.

Two branches of the River Thames run through this township; one of which enters the Thames about three miles below Chatham; the other joins it in Tilbury East, about a mile and a half below the town line.

RAMA.

A Township in the Home District; is bounded on the east and north by unsurveyed lands; on the west by the Severn River and Lake Gougichin; and on the south by the township of Mara. In Rama 616 acres are taken up, 70 of which are under cultivation. In the west of the township, near the lake, is a bed of remarkably fine grey limestone, specimens of which have been sent to England for examination, it having the appearance of that kind of stone used for lithographic purposes; but it has not yet been sufficiently tested.

In the west of the township, on the lake, is a settlement of Chippewa Indians, who formerly occupied the lands about Lake Simcoe, Holland River, and the unsettled country in the rear of the Home District. In 1830 Sir John Colborne, then Lieutenant Governor, collected them on a tract of land on the north-west shore of Lake Simcoe, of 9,800 acres in extent, where they cleared a road between that lake and Lake Huron. They consisted of three tribes of Chippewas, under the chiefs Yellowhead, Aisance and Snake; and a band of Pottawatamies from Drummond Island. Their number was about 500; and they were placed under the care of Mr. Anderson (lately superintendent at Manitoulin Island), under whose superintendence they made rapid progress. The tribe under the chief Yellowhead, now settled at Rama, was located at the Narrows of Lake Simcoe (where the village of Orillia now stands). Aisance's tribe, at present residing at Beausoleil, Matchadash Bay, was settled at Coldwater, at the other extremity of the reserve; the distance between them being fourteen miles.

"Prior to the year 1830," says Mr. Anderson in his report, "these tribes had become much demoralized from their long residence near the white settlements. They were in the constant habit of drinking spirituous liquors to excess: not one of them could read or write; and they scarcely knew anything of religion. Their hunting grounds were exhausted; the government presents were exchanged for whiskey. They were in debt to all the traders, and unable to obtain more credit; and thus were constantly in a state bordering on starvation. Their sufferings and misery were strongly marked in their personal appearance, and the condition of their wigwams; the latter imperfectly made, and very insufficiently supplied with fuel, could scarcely be said to afford shelter to the ragged and emaciated frames of the elder Indians, whilst the wretchedly diseased appearance of the children spoke still more forcibly of the intoxication and want of food of the parents. Miserable as was their state, it required considerable persuasion to prevail on them to accept the bounty of government. By studious attention to their habits and prejudices, they were at length brought to acquiesce; and the general result has been, that each Indian with a family has now a little farm under cultivation, on which he raises not only potatoes and Indian corn, but also wheat, oats, peas, &c.; his wigwam is exchanged for the log-house; hunting has in many cases been abandoned altogether, and in none appears, as formerly, to be resorted to as the only means of subsistence. Habitual intoxication is unknown; the Sabbath is carefully observed; their religious duties carefully attended to; and reading and writing, with a moderate knowledge of arithmetic, is almost universal among the young people.

“The log dwelling-houses for the Indians, were erected by government. Frame houses for the superintendent and the two chiefs, Aisance and Yellowhead, with school-houses at Coldwater and the Narrows, were also built at the commencement of the establishment. Since that time a grist mill and a saw mill have been added at Coldwater; and a saw mill is in progress at the Narrows. About 500 acres of the whole have been cleared and are under cultivation.

In 1836, a year after the date of the above account, they surrendered their reserve to the Government; and the tribe under Yellowhead removed, in 1838, from the Narrows to Rama; where there appeared a prospect of remaining for some years undisturbed by the white settlers. Here they purchased 1600 acres of land, at a cost of £800—paid out of their annuities—and applied themselves diligently to forming a new clearance, and cultivating the land; in which they have made considerable progress. Their number is now 184; their village contains twenty houses and four barns, and they have 300 acres of land under cultivation. During the last two years they have been very industrious, and have raised large quantities of produce. In 1841, their crop of potatoes was sufficiently abundant to enable them to dispose of four or five hundred bushels to the white settlers in Orillia and Medonte, without inconvenience to themselves.

These Indians are stated to be Wesleyan Methodists. They have a commodious school house, in which Divine service is performed by a missionary of that persuasion. A respectable teacher is in charge of the school.

But little of the township is as yet under cultivation, with the exception of that portion in the occupation of the Indians. Nine hundred acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the township, at 8s. currency per acre.

There has been no separate census yet taken of this township, it being included in the adjoining township of Mara.

Ratable property in the township, £223.

Sturgeon Lake is also connected by means of the Skugog River with the Skugog Lake, which is situated in the townships of Cartwright and Reach. Rice Lake and the Otonabee River are navigable as far as the town of Peterborough, and during the season of navigation, a steamboat runs daily from a landing place at the south of the lake, to Peterborough. These lakes are noted for the superior quality of the fish in them, which is taken in large quantities, particularly Maskelonge, Bass, &c. RIDEAU CANAL.

The line of water communication between the Ottawa River and Lake Ontario. It was constructed by the Government as a great military work. It commences at Bytown, where eight handsome locks have been constructed to overcome the fall in the river of thirty-four feet, and is formed through the bed of the Rideau River, with two or three deviations to avoid obstructions in its course, till it reaches the Great Rideau Lake, through which it is carried, and afterwards through Mud Lake. It is then carried into the bed of the Cataract River, and continues through its course till it reaches Kingston. It is 120 miles in length, and in some parts is very circuitous. The country through which it passes, bears in general a very different aspect to that traversed by the Welland Canal.

But little of the land bordering on the Rideau Canal is under cultivation; much of it is poor and rocky; and of that fit for cultivation, thousands of acres have been flooded by the damming of the rivers to form the canal, and immense quantities of timber have been consequently destroyed. Great numbers of trees are still standing, dead, and surrounded by water, and give those portions of the banks of the canal a decayed, deserted, miserable appearance. As their roots become decayed, however, they fall into the water, and are gradually carried off by the stream; and in the course a few years the canal will be free from them.

There are several handsome locks on the canal, the machinery of which is of a very perfect description. There is much picturesque scenery on the canal, and some that may even be termed romantic. The finest spot on the canal, after leaving Bytown, is Kingston Mills, about six miles above Kingston.

The villages and settlements on the canal consist of Burritt's Rapids, forty-one miles from Bytown; Merrieksville, forty-seven; Smith's Falls (a flourishing village in the Bathurst District), sixty; Oliver's Ferry (where the road from Perth to Brockville crosses the Rideau Lake, by means of a ferry-boat), seventy-two; the Isthmus, a small settlement, eighty-seven; Brewer's Upper Mills, 109; Kingston Mills, 120; Kingston, 126.

Hitherto the traffic on this canal has been very great; all merchandize intended for the country above Kingston having been sent through it, at a great expense; and the greater portion of the passenger traffic from Montreal to Kingston also passed through the canal; for the future, however, the opening of the St. Lawrence canals will so much shorten the passage, and consequently lessen the expense, that no goods, except those intended for places along the canal, or the country above Bytown, will be forwarded by the Rideau; and of course passengers will choose the shorter route.

RIDEAU RIVER.—(See RIDEAU CANAL.)

ROCHESTER.

A Township in the county of Essex; bounded on the north by Lake St. Clair; on the west by Belle River; on the south by Gosfield; and on the east by Tilbury West. The River Ruscom, which takes its rise in Gosfield, runs through this Township, and enters Lake St. Clair, about four miles above Belle River. In Rochester, 1,100 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. c'y per acre; and 2,500 acres of land belong to the Canada Company.

The communication between the basin and the lake is across a sand-bank of about forty yards in breadth, and only a few feet above the level of the water. The government has commenced improving the harbour, by cutting a channel through the bank, running out piers, &c. When completed, it will be a work of great importance to vessels navigating the lake, and also as a shipping-place to the surrounding country—it being fourteen miles from Chatham, in the County of Kent, and an excellent road having lately been completed between the two places.

SABLES, RIVIERE AUX.

A River, different branches of which take their rise in the townships of Bidulph, Stephen, Osborne and London. It flows along the east and south border of the township of Williams, till it reaches its south-west corner, when it makes a bend and runs to the north, forming the western boundary of the townships of Williams and McGillivray, and separating them from Bosanquet; at the northern extremity of the latter township it makes a curve, and runs south, parallel with Lake Huron, and at an average distance of half a mile from it, for about ten miles, when it enters the lake, about five miles above Kettle Point. As its name imports, its bed and banks are very sandy. A ridge of sand hills separates it from Lake Huron. A saw mill was established at the north bend of the river soon after the first settlement of the Huron District, and has been in operation ever since.

It is built on a gravelly soil, on a gently sloping bank, a short distance from the river, which is here about a mile wide. This is one of the oldest settlements in Canada. Colonel Prince, the member for the county, has a fine farm, in a highly improved state, a short distance out of town. There are in Sandwich an Episcopal church and a Methodist chapel. SARNIA, PORT.

A Village in the township of Sarnia, handsomely situated on the St. Clair River, opposite the American village Port Huron, near the entrance to Lake Huron. This is the last place on the Canadian side at which the American steamers touch, on their route to the upper lakes. The village was laid out by private individuals in the year 1833, and has increased rapidly, and must in time become a place of great importance. An excellent road is formed from this place to the town of London; and stages run from Port Sarnia to London three times a week. The American steamboats "Hercules," "Samson," "Princeton," and "St. Louis," stop regularly on their passages to and from Buffalo and Chicago; and the "Huron" and "Red Jacket" leave here every morning alternately for Detroit. Several other American boats call occasionally. During the last season the British steamer "Gore," from Windsor to Goderich and Gloster Bay, also called here regularly. There is an excellent fishery just above the village, on the banks of Point Edward; and upwards of 1000 barrels of fish are generally exported annually.

Port Sarnia contains five churches and chapels; viz., Episcopal, Catholic, Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational.

Five schooners are owned here. There is a saw mill on the river worked by means of a canal three miles and a half in length, fed by the Riviere aux Peches; and a steam grist mill and foundry have recently been erected. Port Sarnia is a port of entry, and has a resident collector of customs.

SARNIA.

A Township in the County of Kent; is bounded on the north by Lake Huron; on the west by the River St. Clair; on the south by the township of Moore; and on the east by Plympton. In Sarnia 10,540 acres are taken up, of which 1,366 are under cultivation. Ten thousand acres of the finest land in the township, reaching from Fromefield to Port Sarnia, are reserved for the Indians, who number about 700. They farm a little, but live principally by hunting and fishing. They have a Methodist chapel and school. This township is well watered; the Riviere aux Perches, which takes its rise in Enniskillen, runs through the township till it reaches Lake Waywanosh, which it enters at its western side, about six miles from Port Sarnia, and emerges again at its south-east corner, and enters Lake Huron about eleven miles above Port Sarnia. Lake Waywanosh, the nearest point of which is half a mile from Lake Huron, contains about 2000 acres; average depth from six to eight feet; and is surrounded by prairie land. Lake Chipican, a small lake about six acres in extent, is separated from Lake Huron by a ridge of high land: it is two miles north from Port Sarnia. A ridge of sandy land, forming what are called "oak ridges," about a mile in width, extends from Port Sarnia, along the shore of Lake Huron, to nearly the extremity of the township: the back of the township is good land. A point of land, called Point Edward, containing about 1000 acres, which is a military reserve, runs into the St. Clair River just above Port Sarnia, at the entrance of Lake Huron. This is said by the old inhabitants to have been formerly an island; but the north portion of the channel on the east side of it has become filled up; thus connecting it with the main land, and forming a fine bay, sheltered on the north, east and west.

Population (exclusive of Indians) 610.

Ratable property in the township, £8,472.

SAUGEEN.

A Settlement of Chippewa Indians, near the mouth of the Saugeen River, on Lake Huron. It was from these Indians, and their brethren since settled at Owen's Sound, that Sir F. Head, in 1836, obtained a surrender of that vast tract of land lying north of the London and Gore Districts, and between the Home District and Lake Huron, containing about 1,600,000 acres. He reserved at the same time for the Indians, the extensive peninsula lying between Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay, north of Owen's Sound, and supposed to contain about 450,000 acres.

Little was known of these Indians by the Government before that period, as their village was remote from any white settlement; but they appear to have been settled and converted about the year 1831. In 1837, their missionary gave the following description of their condition:—"This mission is beautifully situated; fine flats, containing from two hundred to three hundred acres, extend along the river, where the Indians cut sufficient hay for their oxen and cows, and grow excellent corn. There are some good log houses, and several comfortable bark shanties. On the hill, in rear of the flats, are several fine fields of corn and potatoes. The Indians at this station have been remarkable for their stedfastness since they embraced Christianity. They appear to be a happy people: much attached to their missionaries, teachable, and give solid proofs that they are progressing in civilization."

The chief superintendent, however, who visited them in the same year, reported that they appeared very poor and miserable, trusting very much to hunting and fishing for their support. The fishing is very productive, and has attracted the notice of the white people, who annoy the Indians by encroaching on what they consider their exclusive right, and on which they rely much for provisions. They hunt in the tract belonging to the Canada Company, and on the unoccupied lands to the south and east of Saugeen river.

This settlement does not appear to have been visited by any officer of the Government since 1837; and so little is it known, that it is supposed to have been incorrectly laid down on the map by the extent of half a degree. The chief superintendent reports, that he cannot give an accurate account of it. He states that the greater number of Indians lived for a long while in very small log houses, and in houses made of elm bark. The present missionary states that there are only six log houses, and that the rest are bark huts or wigwams. The village is situated about two miles up the Saugeen River. From the report of the chief superintendent it appears that the Indians contemplated abandoning this situation for one nearer the mouth of the river; but they have since determined to remain in their old locality; and have this year built by contract six excellent houses.

The mouth of the Saugeen River forms the best, and almost the only port of refuge on the eastern shore of Lake Huron; hence it is likely to become a place of considerable resort; and it is in contemplation to carry two roads in different directions through the Saugeen tract to this point. The rumour of this intention was lately a source of much inquietude among the Indians, as they became apprehensive of being obliged to quit their settlement, and surrender their improvements. This apprehension, however, has been removed, and they are now looking forward to the erection of a saw mill, and to the supplying the schooners, touching at the port, with lumber and fish.

A missionary of the Wesleyan Methodists has long resided among them. Their present missionary is an Indian, brought up at the Rice Lake Mission, and at a school in the United States. They have a chapel which serves as a school-house, and a mission house, which were built by the Wesleyan Methodist Society, about the year 1831. They have also had a schoolmaster for some time past. Almost all the tribe have embraced Christianity.

These Indians are entitled to share in the annuity of £1250, recently granted in exchange for the Saugeen territory, surrendered to Sir F. Head in 1837.

SAUGEEN RIVER.

Takes its rise in the Indian territory, north of the Huron Tract, and after running nearly a west course, enters Lake Huron about sixty miles north of Goderich. At the mouth of the river is a pretty good harbour, allowing the entrance of vessels drawing eight feet of water; but the passage is difficult of entrance.

SAUGEEN, GEGETO, OR FISHING ISLANDS.

A group of Islands, fifteen or twenty in number, lying about seventy-eight miles above Goderich, and eighteen above the Saugeen River. They are not inhabited; but a large quantity of fish is annually taken on their banks. About 1000 barrels are generally exported; but any quantity might be taken, there being no limit to the supply. As much as from two to three hundred barrels of fish have been taken at a single haul of the seine.

SHARON, OR DAVIDTOWN.

A Village in the township of East Gwillimbury, three miles and a half from the Holland Landing, and about thirty-five from Toronto. It was first settled in the year 1800, by a Mr. David Wilson, from the state of New York; who, with a few followers, about six in number, seceded from the Society of Friends, and established a sect of his own. These have been since known as "Davidites." They have at great expense, and much labour, erected two large buildings of a most singular appearance, which strike the eye of the traveller at a considerable distance. The first of these, designed to be an imitation of the ancient Jewish temple, is a building, the ground floor of which is sixty feet square, and twenty-four feet high. Above this is a gallery, for musical performances; and above this again, a kind of tower or steeple. The whole height of the building is sixty-five feet. In the interior is a large space enclosed by twelve pillars, on each of which is inscribed in gold letters, the name of one of the Apostles. Within these again, are four others, inscribed in like manner with the words, "Hope," "Faith," "Charity," "Love." In the centre of the building, surrounded by these pillars, is a kind of cabinet, about five feet square; and seven feet high, made of oak, of elaborate workmanship; in shape, something resembling one story of a Chinese Pagoda; at the four corners and on the top of which are placed brass lamps. On each side of the cabinet are four windows. The interior is lined with black cloth, trimmed with crimson. In the centre is a kind of table covered with black cloth, with crimson hangings, supporting a Bible. The temple was built by the congregation, who spent seven years about the work; working, of course, only at intervals. It was completed in the year 1832. Every year, on the first Friday evening in September, the temple is brilliantly illuminated. A meeting is held here monthly for the purpose of making collections for the poor. The members subscribe altogether $8 per month. Since the completion of the temple, $1500 have been contributed; 600 of which have been expended.

The second building is the meeting house; which measures 100 feet by 50. It is surrounded on the outside by rows of pillars. The ground floor is twenty feet high, the ceiling is arched, and is supported by three rows of pillars, on which are inscribed in letters of gold, the names—Daniel, Ezekiel, Jeremiah, Moses, Jacob, Abraham, Solomon, David (with a harp), Judah, Reuben, Samuel, Levi, Isaac, Benjamin, Aaron, Joseph, and "Our Lord is one God." There is also a tolerable organ. Above the meeting-house is a school-room, fifty by twenty-one feet. The building was completed in 1842. It was built by subscription, and cost about $2500. The members meet every Sunday for religious service; and twice a-year, viz., on the first Saturdays in June and September, for a feast or communion, at which time all comers are welcomed. The congregation, including children, number about 200.

SIMCOE DISTRICT.

Consists of the county of Simcoe, which comprises the townships of Adjala, Artemisia, Collingwood, Essa, Flos, West Gwillimbury, Innisfil, Medonte, Matchadash, Mulmur, Mono, Nottawasaga, Ospry, Oro, Orillia, St. Vincent, Sunnidale, Tay, Tiny, Tecumseth, Tossorontio; Euphrasia and Vespra. It is bounded on the east by the Home District, Lake Simcoe, Lake Couchiching, and the Severn River; on the north by the Severn River and the various bays of the Georgian Bay; on the west by the Wellington District; and on the south by the Home District. It is watered by the Nottawasaga River, and the Holland and Coldwater Rivers, besides numerous small streams scattered over it. This district formed a portion of the Home District until the year 1843; when the county of Simcoe was declared a separate district. It contains a large portion of very excellent land, the settlement of which has been hitherto much retarded by the want of good roads; some of the farmers in the back townships finding it almost impossible to get out of the bush, except during sleighing time. Many of the townships are newly surveyed, and have not long been opened for sale. The townships of West Gwillimbury and Tecumseth are the best settled in the district; the inhabitants principally Irish and Scotch. Next to these are the townships of Oro, Innisfil, and Mono. There are many good farms above Barrie, on the road leading from Barrie to Penetanguishine; near the latter place the land is mostly stony and sandy, and the timber principally pine. There is excellent land in Orillia, which township is now beginning to settle up. Good roads into the interior of the district are much wanted to promote the settlement of the land.

Barrie, the district town, is beautifully situated on Kempenfeldt Bay, and there are besides in the district the villages of Bradford, Bond Head, and Middleton in West Gwillimbury; Penetanguishine in Tiny; Orillia in Orillia; and Coldwater in Medonte; besides a settlement called "Hurontario," in St. Vincent, on the Nottawasaga Bay. Two hundred and one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the Simcoe District, at 8s. c'y per acre, to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown Lands Agent at Barrie.

Population in 1842, 12,592, since when it has probably increased one-fifth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls, will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district:

SIMCOE LAKE.

A Lake situated partly in the Home and partly in the Simcoe Districts. It commences about thirty-five miles north from Toronto, and is in length nearly thirty-miles, and in its widest part about eighteen. It is said to be about 170 feet above Lake Huron, into which it discharges itself, through Lake Gougechin, the Severn River, and the Georgian Bay. The scenery of Lake Simcoe is very picturesque, its shores being very much indented with bays, some of which are of considerable extent. A beautiful bay, called "Kempenfeldt Bay," runs into the land on the west side of the lake; it is about ten miles long, and from two to three miles wide. Barrie, the district town of the Simcoe District, is situated on its north-western extremity. Cook's Bay, the southern extremity of the lake, is about eight miles long, and from two and a half to four miles broad; it receives the Holland River. There are many islands in Lake Simcoe, and some of them are of large size, containing many acres; only one of them (Snake Island) is inhabited, and that by Indians.

The banks of the lake are generally clothed with wood down to the water's edge, consequently there is no beach. Some portions of the shores of the lake are marshy; a large marsh, bordered by tamarac swamp, borders Cook's Bay, and extends for some miles along the course of the Holland River. The land on the banks of the lake is mostly light, and the timber principally pine; in some parts, however, the land is of excellent quality, and timbered with hard wood to the edge of the lake. The banks of the lake and the bays are generally rather low, few parts being more than from twenty to thirty feet high. On those portions of the banks in the township of North Gwillimbury, and also in a portion of the south of Georgina, there are some very prettily situated farms, which are well cultivated; the banks in Thorah are not so much settled, and those of Mara and Rama still less so; in the latter township is an Indian settlement on the banks of the lake. The banks in Oro and Vespra are partially settled, but not much; on the Innisfil side, they are clothed with wood to the water's edge.

At the "Narrows," which is a narrow channel connecting Lake Simcoe with Lake Gougechin, a handsome bridge has been constructed. The scenery at the Narrows would be very attractive, were it not unfortunately a little disfigured by a small quantity of marsh. A steambot has plied on this lake for about eleven or twelve years; the present one, the "Beaver," (which was launched in 1844), which is the third, is also the largest and best that has been built; she is a fine boat and has excellent accommodations. The Beaver makes regular trips round the lake, starting every second day from a landing place on the east branch of the Holland River, and running to Orillia, taking the east and west sides of the lake alternately, and returning by the opposite course. It lies over every night at Orillia, except Saturday, when it returns to the Holland River, and lies there till Monday morning.

The water in some parts of the lake is of considerable depth, and it is generally frozen completely over in the winter, so as to be passable with safety for sleighs; when the ice breaks up in the spring, it sinks at once to the bottom. Those accustomed to the ice generally know how long it is safe to venture on it, and accidents seldom happen.

About four years since, a settler on the lake was engaged to take a sleigh load of goods to the opposite side; the winter was breaking up, and the ice on the lake was becoming honey-combed underneath, a sure sign that it would not last much longer, and he knew that if he deferred his journey for a day or two there would be no chance of getting his load across till the steambot commenced running. He therefore set off with his team in the night, took his load across in safety, and started on his return home just as the sun began to rise; he knew by the appearance of the ice, and from the direction of the wind, that the ice would not be safe many hours longer, he therefore put his horses to a gallop, and kept them at that pace the whole way home (12 miles); he crossed in safety, and two hours after he landed there was not a vestige of ice to be seen on the lake. Notwithstanding the temerity of those accustomed to the ice, it is very seldom that any serious accident, such as loss of life, occurs; horses, however, are lost every winter through the ice, but the drivers generally manage to save themselves. Very fine whitefish and maskelonge are taken in Lake Simcoe; and fine white cornelians are said to have been picked up on the shore of Kempenfeldt bay.

An Island in the south of Lake Simcoe. It is occupied by a party of Chippewa Indians. This body of Indians was one of the three bands established at Coldwater and the Narrows, and separated from them on the abandonment of those settlements. They now occupy Snake Island, one of the three islands in Lake Simcoe, which were set apart for this tribe many years ago. They are 109 in number, and occupy twelve dwelling houses. They have also two barns, and a school house, in which their children are instructed by a respectable teacher, and Divine service is performed by a resident missionary of the Methodist persuasion, to which these Indians belong. They have about 150 acres under cultivation, and are improving in habits of industry and agricultural skill. Their missionary, who has been acquainted with them since July, 1839, states that the majority of them are strictly moral in their character, and that many of them for consistency of character, would not suffer by a comparison with white Christians of any denomination.

The superintendent, however, states that the soil of the island is stoney, and not well adapted for Indian modes of cultivation. The timber on the island is mostly hardwood, and includes a good proportion of maple; and, during the sugar-making season, many Indians come down from Penetanguishene and other places, to make a supply of sugar.

The east and north of the township contain excellent land—that bordering on the lower portion of the St. Clair and Chenail Ecarté is rather inclined to be marshy; and there are extensive low plains, very useful for feeding cattle. Walpole Island and St. Ann's Island, the former of which is occupied by Indians, are included in the township. The village of Wallaceburgh is situated at the forks of Bear Creek. The town is beautifully situated, having a fine view for a considerable distance of the Welland Canal and surrounding country. It is a place of much trade, which arises partly

ST. CLAIR RIVER.

Receives the waters of Lake Huron, and conveys them to Lake St. Clair. Including its windings, it is about thirty miles long, and from three quarters of a mile to a mile and a half broad. Between Lake Huron and Lake St. Clair it divides Canada from the United States. There were formerly, within the memory of persons still living in the neighbourhood, three channels connecting the river with Lake Huron; two of these, however, have become filled up, and a cape has been formed called Point Edward; below which is a considerable bay with deep water, well sheltered by Point Edward, capable of affording accommodation to any number of vessels. There is a large island in the river, opposite the upper portion of the township of Moore; and opposite the settlement of "Sutherlands," near the American shore, is a considerable extent of clay banks (called here "flats"), covered with about four feet of water, where some of the old inhabitants say they recollect the existence of an island, and that when children they used to paddle across in canoes in order to play upon it.

The banks of the upper portion of the St. Clair are high; those of the lower portion are lower, and in parts inclined to be marshy. The banks of the river generally are well settled, and many of the farms are beautifully situated. The flourishing village of Port Sarnia is situated at the head of the St. Clair, in the township of Sarnia; and Froomefield, Corunna and Sutherlands, in the township of Moore. There are several wharves constructed on the Canadian side of the river, for the convenience of supplying the steamboats passing with wood: large quantities are sold; and, as the land near the river becomes cleared, the commodity rises in value.

In the lower portion of the township of Sarnia is a settlement of Chippewa Indians. These Indians are among the first whom Sir John Colborne endeavoured to settle and civilize. Previously to 1830 they were wandering heathens, scattered over the western part of the Upper Province. In 1830 a number of them were collected on this reserve, containing 10,280 acres. A number of houses were built for them, and an officer was appointed for their superintendance. Their conversion to Christianity, and their progress in religious knowledge, and in the acquisition of sober, orderly and industrious habits, has been, under the care of missionaries of the Wesleyan Methodist Society, both rapid and uniform. The total number of the Indians up to the year 1839 does not appear to have exceeded 350. Since then their number has increased greatly by immigration, chiefly from the Saginaw Bay in the State of Michigan, and by the settlement of wandering Indians; and in 1842, as many as 741 received presents.

There are two other settlements under the same superintendance; one at the River aux Sables, in the township of Bosanquet, on a reserve of 2650 acres, and another almost adjoining it, on a reserve of 2446 acres, at Kettle Point in the same township, where five families reside.

These Indians also possess a fourth reserve, on the River St. Clair, within the township of Moore, containing 2575 acres. Owing to the immigration which has taken place on this portion, since the notice to the visiting Indians of the United States was issued, and the removals which have occurred at these and the other Indian settlements in the neighbourhood, together with the mode in which the returns have been rendered, it is difficult to state with precision the progress and the increase of each settlement.

At present they are established chiefly on the front of the upper reserve, having small farms of six and a half chains in width on the River St. Clair. The total number of separate farms is forty-two; on sixteen of which there are good substantial log houses, erected by the government on the first formation of the settlement; but on the lower part of the reserve, where no houses were built by the government, the Indians reside in small log or bark houses of their own erection. There is only one log building resembling a barn; but almost all the Indians have small out-houses or sheds in which they house their crops.

From a return made in 1839, there were twenty families occupying houses, who had 146 acres of land cleared, of which 100 were under cultivation. Their stock then consisted of two oxen, three cows, and two pigs; and they possessed three ploughs, two harrows, and nine sleighs. At present there are thirty-two families settled on the reserve, who have improved 205 acres of land: four individuals have improved from ten to thirty acres; of the others, fifteen have five acres or more, and the remainder under five acres cleared. There are also five families settled on some land purchased with their annuity, and some held by license of occupation under the government, in Enniskillen. These have about forty acres under cultivation, and possess two good log houses, and two small log barns.

The Indians of the River aux Sables, have about sixty acres under improvement, and one log house. Those at Kettle Point have twenty acres of improved land, and two log houses. The land on the upper reserve was regularly surveyed and laid out in farms. The chief with the approval of the superintendent, placed most of the present occupants on these lands; but it is not indispensable that he should be consulted, as the members of the tribe may choose any unoccupied spot; when once in possession they are secure from intrusion, but repeated ill conduct or drunkenness would subject them to be expelled from the reserve of the chief.

They are decidedly improved in agriculture: they now understand ploughing, seeding, harrowing, the management of cattle, &c. They possess eight ploughs and four harrows, which each family uses alternately: a number of scythes and sickles, two fanning mills, and four cross-cut saws, form part of their general stock; besides which each family possesses an axe, and a sufficiency of hoes, &c. They have nine yoke of oxen, eight cows, and some young stock; besides a large number of horses and pigs. They are exceedingly attentive to their cattle, and feed them well during the winter. They cultivate chiefly Indian corn and potatoes, with small quantities of spring wheat, oats and peas. The field labour is entirely done by the male adults; but the women do all the lighter work of weeding and hoeing the Indian corn and potatoes.

Their fondness for hunting is much diminished, and they seldom hunt except when obliged to do so by want of meat, their stock at present being insufficient to keep them supplied. They have two excellent fisheries, yielding an abundance of herrings and whitefish; and, during the run of the fish in the spring and fall they devote a great part of their time to fishing. They have seines, which the young men, combining in bands, use alternately. Besides the fish which they retain for their own consumption, they dispose of considerable quantities to the white settlers on the banks of the river.

The majority of these Indians are Wesleyan Methodists; all those residing in the upper reserve belong to that community, and attend public worship, which is performed in a capacious meeting-house built for the joint purpose of a church and school-house by the government, and lent to the mission; those at the River aux Sables are either members of the Church of England, or are desirous of being admitted into it. There are also one or two families of Roman Catholics; and those residing at Kettle Point are heathens.

The members of the Church of England at the River aux Sables, to which place they retired about two years ago, have as yet neither a clergyman nor a place of worship. This year a catechist, an Indian by birth, has been appointed by the bishop to the charge of this settlement.

There is a school-house at the upper reserve, under the direction of the missionary, which is attended by twenty or thirty scholars of both sexes. The health of these Indians is good—their numbers are on the increase; they generally have five children to a family, of whom perhaps three arrive at maturity.

Many of these Indians are industrious; some of those at the upper reserve are employed to cut cord-wood by the white settlers, and a few of them will manage to cut and pile three cords of wood per day: others employ themselves in making bowls, brooms, rush mats and matting, axe handles, baskets, &c., which they usually manage to dispose of to the white settlers in the neighbourhood of the St. Clair.

ST. CLAIR, LAKE.

A Lake situated between Lake Huron and Lake Erie. It receives the waters of the upper lakes from the River St. Clair, and discharges them into the Detroit River. In the widest part it is about twenty-six miles across; and in length, from the head of the Detroit River to the entrance of the River St. Clair, it is about twenty-five miles. In the upper portion of the lake are several large islands, the principal of which are Walpole Island, which is inhabited by Indians (for a description of which see "Walpole Island"), and St. Anne's Island. All the islands to the west of Walpole Island belong to the Americans. The north-eastern channel, separating the island from the main land, is called "Chenail Ecarté;" and that dividing Walpole and St. Anne's Islands is called "Johnson's Channel."

Besides the River St. Clair, Lake St. Clair receives the River Thames, Bear Creek, Little Bear Creek, and several smaller streams, which enter it on the west and south sides.

Much of the land bordering on the lake is low and marshy, and in places there are extensive plains, which are useful for grazing cattle.

A great rise took place in the lake in the year 1827, which did great damage to the land bordering on it, laying much of the low land under water, and destroying many fine orchards. It has since been gradually subsiding, and the land is becoming dry again, but the damage to the fruit trees was irreparable.

ST. JOHNS.

A Village on the town-line between Thorold and Pelham (the principal part of the village being in Thorold), situated on the road from Hamilton to the Falls of Niagara. It contains about 400 inhabitants and a Methodist church.

ST. LAWRENCE. (The principal River in Canada.)

It receives the waters of the great lakes from Lake Ontario and conveys them to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It is nearly half a mile wide at its commencement, and ninety miles wide at its mouth. The name was originally given to the Gulf, and afterwards extended to the River, by Cartier, an early French navigator, in 1534, in honour of a saint in the Romish calendar. Soon after its commencement, it expands into the "Lake of the Thousand Isles;" a portion of the river, the scenery of which is most beautiful and romantic, being studded with islands, some of which are many acres in extent, and others only a few feet square, and most of which are covered with red cedar; some are only just above the surface of the water, and others are abrupt and craggy rocks, jutting up perpendicularly to the height of thirty or forty feet. Sometimes you pass through a narrow channel, between rocks, where, at a short distance, you would imagine there was scarcely room for a boat to pass. In passing through the lake, during the last summer, in company with a German who had travelled over Germany, Switzerland, and France, he declared that in point of natural beauty, the scenery of the Rhine was not to be compared to it. He acknowledged that the addition of old castles and picturesque ruins, added charms to the scenery of the Rhine, that were wanting in that of the St. Lawrence; but that in true natural beauty, it was far from equal to the Lake of the Thousand Isles.

There are several rapids in the river, some of which it is difficult, and others impossible for sailing vessels or other craft to ascend; and steamboats and vessels, conveying goods between Kingston and Montreal, have been in the habit of descending the rapids, and returning by the Ottawa River, being towed by steamboats through the Rideau Canal. The principal of these rapids, are the Galoppes Rapids, Point Iroquois do., Rapide Plat do., Parren's Point do., the Long Sault do., the Coteau do., the Cedars do., the Cascades do., and the Lachine do. The Galoppes Rapids are situated at about six miles below Prescott. The current in the river is very strong, varying from six to ten miles per hour. The first class steam passage vessels can overcome these rapids, as those at Point Iroquois, Rapid Plat, and Farren's Point in the natural state of the river; but to enable trade vessels generally to ascend the Galoppes, improvements are in progress, which consist of one guard lock, one lock with a lift of between seven and eight feet, and a lateral cut or canal two miles in length. The Point Iroquois Rapids occur at about twelve miles below Prescott; to enable vessels to ascend them, a canal has been constructed about three miles in length, with a lock having a lift of about six feet. This work is not quite finished, but will be completed during the present year. The Rapide Plat Rapids are about nineteen miles below Prescott, and to overcome them, a canal has been made about four miles in length, with a guard lock, and a lift lock having about eleven and a half feet rise. The Farren's Point Rapids are about thirty-three miles below Prescott. The improvements here consist of a canal about one mile in length, with a lock having about four feet lift. The next rapids are those of the Long Sault; these are serious, and may indeed be called insurmountable obstacles to ascending the river; they have been avoided by the construction of the Cornwall Canal, which is about twelve miles in length, and commences at the village of Dickenson's Landing, eleven miles above the town of Cornwall. The next work connected with the St. Lawrence is the Beauharnois Canal, the object of which is to open a communication from Lake St. Francis to Lake St. Louis, avoiding all the rapids of the Coteau, the Cedars, and the Cascades, which occur in the portion of the St. Lawrence between those lakes.

During the season of 1844 it was stated, and generally believed, that a new channel had been discovered through the Cedars Rapids, with a considerable depth of water; and it was supposed, therefore, that no obstruction existed to the passage of vessels, drawing from eight to nine feet water, down all the rapids to Montreal. However, it appeared that this was a mistake; for as the proprietor of the steamboat St. George was endeavouring to take his boat (drawing six feet water) through the newly discovered channel, she struck so heavily in several parts of the Coteau and Cascades Rapids as to make it necessary to run her into the entrance of the Beauharnois Canal, to prevent her from sinking.

The several works of the enlargement of the Lachine Canal are nearly completed, and are expected to be sufficiently so to allow of the passage of first class vessels, which then will be enabled to run up from Montreal to Toronto and Hamilton; and, through the Welland Canal, to Lakes Erie, St. Clair and Huron. Below Montreal, the St. Lawrence is navigable for first class vessels from the ocean.

There are many islands in the St. Lawrence, some of large size, and others mere rocks. Of these, the largest above Lake St. Francis, are Gore Island, opposite the townships of Leeds and Landsdowne; and Sheek's Island and Cornwall Island, opposite the townships of Cornwall and Osnabrock. Below Lake St. Francis, there are many islands, the principal of which is the Island of Montreal; but as these are all in the Lower Province, to which the present work does not extend, it is necessary to omit a description of them. The base of the islands in the St. Lawrence is limestone, and they are mostly covered with cedars, and other trees of the pine tribe.

There have been expended on the improvements of the St. Lawrence up to the 1st of July, 1844, the latest date to which the returns have been published—

The banks of the St. Lawrence, above Montreal, are generally rather low, the greater portion of them have been long settled, and bear the aspect of a country which has been long reclaimed from its primeval wildness.

From its commencement, till it reaches the St. Regis settlement, the St. Lawrence separates Upper Canada from the United States; afterwards it divides Upper from Lower Canada; and it forms the southern boundary of the Johnstown and the Eastern districts.

The principal towns and villages on the St. Lawrence, are Brockville, the district town of the Johnstown District; Cornwall, the district town of the Eastern District; Prescott, in the township of Augusta; Gananoque, in Leeds; and Milleroches, in Cornwall.

between Sunnidale and Nottawasaga; then makes a bend and runs north-east, parallel with the bay, just within the township of Flos. Much of the land in the township is hilly and broken. Eighteen thousand four hundred acres of Crown lands are open for sale in Sunnidale, at 8s. currency per acre. There is one saw mill in the township.

TALBOT DISTRICT.

Consists of the county of Norfolk, which comprises the townships of Charlotteville, Houghton, Middleton, Townsend, Woodhouse, Windham, and Walsingham, and for all purposes, except that of representation in the Legislative Assembly, and that of registration of titles, the townships of Rainham and Walpole. The Talbot District is bounded on the north-east by the Niagara District and the Gore district; on the north by the Brock District; on the west by the London District; and on the south by Lake Erie. The district is watered by Big Creek, and a small portion of Otter Creek, besides numerous smaller streams, many of which are excellent mill-streams. The land varies in quality; that in the townships of Walsingham, Houghton and Middleton is principally timbered with pine, that in the other townships is hardwood and pine intermixed. Long Point, which is now an island, is included in the district. Much of the land in the district is rolling, and Simcoe, the district town, is very handsomely situated.

The Talbot District is settled principally by Canadians, with a few Scotch, Irish and English. It improves but very slowly, and between January, 1842, and January 1844, only 2,800 acres of land were brought into cultivation.

Besides Simcoe, the district town, there are in the district, the villages of Port Dover and Port Ryerse in Woodhouse, Normandale, (where is a blast furnace for smelting the iron (bog) ore found in the neighbourhood) Vittoria and St. Williams in Charlotteville, Waterford in Townsend, Port Rowan and Port Royal in Walsingham, and Fredericksburgh in Middleton. There are no Crown lands for sale in the Talbot District.

THAMES, RIVER.

One of the principal rivers in Canada West, formerly called La Tranche. The north, or principal branch, takes its rise in the great swamp, north of the Huron District ; passes through McKillop and Logan, into the north corner of Fullarton, where it is joined by a branch from Hibbert. Lower down in the township it is joined by a small branch ; it then passes out of the south corner of Fullarton, cuts across the east corner of Blanshard into Nissouri, where it is joined by a branch, called the "Avon," which runs through Easthope and Zorra. It then flows into the township of London, where it is joined by a branch from Usborn and Biddulph. At the town of London it is joined by the east branch, which takes its rise in Easthope forms the dividing line between Blandford and Zorra, separates West from North Oxford, North from South Dorchester, and then flows along the south border of the township of London, separating it from Westminster. After joining the north branch, the united stream continues its course in a south-westerly direction, forming the dividing boundary between the townships of Lobo, Carradoc, Ekfrid, Mosa, Zone, Camden West, Chatham and Dover, on the north ; and Delaware, Southwold, Dunwich, Aldboro, Orford, Howard, Harwich, Raleigh, and East Tilbury, on the south ; between which last township and Dover, it discharges itself into Lake St. Clair. It is joined by many small streams in its course, and at Chatham it is joined by McGregor's Creek.

On the upper portions of this river are numerous grist and saw mills.

At and above Delaware, it affords fine trout fishing ; and below, during the spring, quantities of white fish, pike, pickerel, and muskelonge are taken, with occasionally sturgeon. Several hundred barrels of fish are frequently cured at and in the neighbourhood of Chatham.

The Thames is navigable for steamboats and schooners to Louisville, a village nearly thirty miles from its mouth, and might be made navigable to London, at no very great expense. To Louisville, it is of an average depth of 16 feet, and in breadth from 200 to 300 feet. The river passes through some of the finest country in Western Canada ; the banks on the upper portion being high and rolling ; while below, for a distance of about thirty-five miles, the land is mostly level and rich, forming some of the best farming land in the Western District ; and noted for its superior growth of wheat. Many of the farms on this portion of the river, have been settled for fifty years, and are in a high state of cultivation, with fine orchards.

There are large quantities of fine white oak and black walnut on the banks of the river, and a considerable trade has for some years been carried on in staves, and walnut lumber. The former are floated down the river from the land where they are cut, to Chatham, where they are collected and shipped on board schooners, which are sent from Kingston, and other ports, for that purpose.

At London and Delaware, are handsome bridges lately erected over the river; that at Delaware is particularly admired. A new bridge is expected to be erected at Chatham, during the year 1846. The scenery on many parts of the Thames is very picturesque.

There are three Indian settlements on the Thames, in the townships of Orford, Delaware, and Carradoc, occupied by Indians of the Delaware, Chippewa, Munsee, and Oneida tribes.

The settlement of the Delaware Indians, was one of the first established by Indians in Canada West. In 1792, the principal remnant of the once flourishing congregations of the Moravian, or United Brethren Church, in the United States, was compelled to seek an asylum in Upper Canada, where they were favourably received by the provincial authorities, and were permitted to settle on the River La Tranche, (now called the Thames). By an Order in Council, dated 10th July, 1793, a large tract of land on the river, comprising about 50,000 acres, was granted for their use; on which they proceeded to build a village, called Fairfield, a church, and other premises, at the expense of a voluntary society, established at Bethlehem, in the state of Pennsylvania, in the year 1787, under the name of "The Brethren's Society for the Propagation of the Gospel." By a second Order in Council, dated 26th February, 1799, a survey of this tract was ordered to be made, and the land was appropriated to the trustees of the Moravian Society, "to be reserved for ever to the society, in trust, for the sole use of their Indian converts.

The first settlement was destroyed in 1813, by an invading army of Americans. A severe battle was fought in the village, and the noted Indian chief, Tecumseth, was killed. After which event, the tribe removed to the opposite side of the river, in the township of Orford, in the Western District; where they possess a tract of land, containing about 25,000 acres. At present, there are only two or three families residing on the old battle ground, on the north side of the river. In 1836, these Indians were induced by Sir F. Head to surrender a large portion of their lands, about six miles square, in exchange for an annuity of £150.

The number of Indians who belong to the tribe of the Delawares, was 302 in 1837; but owing to a dissension which arose the previous year, relative to the sale of their lands, a portion of the community retired to Missouri, United States; and their present number is only 153. The settlement in Orford is generally known as Moraviantown.

The Chippewas and Munsees occupy a tract of land, containing about 9000 acres, in the township of Carradoc, in the London District. It is only within the last ten years that the Chippewas have been reclaimed from a wandering life, and settled in their present location. The Munsees have been settled since the year 1800, on land belonging to the Chippewas, with the consent of that tribe. Their village is called "Munsee-town." The present number of Chippewas is 378, and of Munsees 242.

The Oneidas are a band of American Indians, who came into Canada in the year 1840, and have purchased, with the produce of their former lands and improvements, sold to the American Government, a tract of about 5000 acres, in the township of Delaware, in the London District, which is separated by the River Thames, from the Chippewa and Munsee settlements. Their number is 436. There are also several Pottawatamie families, who have fixed their residence among the Chippewas, during the last year; and a band of about 500 Senecas, from Tonawantee, in the state of New York, are expected shortly to form a settlement near their brethren, the Oneidas.

The Chippewas possess an annuity of £600, granted by the government for a surrender of land made in 1832; the Moravians have £150 per annum, in exchange for land ceded to Sir F. B. Head; the Munsees have no annuity.— These three tribes partake of the presents. The Oneidas neither possess an annuity, nor are entitled to presents; but they brought with them into Canada a considerable sum of money, received from the American government in purchase of their lands and improvements, which they lodged in the hands of the chief superintendent.

The Moravian Delawares are collected in a village, which contains one frame and thirty-four log-houses, with ten barns. They have 292 acres under cultivation. Their stock consists of 14 oxen, 40 cows and 47 heifers, 60 horses, 35 sheep, and 200 swine: they possess 8 waggons, 16 ploughs, 5 harrows, 3 fanning mills, &c.

The Chippewas and Munsees live on small farms, scattered over their tract. Some of the Chippewas are settled on surveyed lots of 20 acres each. This tribe occupies 76 log houses and six wigwams, with 25 barns attached. They have 450 acres under cultivation. Their stock consists of 30 oxen, 27 cows, 44 heifers, 82 horses and colts, and 400 swine. Their agricultural implements include 4 waggons and carts, a fanning-mill, 9 ploughs, 9 harrows, &c. They have a blacksmith's forge, and two and a half sets of carpenter's tools.

The Munsees occupy one frame and 50 log houses, to which are attached 10 barns. They have 269 acres under cultivation. They possess 14 oxen, 50 cows, 30 heifers, 55 horses and colts, and 250 swine. Their implements include 5 waggons, 11 ploughs, 7 harrows, a fanning-mill, &c.

The Oneidas, who are more recently settled, but who brought with them the means of purchasing from old settlers, occupy 6 frame and 48 log houses, with 4 wigwams; they have also 5 frame and 15 log barns. They cultivate 335 acres of land. Their stock consists of 64 oxen, 61 cows, 27 heifers, 17 horses, and 162 swine. They possess 14 waggons and carts, 13 ploughs, 16 harrows, three fanning-mills, two sets of carpenter's tools, &c.

Those families who live in wigwams do so from necessity, and not from choice.

A number of the Chippewas are settled on surveyed lots, as already stated; but in general each Indian selects the spot which he wishes to cultivate, and the chiefs do not interfere. The extent of land cultivated by each family varies from one to fifteen acres. When a family has no land under cultivation, they depend upon the bounty of their neighbours, who are always ready to share with those in want. They also hunt; and make bowls, brooms and baskets, which they sell to the whites. There is very little decrease in the partiality of these Indians for hunting and fishing. They usually leave their homes towards the end of October, and remain away until the beginning of January: they also spend about a month during each spring in the chase. They resort to the unsettled lands in the London and Western Districts; and it is probable that as soon as these lands are occupied, they will be compelled to abandon the chase. The effect of the gradual settlement of the country has been to assimilate their habits to those of the whites, and to attach them to their homes; they now hunt and fish as near home as possible.

With regard to their religious and moral condition, a very decided improvement has taken place within quite a recent period. The Delawares have been converted from Paganism since the year 1783; they are all Christians, and belong to the Church of the United Brethren, who maintain a missionary among them. The converted Chippewas and Munsees belong to the Church of England, and the Wesleyan Methodist Church; but some of them remain heathens. The Pottawatamies and Oneidas are for the most part heathens.

A clergyman who has ministered among these Indians during the last seven years was appointed missionary in 1840, at a salary of £100, borne upon the parliamentary grant.

The Moravians have a place of worship at their own settlement; the Episcopalians and Methodists have each a chapel in the Chippewa and Munsee settlement, and there is a Methodist chapel in the Oneida settlement.

There is a school in the Moravian settlement; two among the Chippewas and Munsees, and one among the Oneidas. The former is attended by forty-one scholars, of whom twenty-three are boys from five to fifteen years of age, and eighteen girls, from six to fourteen. The schoolmaster is maintained by the Moravian Missionary Society.

The school at Lower Munsee is under the control of the Missionary Society of the Church of England, and the scholars belong to the Chippewa and Munsee tribes. The schoolmaster receives an annual salary of £50 from the annuity of the tribe. The school is attended by twenty-one boys from six to fifteen years of age, and by four girls from six to ten; besides a number of young men and women who attend occasionally.

The second school for the same two tribes is under the control of the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society in Canada. It is attended by seventeen boys and eighteen girls, between six and fourteen years of age, and by three young men. The school in the Oneida settlement is also under the control of the Wesleyan Methodist Society; the teacher is an Indian of the Oneida tribe. It is attended by sixteen boys from six to sixteen years of age, and by seventeen girls from five to fifteen.

These tribes are on the increase since their conversion to Christianity. Their health is generally good, although many are stated to die from want of proper nourishment and medical treatment: diseases are on the decrease among them. The average number of children born to a couple is eight; of whom about three are reared. A small number only are half-breeds.

These Indians are under the general charge of a superintendent of the Indian department, who resides at Delaware.

There is a small village on the lake shore, called "Beaverton," where is a post office. The steamboat Beaver stops here, but cannot approach the shore, on account of the shelving nature of the bank; there not being a sufficient depth of water close in shore. There are some good, and prettily situated clearings on the banks of the lake. There are one grist and two saw mills in the township.

Population in 1842, 670.

Ratable property in the township, £9470.

TORONTO.

The District Town of the Home District, situated in the south-east of the township of York, on a bay of Lake Ontario. The neighbourhood first commenced settling about fifty years ago; but for some years it advanced very slowly. In 1799 the whole district, which then included a large portion of the surrounding country, which has since been formed into separate districts, contained only 224 inhabitants. In 1817 Toronto (then Little York) contained a population amounting to 1200; in 1826 it had increased to 1,677; and in 1830, to 2860. Since then its progress has been rapid; and in 1842 it contained 15,336 inhabitants; and in 1845, 19,706.

Toronto became the capital of the Upper Province in the year 1797; and remained so till after the union of the Upper and Lower Provinces, when the seat of government was removed to Kingston in 1841 by Lord Sydenham. Had this event taken place ten years sooner, it might have had a serious effect upon the prosperity of the town; but in 1841 Toronto had become a place of too great commercial importance to feel much ill effect from the removal of the government offices, and the loss of the expenditure of a few thousand pounds per annum.

The situation of that portion of the town bordering on the bay is rather low, particularly in the east of the city, towards the River Don; in the west the banks are higher, and the land generally slopes gradually up from the water's edge; so that the farther back from the bay, the higher, drier, and more healthy does the situation become.

Toronto was incorporated in the year 1834. By the act of incorporation the city was divided into five wards, called St. George's, St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's, St. David's, and St. Lawrence's—each ward to have the power to elect two aldermen and two common councilmen, who are to choose the mayor from amongst the aldermen. The corporation to have the power to make by-laws for the regulation of the internal police of the city, &c.

The improvements made in the City of Toronto within the last two years have been astonishing; many new buildings (and those the handsomest in the city) have been erected; and the side-walks, several of which were in a very dilapidated state, and some almost impassable, have been relaid and much improved. Toronto now contains ninety-one streets, some of which are of great length; the planked portion of King Street being about two miles long. The extreme length of the city, from the Don Bridge to the western limits of the city, is upwards of three miles. Property which was purchased a few years since for a mere trifle, has increased wonderfully in value; and many houses in King Street pay a ground rent of £100. Rents are generally as high as in the best business situations in London, England; and some houses in good situations for business let at from £200 to £250 per annum.

Among the public buildings those particularly deserving of notice are the new front to Osgoode Hall, the banks, and St. George's Church. The Lunatic Asylum and the Catholic Cathedral, now erecting, will be extensive and handsome buildings. Besides these, many of the private buildings have added greatly to the embellishment of the city and its environs. The new stores at present erecting in King Street, from the design of Mr. Thomas the architect, will be when finished the handsomest buildings of the kind in Canada, and equal to anything to be seen in England.

The public buildings in Toronto comprise the Jail, a large stone building, situated in the east end of the town; the Court-house, which is of brick, and contains the district offices; the old Market-house, over which are the Newsroom and Athenæum (or Public Library); the new City Hall, where are kept the offices of the corporation officers, and the police office; the Upper Canada College; the old Parliament Buildings (part of which is at present occupied by the officials of King's College); the Hospital; and the Post Office. There are within the city twenty-one churches and chapels: of these five are Episcopal, one Church of Scotland, one Presbyterian Church of Canada, one United Secession Presbyterian, two Roman Catholic, two British Wesleyan, one Primitive Methodist, two Canadian Wesleyan, one Congregational, one Christian, one Unitarian, one Baptist, one Disciples, and two for coloured people—Methodist and Baptist. There are also a House of Industry, Mechanic's Institute, two Fireman's Halls, Fish Market, Custom-house and Barracks.

The city is lighted with gas, and there are water-works for the conveyance of water from the bay to the different houses; and there are also in the city regular stations for coaches and cabs. Steamboats leave daily for Kingston, Hamilton, Niagara, Queenston and Lewiston, and Rochester, calling at Port Hope, Cobourg and other intermediate places; and stages leave daily for all parts of the country. Omnibuses have been established to run regularly to Richmond Hill, Thornhill, Cooksville and Streetsville, and every hour from the market place to Yorkville; and a horse ferry-boat plies during the day between the city and the opposite island.

Amongst the different societies and institutions are to be found the Freemasons, who have a provincial grand lodge; the St. George's, St. Patrick's and St. Andrew's Societies, St. Patrick's Benevolent Society, three Old Fellows' Lodges, a Home District Agricultural Society, Toronto Horticultural Society, the Medico-surgical Society, Toronto Athenæum, Church Society, Bible Society, Mechanic's Institute, a Dispensary, a Theatre (the performers in which are principally amateurs), a Temperance Reformation Society, a Turf Club, Cricket Club, Curling Club and Chess Club, four Fire Companies with four engines, two Hook and Ladder Companies, a Hose Company, and a Property Protection Company. There are also a Home District Savings Bank, a Fire and Life Assurance Company, and a Mutual Fire Insurance Company.—The University of King's College is empowered to grant degrees in the several arts and sciences; the Presbyterians have a Theological Seminary, and the Congregationalists an Academy.

Ten newspapers are published in Toronto; viz., British Canadian, Herald, Patriot, British Colonist, Examiner, Christian Guardian, Star, Mirror, Banner and Globe. The following monthly periodicals are also published here—the Upper Canada Jurist, British American Cultivator, and Sunday-school Guardian.

VICTORIA DISTRICT.

Consists of the County of Hastings, which returns a member to the House of Assembly, and comprises the following townships—Elzevir, Grimsthorpe, Inn-gerford, Huntingdon, Lake, Marmora, Madoc, Rawdon, Sydney, Tudor, Thurlow, and Tyendenaga. A large portion of the district consists of excellent land, and the townships of Sydney, Thurlow, and Tyendenaga contain many fine farms.

Iron ore of superior quality exists in the townships of Marmora and Madoc; and in the former township a bed of lithographic stone has been discovered, which, after being examined and tested by a lithographer in London (England), was pronounced of excellent quality; but I am not aware if the bed has yet been quarried.

Clearing is going on rapidly in the district; and large quantities of potash are made. Eleven thousand five hundred acres of land were brought into cultivation between January, 1842, and January, 1844.

The district is settled principally by Irish and Scotch, U. E. Loyalists and their descendants, and Canadians.

Belleville, the district town, is a thriving place. The only other villages in the district are Shannonville, in Tyendenaga; and a small settlement in each of the townships of Madoc and Marmora.

WALPOLE ISLAND.

A Large Island situated in the north-east of Lake St. Clair; it is about ten miles long, and from three to four miles wide. It is a fine island, and is occupied by parties of Chippewa, Potawatamie, and Ottawa Indians. These Indians are also known under the name of Chippewas of Chenail Ecarte. The Chippewas who have long hunted over the waste lands about the Chenail Ecarte and Bear Creek, are a branch of the same nation that is settled in Sarnia, and share in the same annuity. The Pottawatamies are recent immigrants from the United States.

The settlement at Walpole Island was commenced at the close of the American war, when Colonel McKie, called by the Indians "White Elk," collected and placed upon this island the scattered remains of some tribes of Chippewas who had been engaged on the British side. Being left for many years without any interference or assistance on the part of the government, they became a prey to the profligate whites settled on the frontier, who by various frauds, and in moments of intoxication, obtained leases, and took possession of the most fertile and valuable part of the island.

When the settlement was first placed under the charge of an assistant superintendent in 1839, these Indians possessed scarcely an acre of arable land, but he has succeeded in expelling many of the most mischievous intruders, under the authority of an act of the Provincial Legislature, passed in 1839; and has placed their farms at the disposal of the Indians, who have since become more settled, and have turned their attention more generally to agriculture.

The number on the Island has increased considerably since 1839, owing to the influx of several bands of Pottawatamies, and Ottawas, invited by the proclamation of 1837, relative to the discontinuance of presents to visiting Indians. Previously to that year they did not exceed three hundred; but in 1842, presents were distributed to one thousand, one hundred and forty, viz.

Chippewas, old residents.....	319
Chippewas, arrived within a year.....	197
Potawatamies and Ottawas from Michigan.....	507
On their way to settle.....	117

Total.....1140

The new comers are very different in character and habits from the resident Chippewas. The Pottawatamies especially, are skilful hunters, and have long depended solely upon the chase. They are wild, turbulent, mendicant and dishonest. They possess no land or property. They have been kindly received by the resident tribes, and allowed to settle on their lands; but their roving habits render them averse from settling; they prefer remaining poor, ragged and filthy, to the restraints of civilized life; they are a burthen on their brethren, a nuisance to the white farmers in the district which they frequent, and their arrival in the province is in every respect to be regretted. Their chief hunting grounds are near the Thames, and the upper parts of the two branches of Bear Creek. They also hunt in the United States, but with some danger to themselves, as the Americans do not allow it.

The Indians who are settled upon Walpole Island, occupy the farms and houses hitherto possessed by the white squatters, together with a few houses erected by themselves. The present number of dwellings is twenty-eight, of which three are framed, with several more in the course of erection, and four log barns. There is no village, the farms being detached, as among the white settlers. There are five inferior chiefs among the Chippewas, who live surrounded by their own relations and connections by marriage; and the young men, who though under the control of the head chief, recognise especially their own leader. These, on the expulsion of the squatters, met together, and subdivided the farms and arable land among themselves, according to their numbers. Thus, each separate band cultivates one vast enclosure; each man planting more or less according to his industry. It is intended, however, to lay out the fields more regularly.

Their acquaintance with agriculture is of recent date, but their progress has been satisfactory. In 1839, they planted only Indian corn, and used no other implement but the hoe. At present they have nine ploughs, and as many yoke of oxen, besides scythes and sickles in abundance. They have also a large number of pigs and horses, and the chief has two cows. Steps have been taken to improve the breed of these animals; a large quantity of marsh hay is saved for winter fodder. The extent of cleared land is estimated at 600 acres, and it is annually on the increase. The greatest extent cropped by one Indian may be twelve acres; the smallest, about three acres. At least one hundred heads of families have commenced to till the land within the last two years. When a family has no land in cultivation, its members depend upon the chase and fishing, and the sale of baskets and mats. The chief crop is Indian corn, but they also plant large quantities of potatoes, some oats, buckwheat, and peas. They are about to begin the cultivation of wheat. Much of the lighter part of field labour is still done by the women.

The fondness for hunting and fishing is very much on the decrease among the Chippewas, who seldom indulge in either, except during the winter. The game has almost disappeared in the neighbouring hunting grounds.

All these Indians are heathens; but twenty families have applied for religious instruction. In January, 1841, a missionary of the Church of England was appointed, on a salary of £100, borne upon the parliamentary grant; but whether through the want of a proper interpreter, the distance of the residence, (there being no suitable house on the island) or other circumstances, the Indians have not profited by his labours, and the Bishop has been obliged to appoint another clergyman in his place. It is now intended to erect on the island, with the funds belonging to these Indians, a building adapted for a chapel and school-house, with a house for the missionary; and the plans and estimates have received the approval of the Governor General. A schoolmaster also is to be appointed and paid from the same source. The Indians are anxious for the education of their children; and since the recent death of their old chief, their aversion to become christians has diminished, and may be expected to be gradually overcome.

The health of the settled Indians is very good, and surpasses that of the neighbouring whites; their numbers are also on the increase, but the contrary is the case with the roving Pottawatamies, many of whom have been known to die from the effects of intoxication, or in broils, and from the effects of severe weather during the winter. The number of children born to a family is about five, and the number raised three. There are no regular half-breeds among them, recognised as such.

WELLAND CANAL.

The Channel of water communication between Lakes Erie and Ontario, constructed to overcome the obstruction in the navigation between the two lakes, caused by the Falls of Niagara. Its entrance from Lake Ontario, at Port Dalhousie, is in the north-west corner of the township of Grantham; it then passes through that township and the centre of Thorold, in the south of which it strikes the Welland River; after leaving which it divides, and one branch runs straight on to Lake Erie, while the other is carried to the Grand River.

The Welland Canal was originally projected by Mr. Merritt, in the year 1818, and the work was commenced in 1824.

The design at the time was to connect the Welland River, which is a tributary of the Niagara River, and enters that river above the rapids, and the surface of which is ten feet above the level of Lake Erie, with Lake Ontario, from which it is distant only about sixteen miles. This design to connect the two lakes by a canal so short, failed in consequence of the peculiar geological formation of that part of the ridge situated near the village of Port Robinson, through which the canal must pass. This part, which was found to consist of clay upon quick sand, and which after great expense and labour had been incurred, caved in and destroyed the work, is commonly called the deep cut.

The original design having failed, the Grand River was adopted as the feeder, and a summit level assumed, $6\frac{1}{2}$ feet above Lake Erie, and $336\frac{1}{2}$ feet above Lake Ontario; the descent to the former being overcome by one lock, at Port Colborne; and to the latter by thirty-eight locks. These locks were of wood, 110 feet by 20.

The works on the canal having become very much out of repair—the wood-work of the locks decayed and giving way; and the canal itself very inefficient for the accommodation of the increased traffic through it, and constantly requiring repairs, it was determined to make extensive improvements in the canal,—bearing more the character of a new work altogether—than the patching up of the old one.

The canal, according to the present design, will be navigable throughout by vessels 26 feet 4 inches, by 140 feet, the tonnage of which will be about 450 tons. New and magnificent, and substantial locks (of cut stone) have been constructed, the work of which is equal to that of any public work in the world. The canal has been straightened in many places, and from the increased size and capacity of the new locks, it has been found possible to diminish their number.

The Grand River was originally intended as the feeder, and principal channel for the canal; but it was found advisable to take the supply of water from Lake Erie as being less liable to fluctuation in its level, than any river could possibly be. A channel has therefore been formed from the Welland River straight to the lake. This has been a work of enormous labour and expense; a large portion of the cut being formed through the solid rock. This will much diminish the length of the passage, and the cut to Lake Erie will be the principal thoroughfare for all traffic on the canal, passing between the two lakes. The entire length of the canal and its branches will be about fifty-two miles. The harbour at Port Dalhousie is at present very defective, but when the proposed improvements are completed, will be equal to any harbour on the lake.

The original cost of the canal was £450,000; on repairs and other improvements, £250,000 was expended. The construction of the new canal is estimated to cost £750,000. These seem large sums, but when the magnitude and importance of the work is taken into consideration, it will be generally allowed that the money could not have been expended in any way to more advantage to the Province generally, and more particularly so, to that of the country west of the Niagara River.

Great disturbances having frequently occurred along the line of the canal, and many faction fights having taken place amongst the Irish labourers employed on the works, some of which were attended with loss of life, it was found necessary to have an armed force stationed on the canal, in order to overawe the rioters. A company of soldiers was therefore raised from amongst the coloured men settled in the province. In addition to which a party of mounted police were stationed along the line. These measures have had the desired effect, and peace has been since preserved.

The villages on the canal are Port Dalhousie at the entrance, on Lake Ontario, from thence to St. Catharines, $5\frac{1}{4}$ miles, from thence to Thorold, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles, from thence to Allanburgh, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles and from thence to Port Robinson, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles. From Port Robinson to Lake Erie by the Grand River; to the aqueduct, $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles, from thence to Marshville, $8\frac{1}{2}$ miles, from thence to Dunnville, $13\frac{1}{2}$ miles, from Dunnville to Lake Erie, $4\frac{3}{4}$ miles. From Port Robinson to Lake Erie by the feeder; to Merrittsville, 4 miles, to Helmsport or the Junction, 1 mile, from thence to Stonebridge, 6 miles, and from thence to Port Colborne, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

WELLESLEY.

A Township in the Wellington District, is bounded on the east by the township of Woolwich; on the north-east by Peel; on the north-west by Mornington; and on the south by Wilmot. In Wellesley 1,280 acres are under cultivation, only fifty acres are returned as uncultivated. This township formed a part of what was called the Queen's Bush; (crown land, where fifty acre lots were given away to actual settlers). The Canastoga, a branch of the Grand river, runs through the north-east corner of the township.

Population in 1841, 254.

Ratable property in the township, £2,884.

WELLINGTON DISTRICT.

Consists of the county of Waterloo, which comprises the township of Arthur, Amaranth, Bentinck, Derby, Eramosa, Egremont, Guelph, Glenelg, Garafraxa, Holland, Luther, Mornington, Minto, Maryborough, Melancthon, Nichol, Normanby, Peel, Proton, Puslinch, Sydenham, Sullivan, Waterloo, Wilmot, Woolwich, and Wellesley; and, for the purpose of representation in the Legislative Assembly only, the township of Dumfries, and for all purposes except that of representation in the Legislative Assembly, the township of Erin.

The Wellington District is bounded on the east by the Gore, Home, and Simcoe Districts; on the north by the Simcoe District, and unsurveyed lands; on the west by unsurveyed lands, and a small portion of the Huron and Brock Districts; and on the south by the Gore and Brock Districts. It is watered by the Grand River and some of its branches, the Saugenee, and numerous small streams, some of which are excellent mill streams. Some portions of the district, (which formerly composed part of the Gore District) have been long settled, as the township of Waterloo, which has been occupied above forty years. The more northerly townships, as Guelph, Woolwich, Nichol, &c., have been more recently settled. Guelph was laid out nearly twenty years since by Mr. Galt, on a block of land belonging to the Canada Company, and Woolwich, Nichol, Eramosa and Erin, have been settled subsequently; and many of the new townships towards Owen Sound have as yet very few settlers in them. A road has lately been opened by the government from Arthur to Owen Sound, and fifty acre lots have been given to settlers, fronting on the road, with liberty to purchase, within a certain time, the fifty acres in the rear. According to a return made in 1845, there were settled on this road within the first thirty miles above Arthur, a population amounting to 1111, of these 537 were Irish, 222 Scotch, 182 English, French Canadian eighty-four, Anglo-Canadians seventy-eight, Americans eight; and they had under cultivation 2,500 acres of land.

There is much fine land in the district, and some of the best farms in the Province may be found in the townships of Guelph, Waterloo, Wilmot, and Puslinch. Eramosa, Erin and Woolwich are also well settled. Much of the land in the district is timbered with the best kinds of hardwood, maple, beech, Elm, Oak, &c., with a sufficiency of pine for all necessary purposes. The township of Waterloo was settled by a number of emigrants from the United States, consisting of Pennsylvanian Dutch; the rest of the district has been settled almost exclusively by English, Irish, and Scotch emigrants. Guelph, the district town, is situated in the midst of a rolling country, surrounded by handsomely situated, and well cultivated farms, and it is dry and healthy. There are besides in the district, the villages of Preston, Berlin, Glasgow, and Waterloo, in Waterloo; Haysville and Hamburg, in Wilmot; Fergus and Elora, (the latter of which is beautifully situated on the Grand River), in Nichol; and others of less note. There is some fine scenery in the district; that of the falls of Elora is particularly picturesque. Lime stone is abundant in the district, along the course of the Grand River and its branches. The settlers in this district are generally in good circumstances, and are improving the country fast;

15,000 acres of land were brought into cultivation between January, 1842, and January, 1844. In the Wellington District 307,178 acres of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. currency per acre, to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown lands agent at Elora. A few lots in Amaranth, Erin, Garafraxa, and Melancthon, vary in price from 2s. 6d. to 10s. per acre.

Population of the district in 1841, 13,851, since when it has probably increased one fifth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district.

WESTERN DISTRICT.

Consists of the Counties of Essex and Kent. It is the most south-westerly district in the Province, and is bounded on the east by the London District and a small portion of the Huron District; on the north by Lake Huron; on the west by the River St. Clair, Lake St. Clair and the Detroit River; and on the south by Lake Erie. It is watered by the River Thames and the River Sydenham, or Bear Creek; the River aux Sables, and numerous small streams are distributed over the district. This district contains some of the finest land, and the most temperate climate of any portion of the province; the winter is short, and the spring sets in early. The valley of the Thames, as also that of Bear Creek, contain large portions of fine farming land, well adapted for raising wheat; as do also the townships of Moore, Sarnia, Plympton, Warwick and Enniskillen; and the soil for about seven miles below Chatham is noted for the superior quality of peas it produces. The County of Essex is well fitted for the cultivation of Indian corn, and tobacco of very good quality has been raised in it.

This district, although possessing the most temperate climate, the shortest winter, and some of the richest land in the province, has hitherto settled up very slowly. This may be attributed to various causes; in the first place, its remoteness, and till very lately, the lack of convenient modes of reaching it: again, many emigrants newly arrived in the country, having very incautiously settled themselves down on the plains or prairies, within convenient distances of extensive marshes, attracted by the greenness of the pasture (not, after all, much greener than themselves), and the ease with which the land could be brought into cultivation; where, as any reasonable person would have anticipated, they soon (from the miasma arising from the marshes) caught ague and fevers. These, removing to other parts of the country, and blaming, not their own folly, as they ought to have done, but the climate of the country generally, deterred other settlers from venturing into it. It is true that in the Western District there are many wet and marshy places, but not more in proportion than in other parts of the province; but most of these may be easily drained, for many of those places which were wet three or four years ago have been effectually drained in making the new roads through the district. No localities can be drier or more healthy than the townships on the upper portions of the Thames and Bear Creek, and on Lake Huron. And, on a hot summer's day, no situation can be more agreeable than that of the settlers on the banks of Lake Huron, in the township of Plympton,—the air is seldom sultry, and there is generally a refreshing breeze from the lake. On the lake shore vegetation flourishes; and the farms, gardens and orchards never suffer from late or early frosts. In the townships of Dover and Tilbury a large portion of the land consists of open plains, partaking very much of the nature of marsh: these are very useful for grazing cattle, which thrive very well on them; but no man of common sense would dream of making his habitation on them—those of course who have done so, have suffered the consequences.

The soil of a large portion of the district consists of a deep alluvial soil, very rich, and capable of producing large crops. In some of the townships bordering on Lake Erie the soil is a mixture of gravel and loam; and in Sarnia there is a large extent of oak plains. The timber of the district consists of maple, beech, black-walnut, butternut, hickory, oak, elm, &c.

The southern portion of the district has been long settled, many of the occupants in the County of Essex holding their lands under old French grants, which were confirmed to them by the British government after the conquest of Canada. The present inhabitants, the descendants of the original settlers, are still in every particular essentially French, and are too fond (sometimes too much so for the good of the country) of keeping up old French customs. Thus, on the death of a landowner his property becomes divided amongst his children; and on the decease of each of those children, it again becomes subdivided; so that in the present day, in that portion of the district peopled by French Canadians there is scarcely a good-sized farm to be found. And not only are the farms small and insufficient, but the farming is wretched. Many of these people settled on the lower portion of the Thames, actually build their stables on the banks of the river for the convenience of shovelling the manure into it. The following is an example of the difference between French and English farming: About ten years since an emigrant from England, a Lincolnshire farmer, engaged to rent a farm in the township of Dover East. The owners of the land (French Canadians) having exhausted that portion of the land which was cleared, and being too indolent to clear more, were literally starved out; they were therefore compelled to let the farm. When Mr. W. took possession he found nine hundred loads of manure at the barn door. When he took the farm there were forty-five acres of land cleared (out of a hundred acre lot), and he engaged to pay a rent of $50 per annum. He has now had the farm ten years, has cleared thirty additional acres, and is so well satisfied with the quality of the soil that he has leased it for five years, at an annual rent of $180. Since he has had the farm he has sold 1,300 bushels of wheat from one year's crop.

The farms and other settlements in this district generally have very fine orchards attached to them; and fruit is usually very plentiful in the district. Apples have been sold at Chatham at $3\frac{1}{2}d.$ currency per bushel; and peaches have been sold on the shores of Lake Erie at 1s. 3d. per bushel.

Many of the dwellings on the Detroit and St. Clair Rivers are beautifully situated.

Clearing has lately been going on extensively in the townships of Plympton and Warwick, and large quantities of potash have been made; but so little are the advantages of the district generally known, that cultivated farms are to be bought here for from $10 to $15 per acre, which in any other portion of the province would fetch from $30 to $50 per acre. Thirteen thousand acres of land have been brought into cultivation between January, 1842, and January, 1844.

The towns of Chatham, Sandwich (the district town), and Amherstburg are situated in the district; the former on the Thames, and the two latter on the Detroit River; and there are besides in the district the villages of Windsor on the Detroit River; Port Sarnia, Froomefield and Sutherlands on the St. Clair; Errol, in Plympton; and Louisville on the Thames, besides smaller places of less note.

In the Western District 57,850 of Crown lands are open for sale, at 8s. c'y. per acre; to purchase any of which application must be made to the Crown lands agent at Sandwich.

Population in 1844, 27,619; since when it has probably increased one-tenth.

The following abstract from the assessment rolls will show the rate of increase and improvement in the district:

CANADA;

ITS FIRST SETTLEMENT AND EARLY HISTORY,
CLIMATE AND PRODUCTIONS.

CANADA;

ITS FIRST SETTLEMENT AND EARLY HISTORY, CLIMATE AND PRODUCTIONS.

The first settlement made by Europeans in Canada, was in 1535, by Jacques Cartier, a French navigator, who sailed up the river of Canada, (which he named the St. Lawrence, as far as the island of Montreal, where he found a settlement of Huron Indians, called Hochelaga, to which island he gave the name of Mont Royale, (afterwards called Montreal.) He took possession of the territory, which he called New France—built a fort—and wintered in the country. On this expedition he carried off a chief of the natives, and conveyed him to France, where he lived about four years, was converted to Christianity, and died there.

In 1540, an expedition, consisting of five ships, under the command of Cartier, was fitted out by command of François de la Roque, Lord of Robervall, who had been appointed Viceroy of Canada by the King of France; and who himself intended to follow with two additional ships. His departure, however, was postponed till the year 1542. When he arrived in Canada, he built a fort, and wintered about four leagues above the island of Orleans. In 1549, the same nobleman, accompanied by his brother, and a numerous train of adventurers, again embarked for Canada; but they were never afterwards heard of, which so discouraged the government and people of France, that for more than thirty years no further measures were taken to communicate with the settlers who remained in Canada.

In 1576, Martin Frobisher was sent out by Queen Elizabeth, with three small ships, and discovered Elizabeth Foreland, and the straights which still bear his name. He entered a bay in north latitude 63°, and carried off one of the natives. In this voyage he discovered what he supposed to be gold, which encouraged a society of adventurers to send him out the following year, with three other ships, to explore the coast of Labrador and Greenland, with an ultimate view of discovering a passage to India; but he returned without success. He brought away with him nearly two hundred tons of the ore supposed to be gold; which however, to their disappointment, turned out to be some other mineral. In 1578, he sailed again for the continent of North America, with no less than fifteen ships, in search of gold; and carried home immense quantities of the same glittering substance, to the complete ruin of many of the adventurers.

In 1581, the French trade to Canada was renewed, after an interruption of more than thirty years: and in 1583, three ships were employed in the trade to the continent.

In 1598, the Marquis de la Roche received a commission from Henry the Fourth, of France, to conquer Canada; but returned without doing anything of consequence; and shortly afterwards died of vexation. On the death of La Roche, his patent was renewed in favour of M. De Chauvin, who made a voyage up the St. Lawrence, as far as Tadousac; where he left some of his people, and returned with a freight of furs. The following year he sailed again, and proceeded as far as Trois Rivières. In 1603, Pierre du Gast, a gentleman of the bed-chamber to the same king, received a patent, constituting him Lieutenant General of the American territory, from the fortieth to the forty-sixth degrees of north latitude, with power to colonise it, and subdue and convert the natives to Christianity. In 1608, Champlain was sent out with three ships for the purpose of making a permanent settlement; and after having examined all the most eligible situations along the coast of Nova Scotia, (then called Acadia), and the River St. Lawrence, fixed upon the present site of Quebec, where he laid the foundation of what he intended to be the future capital of the country.

In 1627, in the reign of Louis XIII., Canada, then called New France, was, by direction of Cardinal Richelieu, placed together with its trade, under the management of a company, called the "Company of One Hundred Associates;" at the head of which was the Cardinal himself. A commission having been given by Charles I. to David Kertk, and his kinsmen, to conquer the American dominions of France; Kertk attacked Canada, in July, 1628, and continued to carry on his military operations with vigour. In 1630, he appeared again off Point Levi, and sent an officer to Quebec to summon the city to surrender. Champlain, then in command, knowing his means to be inadequate to a defence, surrendered the city by capitulation. The terms of the capitulation were favourable to the French colony; and they were so punctually and honourably fulfilled by the English, that the greater part of the French chose to remain with their captors, rather than return as had been stipulated to France. In 1632, Charles I., by the treaty of St. Germain, resigned the right which he had claimed to New France and Acadia, as the property of England, to Louis XIII., King of France.

In 1635, Rene Rohault, having become a Jesuit, resumed a project which had been interrupted by the English conquest of Quebec, of founding a college in that city; an institution that had been planned ten years before. In this year, M. Champlain died at Quebec.

In 1640, the French king vested the property of the island of Montreal in thirty-five Associates, of whom Maisonneuve, a gentleman of Champaign, was one; and who on the 15th October, 1641, was declared governor of the island; and brought over with him several families to Montreal.

The French in their trade with the neighbouring Indians, being much obstructed by the Mohawks, then a powerful tribe, and being unable to subdue them without assistance, in 1647, sent M. Marie, a Jesuit, as an agent to solicit aid from Massachusetts, with offers of liberal compensation for assistance, which the government of the English colony refused, on the ground that the Mohawks had never injured them.

In the following year, the colonists of Newfoundland sent to the Governor and Council of Canada a proposal of perpetual peace between the colonies, even though the mother countries might be at war. Although the French were much pleased with the proposal, and anxious to conclude an agreement of the kind, the business terminated without success, because the English were firm in their determination not to assist the French against the Iroquois (or Five Nations.)

In 1649, in the month of March, a party of Iroquois, about one thousand in number, attacked the Huron village of St. Ignatius, containing four hundred persons, all of whom, with the exception of three only, were massacred. About five years afterwards, the Eries, a numerous tribe of Indians inhabiting the borders of Lake Erie, were so effectually exterminated by the Iroquois, that were it not for the name of the lake, we should have no memorial of their existence.

In 1665, M. de Courcelles, being appointed governor of New France, transported the regiment of Calignan Salieres to Canada: it consisted of one thousand foot, and they were accompanied besides by numerous families, with mechanics, hired servants, horses (the first ever seen in Canada), cattle and sheep. The one hundred associates in whom the property of the colony was vested, had grown weary of the expense of maintaining the colony, and from the year 1644 abandoned the fur trade to the inhabitants, reserving to themselves as their right of lordship an annual payment of one thousand beavers. Reduced at length to the number of forty-five associates, they made a total resignation of all their rights in 1662, to the French King, who soon afterwards included New France in the grant which he made of the French colonies in America, in favour of the West India Company formed by the great Colbert.

The Mohawks having greatly annoyed the French, were attacked in the following year by a French army of twenty-eight companies of foot, and the whole militia of the colony. This formidable body of troops marched upwards of seven hundred miles, in the depth of winter, from Quebec into the country of the Mohawks, with a view of utterly destroying them; but the Indians retired with their women and children into the depth of the woods, leaving only a few ancient sachems in the villages, who chose rather to die than desert their habitations. These were murdered by the French, and their villages burnt, but nothing was gained by the expedition. In the following year, peace was at length established between the French and the Five Nations, which continued for several years, and they cultivated a mutual trade. In 1670 the small-pox broke out amongst the Indians in the northern parts of Canada, and swept off whole tribes, particularly the tribe of Atlikamegues, which has never since been heard of. Tadusac, the chief mart of the Indian fur trade with the French, was deserted, as was also Trois Rivieres, where the small-pox carried off 1,500 Indians at once. In 1671, a grand congress of the French and of many Canadian Indians was held at the Falls of St. Mary; where the Indians professed submission to the king of France in a formal manner. In 1672, M. de Courcelles, governor of Canada, commenced building a fort on the north side of the outlet of Lake Ontario (near where Kingston now stands), as a barrier against the Iroquois, which was completed in the following year by Count Frontenac, who called it after his own name. The French likewise built a fort at Michilimackinac. In 1674 Quebec was made a bishopric. In 1678 M. de Sale rebuilt the Fort Frontenac with stone; he also launched a bark of ten tons on Lake Ontario, and in the year following another vessel of sixty tons on Lake Erie; about this time he also enclosed a little spot of ground at Niagara with stockades intended for a fort. In 1683, the French erected a fort between the Lakes Erie and Huron; and in the following year M. de la Barre with a large army from Canada made an unsuccessful expedition into the country of the Five Nations, and found it necessary to conclude his campaign with a treaty. He was met at the place appointed by the Oneidas, Onondagas, and Cayugas; the Mohawks and Senecas refusing to attend. Seated in a chair of state, surrounded by his own Indians, principally the Hurons of Lorette, and the French officers, he addressed himself to Garangula, an Onondaga chief, in a very haughty speech, which he concluded with a menace to burn the castles of the Five Nations, and destroy the Indians, unless the satisfaction which he demanded was given. Garangula, who sat at some little distance before his men, with his pipe in his mouth, and the great Calumet of peace before him, did nothing but look at the end of his pipe during this harangue: when it was finished, after walking five or six times round the circle in silence, he stood perfectly upright, and thus addressed the French general: "Onnuntio, I honour you, and all the warriors who are with me honour you. Your interpreter has finished your speech, I now begin mine: my words make haste to reach your ears; hearken to them. Onnuntio, in setting out from Quebec, you must have imagined that the scorching beams of the sun had burned down the forests, which rendered our country inaccessible to the French, or that the inundations of the lakes had shut us up in our castles; but now you are undeceived, for I and my warriors have come to assure you that the Senecas, Cayugas, Onondagas, Oneidas and Mohawks are yet alive." After ascribing the pacific overtures of the general to the impotence of the French, and repelling the charges brought against his countrymen, he thus concludes: "My voice is the voice of all the Five Nations; hear what they say; open your ears to what they speak. The Senecas, Cayugas, Onondagas, Oneidas and Mohawks, say, that when they buried the hatchet at Cataracuay, in the presence of your predecessor, in the very centre of the fort, and planted the tree of peace in the same place, it was then agreed that the fort should be used as a place of rendezvous for merchants, and not as a refuge for soldiers. Hear, Onnuntio, you ought to take care, that so great a number of soldiers as appear now, do not choke the tree of peace, planted in so small a fort, and hinder it from shading both your country and ours with its branches. I do assure you that our warriors shall dance to the Calumet of peace under its leaves, and that we will never dig up the axe to cut it down, until the Onnuntio or the Corlar shall either jointly or separately endeavour to invade the country which the Great Spirit has given to our ancestors. This belt confirms my words, and this other the authority which the Five Nations have given me."

In 1685, according to a return made by order of the Government, the inhabitants of Canada amounted to 17,000, three thousand of whom were supposed to be capable of bearing arms.

In 1687 M. Denonville, who had succeeded De la Barre, took the field at the head of 1500 French and 500 Indians, in order to attack and destroy the Senecas, who had refused to attend at the late treaty, and were known to be firmly attached to the English. He commenced his march from Cataraquy in June; and the scouts of the French army advanced as far as the corn of the Indian settlements, without seeing a single Indian, although they passed within pistol shot of 500 Senecas, who laid on their faces, and suffered them to pass and re-pass without attacking them. At length, when the invading army had approached within a quarter of a league of the chief village of the Senecas, they raised the war shout, accompanied with a discharge of fire arms from all sides. This surprise threw the French into confusion, and the Senecas fell upon them with great fury; but the French Indians being rallied, repulsed them in the end. In this action about a hundred French, ten French Indians, and eighty Senecas were killed. The next day Denonville continued his march, with the intention of burning the village, but he found it already in ashes; the Senecas had burnt it and fled. Two old men only were found in the village, who were cut into pieces and boiled to make soup for the French allies. Before Denonville returned into Canada he built a fort with four bastions at Niagara, in which he left a garrison; but it was soon afterwards abandoned.

In 1689 Denonville was recalled, and Count Frontenac came over as governor of Canada. On the 26th of July in this year a body of 1200 Indians of the Five Nations invaded the Island of Montreal, burnt all the plantations, and made a horrible massacre of men, women and children, throwing the whole French colony into the utmost consternation; insomuch that Valrennes, the commandant at Cataraquy, was ordered by Denonville to abandon that place. In this attack 1000 French are said to have been slain, and twenty-six carried off and burnt alive.

In the following year an attack was made on Quebec by an English fleet, under the command of Sir W. Phipps, which proved unsuccessful. Between this time and the year 1698, when the Count Frontenac died, the war between the French and Indians still continued, with varying fortunes, neither party gaining any very signal advantage over the other; and on the arrival of M. de Calliers in 1699, who succeeded Count Frontenac as Governor of Canada, he terminated the disputes with the Indians by agreeing to an exchange of prisoners; which treaty of peace took place at Onondaga.

In 1705 the loss of a large and richly laden ship bound to Quebec (which was captured by the English), compelled the colonists to raise their own hemp and flax, which by permission of the French court they manufactured into linens and stuffs.

In 1714 the whole number of men capable of bearing arms, between the ages of fourteen and sixty, that could be raised in Canada, only amounted to 4,484; and in 1749 the population had increased so much, that the militia of Canada numbered 12,000.

In 1759 Quebec was taken by General Wolfe, and Niagara was captured by Sir W. Johnston; and on the 8th September, 1760, Montreal, Detroit, Michilimackinac, and all other places within the government of Canada, were surrendered to his Britannic Majesty; and the destruction of a fleet ordered out from France in aid of Canada, completed the annihilation of the French power on the continent of North America. As a reward to those soldiers and officers who had fought during the late war, the governors of the British possessions in North America were empowered to grant to each field officer 5000 acres of land; to a captain, 3000; to a subaltern or staff officer, 2000; to a non-commissioned officer, 200; and to each private 50 acres of land. At this time Canada contained upwards of 65,000 inhabitants; and the exports for the year from Great Britain to Canada amounted to £8,623.

In 1791, by an act of parliament, the Province of Quebec was divided into two separate provinces, to be called the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada; and the first parliament of the Upper Province met at Niagara on the 17th Sept. 1792. In 1797 the second parliament met at Little York (now Toronto); which place continued to be the capital of the Upper Province till after the re-union of the two provinces in the year 1841, when Lord Sydenham removed the seat of government to Kingston, where it remained till 1844, when it was again removed to Montreal. When the two provinces were re-united their designation was changed from Upper and Lower Canada, to Canada West and Canada East. Canada East is inhabited principally by the descendants of the old French settlers, with the exception of Quebec and Montreal (which, being the principal shipping places and commercial depots of the Lower Province, have amongst their population many English, Irish and Scotch merchants, and other persons connected with the trade and shipping interests of the province and Great Britain), and the Eastern townships, which the British American Land Company have been for some time engaged in trying to settle with British emigrants.

The Upper Province, or Canada West, (to which province this work is limited), is settled principally by emigrants and the descendants of emigrants from Great Britain and Ireland. There are also large numbers of U. E. Loyalists (or persons who fought on the side of Great Britain during the American war, a mixture of all nations) and their descendants; and in particular localities there are large settlements of Pennsylvanian Dutch; and there are also many Americans scattered over the country. The Irish have rather a majority in the province, and next to them the English.

Much has been written against, and strange notions are prevalent in Britain respecting, the climate of Canada. Most persons on the other side of the Atlantic imagine that the winter is so severe, and the snow so deep, that it is impossible for any one to stir out of doors without being wrapped up to the eyebrows in furs or woollens; nor even then without the risk of being frozen to death, or lost in the snow. This is a very erroneous idea; and persons after being a short time in Canada are not a little surprised to find the climate very different to what they had expected, and to what it had been represented. Emigrants from England find but little difference between the climate of Canada and that which they have left, except that the former climate is much drier, much more so indeed than any one would be led to expect, considering the immense bodies of water distributed over it and by which it is surrounded. Persons in Upper Canada generally clothe themselves much more lightly than they have been accustomed to, do at home: and many persons who in England always wore both cloak and great-coat in winter, in Canada seldom put on either. It matters little how low the thermometer may be, if there is no wind, a person taking exercise does not feel the cold; the atmosphere being remarkably clear and bracing, with a cloudless sky, the weather is generally very pleasant; and the finest winter's day the author was ever out on, was spent in travelling between Barrie and Penetanguishene, the mercury in the thermometer being early in the morning down to twenty-eight degrees below zero. Indeed, in Upper Canada, parties are heard much more frequently complaining of the heat than of the cold; and (which seems rather singular, considering their colour) the Indians say they suffer much more from the heat in summer than from the cold in winter. To convey a more definite idea of the severity of a winter in Upper Canada, it may be mentioned that the chain of shallow lakes which are distributed over the Newcastle and Colborne districts are seldom or never frozen over hard enough to bear a man with any heavy burden before Christmas, and they are generally open again before the middle of April. Lake Simcoe is seldom ventured upon with sleighs before the end of January; and farther west the winter is still shorter. Owing to the want of proper explanations, and misstatements by travellers and others who have attempted to describe the country (some of whom have seen very little of it), an idea has been formed in England that the great lakes are frozen over in winter, which is entirely a mistake. Lake Erie alone, which is very shallow, is said to have been frozen over two or three times within the last forty years; which, however, is very doubtful. The earth is seldom frozen to a greater depth than from twelve to eighteen inches, and the snow does not generally lie deeper than from eighteen inches to two feet. The length of the winter and the depth of snow vary very much according to the latitude of the locality; for instance, in the south of the Western District there is at least six weeks less winter than in Montreal; and while the snow at Sandwich or Amherstburg is seldom more than a foot in depth, at Penetanguishene it is frequently four feet deep. East or north of London there is generally sufficient snow for sleighing by about the third week in December; this usually lasts for two or three weeks, sometimes a little longer, when a thaw (called from its regular periodical appearance the January thaw) takes place, which continues for a few days, when it is succeeded by a fresh fall of snow; and the sleighing then continues good till the end of February or the beginning of March, when it breaks up altogether. In Upper Canada the occurrence of winters with scarcely any snow at all is not unfrequent; and such seasons are generally found to be injurious to the fall crops of wheat, and are besides considered to be a great misfortune, as they are found in many places to be a serious hindrance both to business and pleasure travelling, the snow when well beaten making the worst road in the province fully equal to a railroad. In fact, the winter is the season for travelling on the roads in Canada: in summer the principal part of the travelling is performed by steamboat. There is a material difference between the climate of Upper and Lower Canada. In Upper Canada a man can, if he chooses, work out of doors at all seasons of the year; but in the Lower Province there are occasionally days in the winter when the cold is so severe that it would be impossible for him to work in the open air.

It is something rather singular with respect to the climate of Canada, that the weather generally changes every three days; for instance, there is seldom more than three days of severe weather at one time, and if the weather continues fair for three days, and does not change on the fourth, there is almost certain to be a continuation of fine weather for two days longer. In summer the thermometer seldom rises above eighty-five degrees, and the heat is generally moderated by pleasant breezes from the lakes. By the following statement from the minutes of the Trinity House at Quebec, it will be seen that navigation never opens later, even there, than the sixth of May, and seldom later than the latter end of April; and the steamboats on the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario, seldom cease running till nearly Christmas, and from Toronto to Niagara they frequently continue to run (weather permitting) through the whole winter.

Statement, from the minutes of the Trinity House at Quebec, of the dates of the opening of navigation, and of the arrival of the first steamboat from Montreal, in each year, from 1817 to 1844.

From the greater dryness of the climate, persons suffer far less from coughs and colds than they do in England; and many persons frequently expose themselves to the weather with impunity, in a manner that in any part of Great Britain would be fraught with great danger. Almost every work on the subject of Canada has a chapter or two devoted to that never-ending and ever-fruitful theme—ague. An emigrant comes out, and (contrary to the advice of every one capable of giving it) thoughtlessly settles himself down in the immediate neighbourhood of a swamp; as might naturally have been anticipated, he catches the "ager," and forthwith he condemns the country—unfairly so: he had previously been warned, but was unwilling to take the advice of those who knew better than himself, and he suffers the consequence of his folly. As well might the whole climate of England be condemned, because the fens of Lincolnshire, Cambridgeshire and Essex produce ague. The Indians are as liable to suffer from ague as the whites.

In consequence of the dryness of the climate, the surface of the country, in the latter part of the summer and autumn, has not that beautiful, verdant appearance that is so attractive in a moist climate like that of England; but this want is amply compensated for by the magnificent appearance, and the beauty of the tints of the forest trees in the autumn, when their leaves are changing. Here every variety of colour may be noticed, intermingled one with another—crimson, orange, yellow, and every variety of brown; the whole forming one of the richest scenes that can well be imagined.

Canada may properly be said to have but three seasons—summer, autumn, and winter; indeed were it not for the change in the appearance of the foliage, it would be difficult to say where summer ends and autumn commences. Generally, as soon as the snow disappears, warm weather sets in, and vegetation is exceedingly rapid, so much so, that although the spring is about a month later than in England, by the end of June vegetation of all kinds is as far advanced as in the latter country. It occasionally happens that frosts occur in May, which do a great deal of mischief, but these are only occasional, and the farmer may always reckon upon fine weather for his harvest. Corn, on an average, is ready for cutting about a fortnight or three weeks earlier than in England, and the grain, when once ripe, dries so fast, that it is not at all unusual for corn to be cut and carried on the same day.

From the warmth of the seasons, and the absence of summer frosts, many fruits that can only be raised under glass in England, such as melons, are grown in the greatest perfection in the open ground. In the southern portions of the province, fruit is grown in such plenty, that peaches have been sold in the Western District, on the shores of Lake Erie, at a quarter of a dollar per bushel, and apples have been sold on the Thames at three-pence halfpenny per bushel. Pumpkins and squashes grow in the open fields to an enormous size; from fifty to eighty pounds weight is not at all unusual. All the vegetable productions of England flourish under proper cultivation; apples, pears, plums, peaches, cherries, raspberries, currants and strawberries; damsons are not yet much cultivated, and gooseberries have had but little attention paid them. Cabbages, peas, beans, celery, asparagus, lettuces, onions, turnips, carrots, parsnips, tomatoes, cucumbers, rhubarb, and spinach grow luxuriantly; and almost every other description of vegetable, necessary or desirable for the table, may be cultivated with very little trouble.

Of the natural productions of the country, amongst the monarchs of the forest may be found, white and red pine, the former of which will frequently be found one hundred feet high to the first branch, and will occasionally reach two hundred feet in height; the average size of the timber cut for the Quebec market, will be in logs of about twenty inches square, and sixty feet in length; white oak, which will cut to about eighteen inches square, and about fifty feet in length; although sticks of both timbers are occasionally cut considerably larger. Of both these kinds of timber immense quantities are annually sent to England; and large quantities of white oak are split up into staves for the manufacture of puncheons, hogsheads, barrels, &c., for the supply of the English and West Indian markets. There are several kinds of ash: white ash, which is valuable for making oars; swamp ash; and prickly ash (or black ash, as it is frequently called), which is an ornamental wood, some of which is very handsome, and is used for making furniture; black and white birch, with the bark of the latter of which the Indians make their light and beautiful canoes; beech; elm; hickory; sugar maple, from the sap of which immense quantities of excellent sugar are made (some families occasionally making as much as two thousand five hundred pounds), and the beautiful birds-eye or curled maple; butternut is also a tree the wood of which is highly ornamental, and the fruit of which is very good eating; it is rather larger than the walnut, richer, but the flavour not quite so delicate. The black walnut, which furnishes the most beautiful wood for cabinet work grown on the continent of America; this wood is as yet but little known in Europe, but it richly deserves to be so; it is much used for the best kinds of furniture in America, sawn into veneers; much of it is most beautifully veined, and some of it is richer in colour, and far more beautiful in appearance than the finest specimens of rosewood. The wild cherry tree (the Laurus Cerasus, or cherry laurel), is very abundant and is much used for common furniture ; it is a hard and durable wood. The bass-wood or lime tree ; on rich moist ground, the white sycamore and button-wood tree ; in the marshes, alder, spotted alder, willow and varieties of thorn ; and in the swamps red and white cedar, tamarack and hemlock ; from the tamarack the gum is obtained with which the Indians cement and make water-tight the seams of their bark canoes : besides which there are the spruce fir, pitch pine (or Scotch fir), larch, black oak, and several other varieties ; the cedar is a most useful wood for many purposes, and very lasting. Of shrubs there are many varieties, amongst which are the sumach and leather-wood tree.

Of the wild fruits of the country may be mentioned the wild cherry, which is principally used for flavouring spirits ; wild grapes, few of which however are to be found sufficiently sweet for eating ; black currants, which although not equal to the cultivated, make a very good preserve ; red currants ; several kinds of gooseberries, red, green and black, the fruit of most of which is covered with prickles, and is only usable when young ; raspberries, which are of a fine flavor ; and nearly equal to the cultivated ; black raspberries ; cranberries, which make a most delicious preserve, and large quantities of which are exported ; none of these however reach England in a state of perfection, the reason of which is that the berries are gathered much too early, long before they are ripe, through the jealousy of the Indians, each of whom is afraid he shall not get his share ; they therefore generally pick them in August, although they are not thoroughly ripe till October ; when they are allowed to hang on the bush through the winter, and are gathered in the spring, they are a very rich fruit. These cranberries grow in marshes, which are generally much infested with rattlesnakes, therefore the white settlers seldom venture into them, but depend for their supply of the fruit upon the Indians. Besides these there are wild plums ; strawberries, which grow in great abundance in particular localities, and which are about equal to the English wild strawberry ; blackberries and hazle nuts ; and many other kinds of wild fruit.

The flowers are almost innumerable, early in the summer the woods are literally clothed with them ; amongst which will be found many beautiful varieties which are cultivated in the English gardens, such as the scarlet lobelia, blue lupin, purple gentian, columbine, violets (without scent), fleur de lis, the beautiful white water lily, two varieties of dog's-tooth violet, scarlet and other honey suckles, wild rose (rosa canina), dogwood, arbutus, diosma crenata, sweet briar, asclepias (two or three varieties), campanula, lyehnis, golden rod, michaelmasdaisy, hyoscyamus niger, hydrastis Canadensis, pyrola (or winter green), hare bell, mimulus, phlox, Solomon's seal, calcicolaria, &c. To give, however, a detailed list of the botanical productions of Canada would occupy a volume. Hops grow wild, and in great perfection.

The living, breathing denizens of the forest are various ; but their numbers are fast diminishing before the destructive progress of civilization. When they shared the sovereignty of the land with the red man, they were comparatively but little disturbed ; but as the country became settled up they were either gradually destroyed, or were obliged to retreat before the advancing footsteps of their common foe. On this subject there has been much misrepresentation in all works published on Canada. Game of all kinds has generally been represented as so plentiful, that no person would so much as dream of starting for Canada without at least one gun ; and emigrants on their arrival, generally keep glancing from side to side as they walk up the streets, expecting every instant to see a bear or a wolf dart out from the doorways ; and in strolling into the country, they walk very cautiously along, lest they should inadvertently tread upon and crush some poor partridge, hare, or turkey. In the present day, bears and wolves are only to be found in the more unsettled neighbourhoods, and it is very seldom that they are seen, unless regularly hunted after ; and sometimes the hunters will be out several days before they can find a bear ; and wolves are still more difficult to come at. Both these occasionally commit depredations in the farm yards bordering on the woods ; and the Legislature in consequence established a premium or head money, payable for the head of each wolf. Formerly it was only necessary to take the scalp (i. e., the skin from the top of the head, and the ears) to a magistrate, who granted a certificate entitling the applicant to the premium. But this was found to lead to abuses, as some of the Indians were in the habit of breeding a cross between the wolf and their own curs, which when sufficiently old were killed for the sake of the premium; and many instances have occurred of foxes' scalps being substituted by white settlers for those of young wolves. A new regulation was consequently made, and the party claiming the premium was compelled to present the whole head. The beaver is now seldom found within reach of the white settlements; and the panther, lynx and wild cat have emigrated far to the north. Foxes, both silver grey, cross and red, raccoons, otters, fishers, martens, minks and muskrats, still remain in diminished numbers, and large quantities of fur are still annually exported.

Of the game—deer have become gradually destroyed, and but few comparatively now remain. In some localities, as in the Western District, they were tolerably plentiful till the winter of 1842-3, when a numerous band of Pottawattamie Indians came to the province from the United States. These were noted hunters, and the winter being favourable for the pursuit, immense numbers of the deer were slaughtered. The Indians do not generally kill more than they want for use; but this roving band appeared to hunt merely for the sake of destroying, as many a deer was left where it fell to be devoured by the wolves. In Canada, large numbers of deer are killed, at what are called "deer lies;" these are wet swampy places, the water of which is strongly impregnated with salt, and which places the deer are in the habit of visiting at night, during certain seasons of the year. In order to get within shot, the Indians usually build up a kind of platform in the branches of a neighbouring tree, and watch there, rifle in hand, for the arrival of the deer, whose doom is soon sealed. Occasionally the deer, when hunted, will take to the lakes, and swim out sometimes more than a mile; the hunters generally follow in canoes or skiffs, and a desperate water fight ensues, which usually ends in the destruction of the poor quadruped. Previous to the winter of 1842, wild turkeys were also plentiful in the Western and London Districts; but the severity of that winter, and the great depth of snow, caused them to be completely starved out of the woods; and immense numbers were killed in the farm yards, whither they had ventured in search of food. This was complete murder, as most of them were little better than skin and bone. Had they been fed and taken care of during the winter, and allowed to escape in the spring, the breed would have been effectually preserved; whereas in consequence of the wholesale destruction practised amongst them, not a single turkey was met with during the following year. Last year, two or three flocks were seen, therefore there are still hopes of their continuing to exist in the province. In particular localities, and at certain seasons of the year, the partridge or pheasant, for by both names is it known, (which is in reality a kind of grouse), is tolerably plentiful in the woods. Woodcocks and snipes are not so numerous, but may occasionally be met with. There is also a species of hare, which turns white in the winter. Pigeons are very plentiful in the spring and autumn, and are killed by hundreds. Of ducks there are many varieties, some of them are very beautiful; they are excellent eating, and being found in great numbers, particularly about the marshy parts of the lakes and rivers, afford excellent sport. Wild swans are occasionally seen, and wild geese very commonly. Amongst the smaller animals the squirrels must not be omitted, as they are in great numbers, and form the principal game of Canada: of these there are four varieties, the black squirrel, the largest and most numerous; the grey squirrel, which is seldom met with; the red squirrel, and the ground squirrel or chipmunk: these when properly cooked are excellent eating, and most persons prefer them to pigeons.

For the purpose of preserving the game of the province, and in order to endeavour to prevent its utter destruction, a bill was lately brought into parliament by Colonel Prince (himself a keen sportsman), the enactments of which are as follows :

“That no person or persons shall, within this province, from and after the passing of this act, hunt, shoot, take, kill or destroy any wild swan, wild goose, wild duck, teal, widgeon or snipe, between the tenth day of May, and the fifteenth day of August, in any year.

“That no person shall hereafter trap or set traps, nets or snares for any grouse or quail, or kill, or hunt, or go in quest after the same at night, within this province.

“That if any person shall hunt, shoot, take, kill or destroy any wild swan, wild goose, wild duck, teal, widgeon or snipe between the tenth day of May, and the fifteenth day of August in any year, or shall sell, offer for sale, buy, receive, or have in his or her possession, any of the above mentioned birds, between those periods, (such birds having been taken or killed after the said tenth day of May, the proof to the contrary whereof shall be upon the party charged,) or if any person shall trap or set traps, nets or snares, for any grouse or quail, or shall kill or hunt, or go in quest after the same at night, (that is to say, between sunset and sunrise,) on any such person being convicted of any or either of the said offences, before a justice of the peace, upon the oath or affirmation of one or more credible witness or witnesses, (which oath or affirmation the justice is hereby authorized to administer,) or upon view had of the offence by the said justice himself, shall pay a fine or penalty not exceeding five pounds, nor less than five shillings, current money of this province, together with the costs and charges attending the conviction.”

It is to be feared, however, that no enactment of the kind will have much effect in preserving the game, as its provisions cannot be extended to the Indians, who are the principal hunters in the province; few other persons having much time or inclination for the sport.

Among the smaller feathered tribe are many beautiful birds: the jay, which is about the size of the English jay, but the whole of whose plumage is blue, and beautifully marked; several varieties of woodpecker, the largest of which is called the “cock of the woods,” a bird nearly the size of a rook, with black plumage, and a tuft of scarlet feathers on his head; a smaller one, with the body and wings black and white, the head and neck of a glossy black shaded with green, and a crimson spot on the top of the head; another, about the same size, spotted over with black and white, with one or two other varieties. The scarlet tanager, a scarlet bird with black wings, and a very sweet note; the bluebird, nearly as large as a blackbird, of a most beautiful blue, with a red breast; the indigo bird, a smaller bird, of a deeper blue; three varieties of blackbirds, one of which has scarlet shoulders; the American canary, or flax-bird, a bird much resembling the canary both in plumage and note, the only difference in the former being that the wings are black, and there is also a patch of black feathers on the top of the head. The robin, a bird something resembling the English robin in appearance, but more than double the size; the meadow lark, (a different bird to the English sky lark); the thrush; the kingfisher; the whippoorwill; the sandpiper; several varieties of fly catchers, and tree creepers; the swallow; two varieties of plover; the curlew; two species of humming birds, one of which is of a golden green, and the other has a crimson throat; with many other species, some of which are equally handsome. Some of these birds, however, only spend the summer with us, coming in the early spring, and migrating to the south in the autumn. Besides these, we have the bald-headed eagle, a noble bird; the kite; the large fishing hawk; the sparrow hawk; the large horned owl, and two or three smaller varieties; the heron, the bittern and the crow.

In the lakes and rivers, the principal fish are the sturgeon, which is frequently taken of from eighty to a hundred pounds weight; the lake or salmon trout, which grows to the size of from ten to forty pounds; the whitefish, (the most delicious fish in the lakes), and herrings; of these three many thousand barrels are annually taken and salted, a large portion of which is exported to the United States. There are also pike, of large size; pickerel; three varieties of bass; maskelonge, a magnificent fish; cat-fish; suckers; perch; and occasionally eels; and in most of the rivers and mill streams may be found the speckled trout. In the St. Lawrence, and rivers running into Lake Ontario, large quantities of fine salmon have formerly been taken during the migration of the fish in the spring and autumn. In the river Credit, in particular, a waggon load has frequently been taken by two or three persons in one night; but for the last two or three seasons the fish have almost deserted the streams running into Lake Ontario, the reason of which is supposed to be, the great number of dams erected across them, for the purpose of securing a supply of water for the grist and saw mills, which have much increased in number within a few years, and the immense quantity of saw-dust which is consequently constantly floating down them. It being considered desirable to preserve the salmon if possible, and prevent their being altogether exterminated or driven from the lake, an act was passed, which provides as follows:

“That from and after the passing of this act, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time between the tenth day of September in any year, and the first day of March in the succeeding year, to take, catch or kill any salmon or salmon fry, in any manner whatsoever.

“That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons at any time to take, catch or kill in any manner, in any district in Upper Canada, any salmon or salmon fry nearer the mouth of any of the rivers or creeks emptying into Lake Ontario or the Bay of Quinte, than two hundred yards, or within two hundred yards up from the mouth of any such river or creek as aforesaid; Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the taking of salmon with a seine or net at any place along the shores of Lake Ontario between the first day of February and the first day of August.

“That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to take, catch or kill, or to attempt to take, catch or kill any fish whatsoever, in any river or creek within Upper Canada, by torch or fire light within one hundred yards of any mill which may now or hereafter be erected on any such river or creek as aforesaid.

“That from and after the passing of this act, it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to buy, receive or have in his or their possession, under any pretence whatever, any salmon taken or caught during the period in which persons are hereby prohibited from taking or attempting to take or catch salmon within Upper Canada; and the proof that any salmon was not so taken or caught, shall lie on the person or persons in whose possession any such salmon shall be found.

“That if any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence against this act, before any one or more of her Majesty's justices of the peace within the district in which the offence shall have been committed, upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, such person or persons shall upon conviction, as aforesaid, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding ten pounds, nor less than five shillings, for the first offence, at the discretion of the justice or justices before whom such conviction shall be had, with all reasonable costs both before and after conviction; and for every subsequent offence of a like nature, the sum of five pounds, with costs as aforesaid; and upon any such conviction, it shall be lawful for the said justice or justices before whom such conviction shall have been made, to issue his or their warrant of distress against the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders.”

Two varieties of turtle are plentiful in the rivers and ponds—the common and the snapping turtle. The North American porcupine should not be forgotten, it is considerably smaller than the South American porcupine, and the quills are both shorter and more slender; they are naturally of an opaque white; and the Indians dye them of many beautiful colours, and use them extensively in ornamental work.

Snakes are numerous; but venomous kinds are not so plentiful as in the country more to the south (in the United States); of the latter are the rattlesnake, adder; and the copper-head is also said to exist. The water-mocassin is also said to be venomous. Those which are harmless consist of the large black snake, the small brown snake, and the garter snakes. Great numbers of the snakes are destroyed by the large hawks, which seem to consider them a very delicious morsel. Frogs (or Canadian nightingales) exist in great numbers in the ponds and ditches. Wild bees are also numerous: they make their comb in a hollow tree, and occasionally a tree (called a bee tree) is felled, in the hollow of which will be found two or three hundred weight of honey.

Of entomological specimens many beautiful varieties are to be met with, and mosquitoes are apt to form an early and sometimes rather too intimate an acquaintance with the newly arrived emigrant.

Minerals, and those of the most valuable kinds, are very abundant in the province. Iron ore of the richest description (which is said to produce iron equal to the Swedish) exists in the townships of Madoc and Marmor, in the Victoria District; in Bathurst, in the Bathurst District, and in other places; and bog iron ore is found in great plenty in many places, and is used extensively for making stoves and other castings. Silver, tin and lead are known to exist in various parts of the Province, beautiful specimens being frequently seen in the possession of the Indians; but the exact locality of the mines is not known, and the Indians are not willing to discover them. Copper has lately been discovered on the Canadian side of Lake Superior, and gold is also said to have been found. Marble of many beautiful varieties—pure white, green and yellow striped, spotted black and white, grey and black—exists in great plenty in the Eastern, Bathurst, Johnstown, Midland and Victoria districts, and also on Lake Huron. Lithographic stone in the townships of Marmor and Rama: freestone, limestone and granite are also abundant. Gypsum (or plaster of Paris) is also found in large quantities on the Grand River and other parts. And in various parts of the province salt has been made from brine springs; the water, however, has not generally been found sufficiently impregnated with salt to make the operation profitable.

DIVISIONS AND EXTENT OF THE UPPER PROVINCE:

ITS PROGRESS AND IMPROVEMENTS; RESOURCES; TRADE AND AGRICULTURE; EDUCATION; ADVICE TO EMIGRANTS, &c.

Canada West commences about twenty miles above the confluence of the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa Rivers; and the settled portion extends towards the west and south-west as far as Lake Huron, the River St. Clair, Lake St. Clair, and the Detroit River; and on the south it is bounded by the River St. Lawrence, Lake Ontario, the Niagara River, and Lake Erie. From the dividing line between Upper and Lower Canada to the Detroit River, the distance is about 500 miles in a straight line.

Canada is generally described as a flat country; but it is only called so by those who have travelled over very little of it. Most persons who have written descriptions of the country have only travelled along the regular stage roads (which are always carried over as much level ground as possible), and have seen very little of the interior of the country. The surface of the greater portion of the Upper Province is rolling; and there are many portions that are very hilly. A range of hills or ridges, that may almost be termed mountains, runs through the townships of Albion and Caledon, and on to Lake Huron, terminating in the Blue Mountains on the Georgian Bay: one of these mountains is said to be about 2000 feet above the level of the lake. By looking at the map of the country, and noticing the sources and the courses of the streams, it is easy to form a tolerably correct judgment of the relative height of the land. Thus it will be seen that the ridge of land running through the townships north of Toronto must be considerably above Lake Ontario; as the rivers taking their rise in it, and which flow into Lake Simcoe, after passing down the falls of the Severn, through the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron, the rapids of the River St. Clair, Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie, the rapids and the Falls of the Niagara River, enter Lake Ontario; and, after performing a circuit of nearly 800 miles, pass down within from twenty to thirty miles of their source.

The following is the quantity of land surveyed in Upper Canada, and the manner in which it has been disposed of; together with the estimated quantity still remaining unsurveyed:—

	Acres.

Land remaining on hand	1,500,000
Unsurveyed Lands in Upper Canada	13,592,320

Of the unsurveyed land 9,119,260 acres are supposed to be of a sufficiently good quality for cultivation; and 4,472,960 acres bad land, unfit for cultivation.

Canada West is divided into twenty districts, which are again subdivided into counties, ridings and townships. The districts vary in size, as do also the townships; the Western District containing twenty-nine townships, and the Prince Edward District only six. As the large districts become settled up, and contain a sufficient population to form two districts out of one, they are generally divided; thus the Colborne District was formed from the Newcastle, the Simcoe from the Home, and the Huron from the London. Some townships contain as many as 90,000 acres, and others not more than 20,000. Most of the townships are laid out in square blocks, but some of them are divided in a manner that defies description—leading one to form the conclusion that the original surveyors seldom commenced their work until after dinner. The townships are divided into concessions, which are generally supposed to run north and south, or east and west; but these vary very much according to circumstances. When a river runs through or bounds a township, the front lots are always laid out to face the river, no matter in what direction its course may lie. The concessions are again subdivided into lots of 200 acres each, and half lots of 100 acres.

About half the surveyed lands of Upper Canada has been purchased from the Indian tribes since the year 1818; the dates and quantities of which, together with the remuneration received by the Indians for them, are shown in the annexed statement.

Writers on Canada and the United States, who take a very superficial view of the subject, are apt to institute a very unfair comparison between the two countries, and always draw a conclusion unfavourable to Canada. In the United States every thing is said to be bustle and activity, progress and improvement; whilst the contrary is said to be the case in Canada. If this were really so, no one need be surprised when he takes into consideration the immense sums that have been borrowed from England, for the purpose of constructing the public works in the United States; which works may be said to have cost them nothing, as but little of the principal, and not much more of the interest has been paid. If we could get the cash on as easy terms in Canada, we should have no difficulty in "going a-head" quite as fast. But has Canada really been standing still all these years, while the States have been making such progress? Let us look at the facts and see. Within the last twenty-five years the Rideau Canal, the Welland Canal, and the St. Lawrence Canals, some of the most magnificent and important undertakings in the world, have been commenced and completed. In the year 1799, the Home District only contained 224 inhabitants; and in 1845, the City of Toronto alone contained 19,756. Twenty years ago, Hamilton, London, Bytown, and Cobourg, scarcely had an existence; now they are flourishing towns, containing handsome houses and public buildings; and their outskirts are studded with elegant villas. About forty years since, the first settlers entered the Gore and Wellington Districts (then united in one), at that time a mere wilderness; now they contain some of the finest farms in the Province. Forty years ago there was a post established from Niagara to Amherstburg once in six months, which was carried by a man on foot; after a time this was increased to four times a year; then once a-month, afterwards every week; till at length letters reach Amherstburg every day, with the exception of Wednesday; which omission is caused by the post not leaving Toronto on Sunday. In the year 1796, Toronto is described by the Due de Rochefoucauld as being a mere swamp, containing only a fort and twelve log huts, and without a single settlement within a hundred miles of it; now the three great thoroughfares—the western, the northern, and the Kingston roads—are each planked or macadamised for about twenty miles; and for the same distance nearly every lot fronting on the roads is taken up, settled, and under cultivation. Three years ago, the voyage from Montreal to Kingston, by the Rideau Canal, occupied five or six days; now, by the St. Lawrence, the journey may be performed in twenty-eight hours, and from Kingston to Montreal in twenty-four hours.

As a proof that improvements have not been going on so very slowly, the following sums have been expended on the public works at present in progress, or lately finished, up to the first of January, 1846:—

Besides large sums expended on the works in Lower Canada.

Canada is also said to be a poor country; no one could travel over it and long retain that impression. The beauty and substantial nature of the public buildings—the handsome banks, stores, and elegant mansions—the beauty and superior excellence of the steamboats—the mills and rapidly increasing manufactories—the extensive and well cultivated farms, are all sufficient evidences of her wealth. In 1844 there were in the Upper Province 2,017,115 acres of land under cultivation; 175,604 milch cows; 139,584 oxen and other horned cattle over two years old; and the ratable property in the province amounted to £7,390,345. But these, it should be remembered, were only the numbers and amount returned to the assessors; and, as few persons ever return anything like the whole amount of their property, at least five-and-twenty per cent. may fairly be added to this amount; and the only articles of property assessed consist of land cultivated and uncultivated, houses, water grist and saw mills (steam mills are not assessed), merchants' shops, store-houses, horses, milch-cows, cattle over two years old, distilleries, and pleasure waggons; so that there is a vast amount of property of which no account whatever is taken. Land under cultivation is rated at £1, and uncultivated land at 4s. currency per acre, which is much under its real value, as many farms in the province could not be purchased at £10 or £12 per acre; and in some situations from $10 to $15 per acre is asked for wild land.

With regard to the population it is difficult to arrive at a true statement; with the exception of two or three districts, no census has been taken since that of 1842, which in many districts was taken in so careless a manner that but little dependence was to be placed upon it. However, the fault rested more with those who planned than with those who had to carry out the task. Enormous sheets of paper containing 121 columns were given out to be filled up, some items of which, in the first place, were very inquisitorial, and many of the people were not inclined to give the information required; many of them also believing that the object in collecting the returns was for the purpose of imposing additional taxes upon them, wilfully made false statements; and, in the second place, from the nature and size of the sheet to be filled up, no man of common intelligence could be supposed to avoid occasionally inserting an item in a wrong column.

To give anything like a correct account of the quantity of produce of various kinds—wheat, flour, pork, beef, &c.—raised and exported, would be under the present order of things absolutely impossible, as no entry is made of articles exported. It is most extraordinary that no provision is made by the provincial government for collecting some account of the grain and other farming produce exported from the province, in order that its capabilities and progress might be made public and known to the world. At present, except in some locality where the produce shipped is liable to harbour dues, there is no possibility of arriving at a knowledge of the exports except from the shipping merchants. A statement has lately been published by the House of Assembly of certain returns made to it, which contains very little real information on the subject; thirteen pages, or about half the pamphlet being taken up with imports at the little port of St. Johns. In this return the exports of wheat and flour from Montreal and Quebec in 1844 are stated at—Flour, 415,467 barrels; and wheat, 282,183 bushels. Now, as the quantity of flour and wheat that passed through the Welland Canal, the Desjardins Canal, with that shipped from Hamilton, alone amounted to—of the former, 448,958 barrels; and of the latter, 2,141,022 bushels; it is manifest that this amount must be incorrect; or what becomes of the immense quantity of both wheat and flour shipped from the various ports along the coast of Lake Ontario, including Wellington Square, Oakville, Port Credit, the Humber, Toronto, Windsor Bay, Oshawa, Bond Head, Brighton, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Trent, Belleville, the Prince Edward District, and the Johnstown District? unless the whole of this large quantity is required for the consumption of the inhabitants of Lower Canada, which will hardly be pretended. Large quantities of barrelled beef and pork, butter, peas, pot and pearl ashes, furs, wool, lumber and staves are exported; the aggregate value of which, if its amount could be ascertained, must be enormous.

In consequence of the suicidal policy of many of the importing merchants in Montreal, and the forwarders, the former in demanding too large profits, and the latter in making enormous charges for freight, the imports of many heavy articles from Great Britain are falling off, particularly of heavy groceries, such as tea, coffee, sugar, spices, &c.; the western merchants finding that they can go to New York and make their purchases (even paying the additional duties upon the articles on account of their being foreign goods), at a greater advantage than they can buy them in Montreal. This has been particularly the case since the diminution of the duty upon tea imported from the United States; thus, in 1842 the quantity of tea imported into Quebec and Montreal amounted to 1,380,940 lbs., and in 1845 it had fallen off to 770,615 lbs. In 1844 the number of vessels employed on the lakes and rivers above Quebec amounted to 86 steamboats, whose aggregate tonnage amounted to 12,808 tons; and 794 sailing vessels, barges, &c., the tonnage of which was 72,842 tons; and the

For many years the agriculture of the province generally was at a very low standard; but within the last few years it has begun to make great advancements, and is beginning to keep pace with the improvements introduced into England and Scotland. The emigration into the country of scientific agriculturists, with the establishment of agricultural societies, have been mainly instrumental in producing this great change; stock of a different and better description has been imported, and much land that was previously considered by the old proprietors worn out, has been improved and brought back, by means of judicious treatment, to its old capabilities.

In order to give an impetus to the progress of improvement in agriculture, and for the encouragement of agricultural societies in Upper Canada, an act was passed, which provides—

“That when any agricultural society, for the purpose of importing any valuable stock, or whatever else might conduce to the improvement of agriculture, shall be constituted in any district in Upper Canada, and shall make it appear, by certificate under the hand of the treasurer of such district society, that the sum of not less than £25 has been actually subscribed and paid to the said treasurer by the several agricultural societies of such district, the president of the said society shall make application, enclosing the said certificate to the governor, lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government in this province, for and in support of the said society, it shall and may be lawful for the governor, lieutenant-governor, or person administering the government in this province, to issue his warrant to the receiver general in favour of the treasurer of the said society for treble the amount that shall have been paid or subscribed in such district as aforesaid: Provided always, that the annual sum to be granted to each district shall not exceed the sum of £250 currency.

“That in the event of there being county, riding, or township agricultural societies established, there shall not be more than one county or district society in each county or riding of any district within this province, and a proportion of the district bounty shall and may be granted to each county, riding or township agricultural society, and paid to them by the district society in proportion to the money that each county, riding or township agricultural society shall have subscribed: Provided nevertheless, that the whole sum granted to the district and county societies together shall not exceed the sum of £250 in each year; that, in the event of more than £50 being subscribed by the several societies in any district, the said grant of £250 shall be divided to each society in due proportion according to the amount of their subscriptions respectively.

“That each agricultural society shall and may elect such officers and make such by-laws for their guidance as to them shall seem best for promoting the interests of agriculture, according to the true intent and meaning of this act.

“That the treasurer's account of the receipts and expenditure of the preceding year shall, after the first year, always accompany the application for grants in aid of the said agricultural societies.

“That if the treasurer of any township society shall on or before the first day of July in each and every year, pay any sum of money into the hands of the treasurer of the district or county societies, he shall be entitled to receive the same again so soon as the legislative grant shall have been received, with a portion of the legislative grant equal to the amount so paid, or in proportion to what shall fall to their share upon an equal division being made, in proportion to the sums paid by the several societies in the district or county.

“That the secretary of each society shall annually transmit to the three branches of the Legislature, within fifteen days after the opening of each session of the provincial parliament, a report of its proceedings, showing the amount of the subscriptions received in the course of the year, and the amount received out of the public chest, the expenses of the society, the names of the persons to whom it shall have granted premiums, the objects for which such premiums were obtained, and all such other observations and information as he shall deem likely to tend to the improvement of agriculture.”

Every district now has its agricultural society, and premiums are given for the best articles of live or dead stock exhibited at the annual show; and at some of these agricultural meetings stock is occasionally exhibited which would be no disgrace to the great cattle show at Smithfield. In many districts there are also branch societies in connection with the district society.

For the purposes of education a district or grammar school is established in each district town, the master of which receives an annual grant of £100 from the government. In addition to which each township is divided into school districts, the number varying according to the size of the township and the amount of the population. Each school district has a school house erected in it, and the schoolmaster receives from the district (in addition to what he is paid by the pupils) a certain sum per quarter in proportion to the number of his scholars. The schools in each district are under the general superintendence of a district superintendent. For the support of these schools a small tax is levied upon the inhabitants.

It is most extraordinary, so long as Canada has been settled, that its great natural advantages should still be so little known; that so many persons who are either compelled by necessity to emigrate, or who do so from choice, should continue to pass it by and go on to the west of the United States, or otherwise emigrate to the more distant colonies of the Cape, New South Wales, or New Zealand; and yet such is the case. Much of the emigration to the United States, however, is caused by the writings of English authors. Every now and then a traveller starts for the United States with a pocket full of money, travels over them at that season of the year when the appearance of the country is most captivating, becomes enchanted with the beauty of its scenery, the length of the summer, the ease with which an existence may be obtained; and straightways returns home and writes a book on the subject, painting everything couleur de rose. "One fool makes many;" and many persons whose judgments are led astray by the fascinating descriptions of travellers, emigrate there; and it is not till too late, when the property they took with them has been all expended, and their constitutions ruined, that they find out their mistake; but unfortunately they discover it too late, for they are left without the means of removing. Each state in its turn has been an el dorado, a perfect paradise. Thirty years ago it was Ohio and Indiana, then Illinois, then Michigan and Missouri; within the last five or six years, Wisconsin and Iowa; and now the current is beginning to set in strongly towards Oregon and California.

Birkbeck's "Letters from Illinois," published about twenty-seven years ago, induced many families of respectability to emigrate to the valley of the Wabash, who have since bitterly cursed his folly and their own. Many of them took out large sums of money, which they invested in land, or deposited in United States' banks; and many of them have of course lost their all; and Birkbeck's own family are scattered to the four winds of heaven. Birkbeck himself, according to his own account, used to keep his carriage in England. He took out with him to Illinois £5000 or £6000; and one of his sons, previous to his death, was actually earning a livelihood by working in a brick-field. Stewart again, some years since, followed the example of Birkbeck, and wrote very flattering accounts of the south-west, and with the same results; but he himself was not simple enough to remain there.

In what respects will the advocates of emigration to the United States pretend to say that any portion of that country is superior to Canada. Is it in the climate? A tree may be judged of by its fruits, and very many of the native Canadians, in point of robust appearance and complexion, might be taken for English emigrants. Will any one venture to make the same assertion respecting a native of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, or Missouri? And of what avail is it that the climate will grow cotton and tobacco, if the settler neither has the strength to cultivate them, nor a market in which to dispose of them, when grown? In the winter and spring of 1841-2, pork (a staple article of the State,) was selling in Illinois, at from a dollar to a dollar and a half per 100 lbs.: and at that price it was almost impossible to obtain cash for it; wheat at a quarter dollar, and indian corn from five to ten cents per bushel; butter, fifteen and sixteen pounds for a dollar; fowls, half a dollar per dozen; and other farming produce in proportion. At such prices farming could not be very profitable. A man certainly might live cheaply, and cram himself with bacon and corn bread till he brought on bilious fever; but he could make nothing of what he raised. And a farmer having a fat ox, has even been known after killing it, to take from it the hide and tallow, and drag the carcase into the woods to be devoured by the wolves; finding from the small price the beef would fetch, that it was more profitable to do so than to sell the whole animal!

Is it from the nature of the government, that the States are so much more desirable as a place of residence—where the only law is mob law, and the bowie knife is the constant companion of the citizens, and is used even in the halls of legislature themselves? Or is New Zealand much to be preferred, where the settler in taking his morning ramble, to acquire an appetite for his breakfast, frequently receives a "settler" himself, and instead of returning to his morning's meal, is roasted for the breakfast of some native chief, and his interesting family. Canada, on the contrary, suffers under none of these disadvantages and annoyances. The government and constitution of the country are English; the laws are English; the climate is fine and healthy; the Indians are tolerably civilized, none of them at any rate are cannibals, and few of them are even thieves; and bowie knives are not "the fashion." The settler, unless he has been guilty of the folly of planting himself down beyond the bounds of civilization and of roads, may always command a fair price and cash for whatever he can raise—he need never be beyond the reach of medical attendance, churches, and schools—he can obtain as much land as he need wish to purchase, at a fair and moderate rate—he knows that whatever property he acquires is as secure as if he had it in England—his landed property, if he possesses any, is gradually increasing in value—and if he is only moderately careful and industrious, he need have no anxiety for the future—his sons, growing up in and with the country, and as they grow, acquiring a knowledge of the country and its customs, and the various modes of doing business in it, if steady, will have no difficulty in succeeding in any business they may select, or may be qualified for.

Much has been written on the subject of emigration, and many speculations entered into as to who are the proper persons to emigrate? The only answer that can be given to this question is—those who are obliged to do so. Let no person who is doing well at home, no matter what may be his profession or occupation, emigrate with the expectation of doing better,—let him not leave his home and travel over the world, in search of advantages which he may not find elsewhere. But those who are not doing well, who find it difficult to struggle against increasing competition, who fear the loss in business of what little property they possess, or who find it difficult with an increasing family to keep up appearances as they have been accustomed to do, and find it necessary to make a change—all these may safely emigrate, with a fair prospect of improving their condition. Persons of small, independent incomes may live cheaply in Canada, particularly in the country, and enjoy many comforts, and even luxuries, that were not within their reach at home. Retired military men do not generally make good settlers. They usually, when they leave the army, sell out, instead of retiring on half pay; and when they emigrate they are apt to squander their property in purchasing land and in building, till at length they come to a stand for want of the means to proceed, frequently with their buildings half-finished, from being planned on too large a scale; although, if they had been asked in the commencement how they intended to live when the ready money was expended, they would have been unable to give an intelligible answer. If they succeed in getting some government office, the emoluments of which are sufficient for their support, they will manage to get along very well; otherwise they will sink gradually lower and lower, and their children are apt to get into idle and dissipated habits. The idle and inactive life to which they have been accustomed while in the army, particularly during these "piping times of peace," totally incapacitates them for making good settlers in the backwoods. A loungee, unless independent, has no business in Canada. Naval officers, on the contrary, make settlers of a very different character. They have been accustomed, when on service, to a life of activity; and if they have been long on service, they have generally seen a great deal of the world—they have their half-pay to fall back on, which fortunately for them they cannot sell—and they generally make very excellent settlers. Lawyers are not wanted: Canada swarms with them; and they multiply in the province so fast, that the demand is not by any means equal to the supply. Medical men may find many openings in the country, where they will have no difficulty in making a tolerable living; but they will have to work hard for it, having frequently to ride fifteen, twenty-five, or even thirty miles to see a patient! And in the towns, the competition is as great as in England.

Weavers are generally supposed to be, from the nature of their previous occupation, unfitted to turn farmers in the backwoods. This is entirely a mistake. Although they may not for some time make good choppers, as no old-countryman does at first (and some never acquire the art), still they are very capable, as soon as they have got a little insight into the proper mode of managing and working a farm, of taking and cultivating cleared or partially cleared farms—which may always be obtained to rent, or farm on shares. A good proof of this occurred a short time since in the Western District, where two young men, (weavers from Paisley), took a farm on shares, on the River Thames; and before it had been in their occupation a year and a half, it was cleaner and in better condition than any farm within miles of them.

Mechanics of all kinds can always find employment at good pay; and at present, building is going on extensively—much of it in the towns of stone; and stone-cutters, particularly those capable of executing ornamental work, such as cornices, figures, heads, &c., are much in demand.

There are many kinds of establishments much wanted in the province, and large sums of money are annually sent to the States for work that might as well be executed in Canada. For instance, one or two engraving establishments, capable of executing maps of the largest class, are much wanted in Toronto. Within the last year, several large works have been sent from the province, through the impossibility of getting them executed in it. Amongst these are—Bouchette's large Map of Canada, seven feet by four; Rankin's large Map of the Niagara, Gore, and Wellington Districts; Billiard & Parrs' Map of the Western District; and I was compelled to lithograph the map for the Gazetteer, on account of the absolute impossibility of meeting with an engraver capable of executing the work, within reach. This is a branch of the arts much wanted in Canada. Maps are in great demand, and are difficult to procure, in consequence of the trouble of getting the plates engraved; it being necessary at present, with all large works, to get the plates engraved at New York, and also to get the impressions struck off there; which, from the distance, is both a great expense and inconvenience. But an establishment of this kind in Toronto should be capable, not only of engraving, but should also have every convenience for, and workmen capable of printing maps of the largest class; and should also bring out with them printing presses, copper, and every other article necessary for the art, as these things are not to be procured here. One or two extensive lithographic establishments are also much wanted. An establishment for printing in colours, embossed cards, &c., in the manner introduced in England within the last few years, for placards and showbills, would also succeed very well. With many other branches of the arts, of which it is impossible to give a catalogue.

Many persons emigrating lay out what spare cash they can collect together in any articles that they imagine will prove a good speculation in the country to which they are journeying, fancying that they are coming into the backwoods, where goods are scarcely procurable, and that any articles they can bring out, will command a large profit. They are not aware that business of every kind is carried on extensively in Canada, and that most articles are to be bought as cheap there as in England, with merely the addition of the expense of carriage; and as on many articles the duty is considerably lower in Canada than in England, they are to be purchased at a less price. One wholesale house alone, is understood to have imported goods during the season of 1844, to the amount of £120,000. Other parties, supposing that furniture must necessarily be expensive in a new country, bring out all the old lumber they can lay their hands on. Some even carry their folly to the extreme of carrying out with them their heavy kitchen tables and dressers, long school-room desks, &c.—(do they fancy timber is scarce in Canada?) and find, to their astonishment and vexation when they arrive at Toronto, or wherever may be their place of destination, that it would have cost them far less to purchase the articles where they intended to settle, than the mere expense of transport; and that it would have been much more to their advantage to have made a bonfire of their goods and chattels than to have brought them across the Atlantic. Common furniture of all kinds is remarkably cheap; and that of a superior kind is considerably lower in price than the same quality in England.

Emigrants coming out to Canada, usually commit some very great mistakes; these are, loitering about the large towns, purchasing land before they know its value, buying more land than they are able to cultivate properly, and entering into speculations they know nothing whatever about. We will take these in order as they stand; In the first place, an emigrant, coming out with perhaps a large family and small means, wishes to purchase land with the intention of farming, and of course wants it as cheap as he can procure it, at the same time it is an object with him to spend as little in looking for it as possible. He does not consider that by staying in a large town he defeats these objects, as his expenses in a large town are considerably higher than they would be in the country, and he is apt to be led insensibly into extravagancies, which in the country he would avoid. In a large town he cannot stay in a first-rate tavern for less than from a dollar and a half per day, while in the country he may board in a house equally respectable, with accommodation in every respect equal, and a good table, for from two and a half to three dollars per week; again, in a town he has not the opportunities of hearing of land to be purchased cheap; and land in the neighbourhood of large towns is always rated higher, than land of the same, or perhaps better quality, situated a few miles distant. No emigrant, unless he has plenty of money to spare, should stay a single day upon the road till he arrives at Toronto, unless he has previously made up his mind to settle in the Victoria, Newcastle or Colborne districts, (or has friends residing east of Toronto whom he wishes to visit), in which case he should make his way as quickly as possible to Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, or Peterborough. If he wishes to settle in the neighbourhood of Toronto, he should take up his quarters in a respectable tavern on Yonge Street, or Dundas Street, where by remaining quiet and looking about him, he will soon hear of something likely to suit him, and he may visit Lloydtown in the township of King, Markham in Markham, Newmarket in Whitechurch, or any other of the villages in the neighbourhood. Should he prefer going further northward, and feel inclined to take the pure bracing atmosphere of the Simcoe District as a compensation for its more lengthy winter, he may proceed to the Holland Landing, and from thence make his way either by the road, or across Lake Simcoe to Barrie or Orillia. If he wishes to go westward and settle in the Gore, Niagara, or Wellington districts, let him take his passage either to Hamilton or Niagara. From the former place he may make easy journies to Dundas, Brantford, Galt, Paris, and Caledonia, (all of which except the first are on the Grand River,) in the Gore District, and he may also visit the villages on the river below Caledonia; and to Guelph, Preston, Elora, and Fergus in the Wellington District; in all of which neighbourhoods he will be likely to hear of land to suit him. If he feels a desire to see the Niagara District, he may proceed direct to Niagara or Queenston, by steamboat from Toronto, or when at Hamilton he may visit the villages along the road from Hamilton to Niagara, and also along the Niagara River and the Welland Canal. Should he prefer the Talbot or Brock Districts he may proceed by stage from Hamilton to Caledonia, and from thence to Port Dover on Lake Erie, from whence he may visit Simcoe, Vittoria, and other villages in the neighbourhood. Should he find nothing to suit him there, he may retrace his steps to Hamilton or Brantford, and look over the Breech District, to do which he should make his head quarters at Woodstock, Beachville, or Ingersoll. Should he however, at starting, intend to proceed farther west, and settle either in the London or Western districts, he should not waste his time and means in wandering over that portion of the country where he has no intention of fixing himself, but proceed at once to London or Chatham. From London he may visit Delaware, St. Thomas, Port Stanley, Kilworth, Westminster, Wardsville, the settlements on the road to Chatham, on that to Port Sarnia, and on that to Goderich; in all of which localities he will have no difficulty in meeting with excellent land, either wild or partly cleared, at a moderate price. From Chatham he may extend his inquiries to the settlements on the banks of the Thames, he may look along Bear Creek, the townships bordering on Lake Erie, the River St. Clair, and the southern portion of Lake Huron; in every township of which he may purchase land of the finest quality, at a very low rate. To look over the latter portion of the district he should fix his quarters at Port Sarnia.

In the second place, no emigrant should purchase land till he has been sufficiently long in the country to know its value. A person purchasing land immediately on his arrival is certain to pay at least one-third more for it than he would after he has been in the country for some time. If he has capital, and can afford to remain idle for six months, let him establish himself at some respectable tavern in a village in that part of the country he thinks he would prefer residing in; he will there have an opportunity of looking about him, and seeing the quality of the land in the neighbourhood, and learning its relative value. By mixing among the farmers, he will get an insight into the mode of farming in the province, the cheapest method of clearing land, and the value of labour; all very essential things for him to know. And he will find after a time, when he has acquired all this knowledge, that the money he has expended has been well laid out, as in the subsequent purchase of his farm he will save considerably more than he has spent in looking about him. If he understands farming, but has no capital, or not sufficient to enable him to live for a time without employment, let him either rent a farm for a year (which he may readily do for a dollar per acre for the cleared portion of the land), or he will have no difficulty in obtaining a cleared farm to work on shares; that is, the owner of the land will find the whole or a portion of the stock and seed, and, by way of rent, take a share of the produce. In this case he can lose very little or nothing; he may live off the farm; and in a year or two he is certain to hear of some farm in his immediate vicinity which may either be purchased at a bargain (perhaps for half what it would have cost him had he purchased immediately on his arrival), or obtained on lease at a low rent. If he has no capital, or knows nothing of farming, let him engage himself to some farmer for a time, where he may learn everything connected with the business, and be paid something for his services besides. After staying on a farm for a year or two, and becoming capable of managing one himself, he will have no difficulty in procuring one to rent or farm on shares; and in course of time, if he is careful and industrious, he will be enabled to purchase one for himself. He will have acquired his knowledge and experience of the subject without any expense to himself, and will be the better able to take advantage of what he has learned.

In the third place, a farmer, who in England would consider that to farm well and profitably he ought to have a capital to start with of at least £4 or £5 for each acre of land he intended to cultivate, will emigrate with the remnant of his property, amounting to perhaps £400 or £500, or £600. This would enable him to take a farm in Canada, stock it well, and farm it well; to live comfortably, pay the rent, keep his produce till the state of the markets enabled him to sell it at a profit, and in the course of five or six years to save sufficient to purchase a good cleared farm, free from all incumbrances. But this will not suit him, the man who has been accustomed all his life to rent land, the moment he places his foot on American soil, becomes possessed with the mania for purchasing land; nothing will do but he must have a farm of his own—he must become a landed proprietor. The consequence is, that finding land easily acquired, he purchases a farm worth three, or four, or five times the amount of the whole of his capital; pays an instalment on it, and then has not sufficient cash left to stock his farm properly. He is consequently compelled to purchase live stock of an inferior quality, and insufficient in number—he is unable to employ labour on his farm, when it would be profitable for him to do so—he is obliged to go into debt to the stores, and consequently must part with his grain the moment it is off the ground, in order to satisfy the demands of his creditors, and must take whatever he can get for it,—and he has to struggle hard for years to provide the instalments on his land as they fall due. This is perfect folly, and he might have saved himself the toil and anxiety of all these years, and been in possession of a good farm much sooner, had he only been satisfied in the first instance to rent, instead of purchasing. No person should purchase more land than he is able to pay for; and, above all things, he should avoid purchasing land on long credits. Many persons again, with small capital, who know nothing whatever of farming or clearing land, immediately on their arrival, purchase a lot of wild land, looking merely at the cheap rate at which it is to be bought, without any consideration of what it is likely to cost them before the stumps are out. These generally find in the end that it would have been much better for them had they purchased land partially cleared. But it is exceedingly difficult to convince a newly arrived emigrant of this fact.

"A man convinced against his will,
Is of the same opinion still."

And so it proves. Many of them are not willing to profit by the experience of other people, but require to pay dearly for the lesson. A few acres well cultivated are more profitable, even in Canada, than a larger quantity half or badly cultivated.

The fourth and last, although not the least important part of our subject, relates to those persons who come out with a certain amount of capital which they wish to invest profitably in business. These immediately commence speculating in something which they do not understand—perhaps purchase some concern which the owner has found to be unprofitable, and is therefore glad to part with; and in a short time they are obliged in their turn to sell out, after having incurred a heavy loss. Emigrants may rest assured that those who have been in the country a few years, know much better what speculations will answer, than those who have been out only a few weeks, or at most months; and are not likely to part with any really profitable concern without receiving its full value for it; and a business that may afford a very good return to one accustomed to the mode of doing business in the province, may turn out to be a very losing concern in the hands of a stranger. In general, emigrants with capital who, have growing up sons, will find it far better to invest their capital in good securities, and live upon the interest, while they place their sons in some good houses of business; and in the course of a few years, when these sons have acquired a knowledge of the commercial affairs of the province, they will be enabled to realize handsome profits on the capital, which, if their fathers had speculated with, they would most assuredly, have lost.

With respect to those portions of the province in which it is desirable for the emigrant to purchase land, much will depend upon various circumstances; as, if he is either English, Irish, or Scotch, he will most likely prefer settling among his own countrymen. Something also will depend upon the amount of capital he has to invest. There is one point however, of great importance, that I should wish strongly to impress upon the newly-arrived emigrant in particular, (because no other is likely to fall into the mistake), and that is, let him on no account whatever, no matter what the price, or the apparent advantages held out to him may be, be induced to purchase land at a distance from good roads and a good market; as nothing tends so much to keep back the settler, and frequently to dishearten him, and prevent his getting on as fast as he otherwise would do, as that feeling of loneliness that frequently oppresses him, when he finds himself alone in the woods, and no neighbours within convenient reach. He is apt in such a case to be away from home more than is profitable either for himself or his farm. And there is no occasion for this, as in no district of the province need a man buy land at a greater distance than a mile from a cleared farm. By making proper inquiries the emigrant is always sure to hear of some one willing to sell within easy distance of a good market; and he may take this as a general rule, that one hundred acres within seven miles of a place where he can sell his produce at a fair price, and obtain cash for it, is worth more than four times the quantity, at twice or three times the distance; and at the end of ten or twelve years, he will generally find that the 100 acres has increased in value more than the 400. People in general have a great penchant for purchasing land either on a road or a river; and the difference in price on that account, is consequently very great; although frequently the land in the back lots will be of better quality than that in front.

To such an extreme is this carried, that land facing on a road will frequently be valued at twelve or fifteen dollars per acre, while that in the next concession (little more than a mile) back, may be purchased at from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 dollars. Land in Canada is valued, not according to its quality, but entirely according to its locality and other circumstances. Thus, if a few wealthy settlers fix themselves in any particular locality, and make considerable improvements, the neighbourhood becomes aristocratic, and land in the vicinity rises in value accordingly. Thus, farms in the neighbourhood of Woodstock have been sold at from \$30 to \$50 per acre; while farms equal in quality of soil, and superior as regards facility of getting to markets, may be purchased in the London and Western Districts for less than half the sum.

All lands in the possession of the Crown, with very few exceptions, are sold at 8s. currency per acre, which may be paid for either in cash or scrip. This scrip is usually to be purchased (and the emigrant, if a stranger, may ascertain where it is to be met with by inquiring of some respectable merchant or store-keeper) at a discount of twenty, twenty-five and sometimes thirty per cent. If he gets it at a reduction of twenty-five per cent., his land (supposing he purchases Crown lands) will only cost him 6s. 6y per acre, which is 3d. per acre less than the government price of land in the United States. The reader should particularly notice this fact, as great stress is laid by writers on the United States, upon the low price at which land is to be bought of the government there, while the Crown lands in Canada are really to be bought at a less price; and there are about 2,300,000 acres in Upper Canada alone, already surveyed to be disposed of at this price, exclusive of the clergy reserves. An agent appointed for the sale of these lands in each district, whose name will be found under the head of the district, and the quantity of land for sale in each township will be found under the head of the township.

For the guidance of emigrants, it may be as well to state the average value of land in each of the districts which they will be most likely to settle in—pre-mising that these are the prices at which the land is to be purchased of private individuals, and that frequently a farm may be obtained at a considerably lower rate. In the Victoria District, land near the front may generally be purchased at from four to ten dollars per acre for wild land, and for cultivated farms (including buildings) from twenty to thirty-five dollars per acre: and in the back townships at from one to four dollars for wild land, and from eight to twenty for cultivated. In the Newcastle District, in the first range of townships, wild land will be worth from five to ten dollars, and cultivated from twenty to thirty; and in the back townships, from two to five dollars for wild land, and from twelve to twenty-five for cultivated—some few farms in the neighbourhood of Port Hope and Cobourg, may be valued as high as forty or fifty dollars. In the Colborne District wild land in the neighbourhood of Peterborough will be worth from five to fifteen dollars, and cultivated from ten to thirty, according to situation and distance from the town; and wild land at a distance may be obtained at from one to three dollars. In the townships of Whitby, Pickering, Scarborough, Markham, Whiteluch, York, Vaughan, the front of King, Toronto and Chinguacousy, cleared farms will range from twenty to fifty dollars per acre, according to situation, &c., and wild land at from ten to twelve—with the exception of the townships of York, Toronto and Scarborough, where the wild land is valuable for the wood, on account of their vicinity to the City of Toronto. In the northern townships of the district wild land may be bought at from one to four dollars, and cleared at from ten to fifteen dollars; and the same prices will apply to the Simcoe District. In the Gore District, with the exception of the north of the townships of Nassagaweya and Esquesing, land will be generally rather high; wild land will range from six to fifteen dollars, and cleared farms from twenty-five to fifty dollars. In the Wellington District cleared farms in the townships of Guelph, Waterloo and Puslinch, will be worth from fifteen to forty dollars, and wild land from five to fifteen; and in the northern townships they will vary, according to their remoteness, from one to four dollars for wild, and from ten to twenty-five for cultivated. In the Niagara District wild land will vary from three to ten, and cultivated farms from ten to forty dollars per acre. In the Talbot District from two to six dollars for wild, and from eight to twenty-five for cleared land. In the Brock District, from four to eight dollars for wild land, and from twenty to fifty for cultivated. In the Huron District prices vary according to locality, with the exception of the two government townships (Ashfield and Wawanosh), where all the land (wild) is rated at 8s. currency. In the London District, in the neighbourhood of London, Delaware and Westminster, and along the road to Port Stanley, wild land will be worth from five to eight dollars, and cultivated from twenty to forty; in the more remote townships the price will be about half. Along the road from London to Chatham, and on the banks of the Thames, wild land may be purchased at from two to six dollars, and cleared farms at from ten to fifteen; and at one or two concessions back they are to be bought for half. In the back townships between the Thames and Lake Erie, and also in those on Bear Creek, land of fine quality may be purchased at from one to three dollars per acre. On the River St. Clair there is but little wild land, at least, close to the river, and that is worth ten dollars per acre, the wood being in demand for the steamboats. In the townships of Plympton and Warwick, wild land of the best quality is to be bought at from two to three dollars per acre.

By cleared farms is generally understood those which have from seventy to eighty acres cleared out of a hundred, and it is for such farms that these prices are calculated; and of course the price will always vary according to the quantity of land cleared and under cultivation and the value of the buildings. At the same time it must be borne in mind, that in every district there may be some farms in particular situations that would be held considerably higher.

All emigrants in want of information or employment on their arrival at Kingston, are directed to apply at the office of Mr. A. B. Hawke, chief emigrant agent for Canada West. The government agents whose names are hereunto annexed will also direct emigrants in want of work to places where they may find it; as well as furnish information as to the routes, distances, and rates of conveyance to those parts of the province to which settlers may be desirous of proceeding.

Emigrant Agents.—G. R. Burke, Bytown; W. J. McKay, Cobourg and Port Hope; E. McElderry, Toronto; J. H. Palmer, Hamilton; A. B. Hawke, junior, Port Stanley.

All indigent emigrants requiring medical assistance may obtain it gratis, on application to Dr. E. V. Cortlandt, Bytown; Dr. T. W. Robison, Kingston; General Hospital, Toronto; or Dr. W. G. Dickinson, Hamilton.

In order to guard against all misapprehension as to the assistance which the emigrant agents are authorised to grant, emigrants are distinctly informed, that the claims of the destitute who land in Canada during the current season only will be admitted, and that no able-bodied person, unless burthened with a helpless family, will be entitled to assistance in any form.
